Official Report of Chief Constable Fant.

COLUMBIA, February 6.—Special: Governor Tillman this evening received the official report of Chief Constable Fant on the Spartanburg killing, and he made public the following portions, giving the constables' side of the killing:

"It had been reported to me for the last two weeks by different parties that a crowd of men from Glassy Mountain had established themselves at a trestle, nine miles from this place, and were selling whiskey to anybody who would buy, openly defying the law and swearing that they would not be arrested, and that any officer who attempted it would bite the dust.

Having obtained sufficient evidence to convict these parties of selling whiskey, warrants were sworn out against five of them and placed in the hands of the sheriff. His deputy summoned me and my constables as a posse and we went where it was reported the whiskey was being sold, but found no one there. We met a party who informed us that he had just bought from them, at a house near by. He told us that the whiskey was not at the house, but if we would go to the house and give them the money one of the men would take a lantern, go to the swamp and get the whiskey. We got this man and two others to go back to the house and make another purchase. We secreted ourselves near the swamp where the whiskey was supposed to be. In a few minutes a man came toward us with a lamp, but on the opposite side of the swamp. He disappeared awhile and then started back toward the house. We followed, but could not cross the swamp. We then went up the swamp to the railroad above us, when we saw the lamp coming toward us. Dean, Massey and Jackson were ahead of me a few paces. They made a rush at the man. He ran and fired back at the officers. Dean and myself returned the fire. The man fell, crying for help and calling for Ballew. Ballew responded "Yes, I am coming," and he came firing.

There were not less than half a dozen firing on us left to be came.

I shot six times with my double barrel shot gun at the flashes of their guns. After the firing ceased we got a lantern at a house near by and went to look after the man who was wounded at the first of the fight. We could not find him his lantern with blood on it, denoting that the man was wounded.

Hearing hollering at a house near by we went up the path towards the noise and saw a man coming towards us with a pistol in each hand. We told him to drop his pistols. He lowered them to his side but kept the muzzles toward us and halted within twelve feet of us. We again told him to drop his pistols. He would not do so, but raised the one in his right hand and Massey shot him killing him instantly. He fell holding on to his pistols until Jackson took them from him. A. K.

Disaster to the Spartan Mill.

SPARTANBURG, February, 8.—At 6.20 this morning the large driving wheel at the Spartan Cotton Mill suddenly went to pieces and shattered the walls of the engine house and knocked in the roof. P. A. Lewis, engineer, was crushed by the roof. Noah Green, who worked about the engine room, had both bones in both legs fractured. The steam pipe was broken, but no damage was done to the engine or boilers. Geo. Poore, assistant engineer, was in the wreck, but escaped much hurt. It will probably be three or four weeks before another driving wheel can be made and put in place. Engineer Lewis is a Northern man and probably came from New York.

The engine house of the Spartan Mill will have to be rebuilt. Examination shows that no machinery is much damaged except the driving wheel. About half of the sections will have to be rebuilt. No satisfactory cause has been assigned for its bursting. Captain Montgomery thinks they will be ready to start again in less than three weeks.

A FIRE AT THE ENOREE FACTORY.

SPARTANBURG, Feb. 6.—Special: It is not only illicit liquor dealers that must suffer in this big county but upon the disaster to the Spartan mill is piled another for the Enoree Manufacturing Company. While President Coffin and Superintendent McGowan were at the Spartan Mill wreck sympathizing with every one, from President Montgomery down, they received a message announcing the startling fact that their big warehouse containing five thousand bales of cotton, was burning. They chartered a train and went to Enoree. Eager citizens have been waiting all the evening to hear the result of the fire. Reports are meagre. It is said that six hundred bales are more or less burned. It is not known whether the fire is under control or how it started. It is very likely that any loss will be fully protected.

The Farmer and the Newspaper Man.

Many men think that newspaper men are persistent dunners. By way of comparison let us suppose that a farmer raised 1,000 bushels of wheat a year and sells this to 1,000 persons in all parts of the country, a great portion of them saying, "I will hand you a dollar in a short time." The farmer does not want to be small and say all right. Soon the 1,000 bushels are gone, but he has nothing to show for it and then he realizes he has fooled away his whole crop, and its value to him is due in a thousand little dribbles consequently he is seriously embarrassed in his business, because his debtors each owing him a dollar, treat it as a small matter and think it would not help much. Continue this kind of business year in and year out, as the publisher does how long will he stand it? A moment's thought will convince any one that a publisher has cause for persistent dunning.

Be Careful of the Eyes.

Avoid reading when lying down. Sit with the back to the light, or so the light will come over the left shoulder when reading, sewing, or writing. When writing, should the light come from the right side, the shadow of the hand and pen or pencil falls on the paper, constantly shading the line of work and fatiguing the eye. Veils, especially spotted ones are injurious to the eyes; and, if veils must be worn they should be of the softest clearest net. The eyes should be rested five or ten minutes after each hour's reading. The study of music and German is hard on the eyes, and the eyes should be rested more frequently and longer at a time when engaged in these studies. Avoid facing the lamplight when studying. A bad stomach sometimes makes bad eyes. Attend to the digestion. Poor ventilation frequently weakens the eyes. When the eyes feel tired bathe them with soft water, hot or cold, whichever on trial proves more comfortable. The hot water generally proves more beneficial.

Flesh Eating and Ill Temper.

One deplorable result of meat eating, says Mrs. Ernest Hart in The Hospital, "is the ill temper which is said to be a chronic complaint in England. In less meat eating France urbanity is the rule; in fish and rice eating Japan harsh words are unknown and an exquisite politeness to one another prevails even among the children who play together in the street."—Phila. Record.—And yet in our conceit, western nations are sending missionaries to civilize the heathen Japanese and teach them how to behave. And teach them to slaughter their cows and chickens; drink fiery liquors and to use fire arms for the destruction of human and animal life.

Then these highly civilized nations boast of their civilizing work among the heathen nations.

It was an old New-England judge who interrupted a lawyer in the midst of a spread-eagle speech by saying: "Mr.———, I wish you would take a few feathers from the wing of your imagination and put them in the tail of your judgment."

A citizen of Anderson who was afflicted with grippe a short time ago, and several of his family were afflicted similarly effected prompt cures in each case by simply using asafoetida pills a little larger than a buckshot three times a day.—Anderson Journal.

Thomas B. Earle, Esq., has been appointed Coroner for Anderson County vice R. M. Wright resigned.
