I LOVE THE SEA.

BY MISS CATHARINE H. WATERMAN.

I love the sea,
The free sea free.
The roar of its mighty minstrelsy;
The foam of its waves,
That madly raves,
Is the dearest sight my heart craves.

With thee, my bark,
O'er the waters dark,
With the summer moon our course to mark;
How proud we ride,
O'er the dancing tide,
While the white foam laves thy heaving side.

We cut our way
Thro' the shining spray,
While the crowding billows round us lay:
And our shouts of glee,
Rung wild and free,
On the mighty waste of the boundless sea.

The mariner's dirge,
Is thy sounding surge,
As it sings his knell on the grave's dark verge;
And his last long sleep,
In the quiet deep,
Is as calm as when willows o'er him weep.

I love the sea,
The blue, the free,
And the roar of its mighty minstrelsy;
Where the wild waves roam,
In their caps of foam,
The mariner finds his chosen home.

Then spread thy wing,
Thou bounding thing,
And far o'er the waves like a sea gull spring;
Our trust on high,
In the smiling sky,
And we rove 'neath the light of a watching eye.

LICENSE LAW.—"The Ark"—At the present session of the Supreme Judicial Court in this city, evidence was brought before the grand jury to obtain an indictment for a violation of the license law.—It appeared that some person or persons had obtained a raft or scow, erected a shantee thereon, and moored the same in the Pawtucket River, where it was regularly furnished with "a great variety of choice liquors." Attached to the scow was a plat form which, when lowered, enabled persons from the shore to walk to the ark, as the float was designated, and the vessel was moored, so that this platform could be used on either side of the river, as profit or policy might dictate. On gaining it, there could be seen faucets variously marked, R. G. B. &c. from either of which, on being turned, gushed forth the beverage, its initials represented. This place of resort became very soon as popular as any watering place in the country; as its glasses were always ready, although no attendants were at hand. Those who partook of the refreshing stream, as a matter of course, left something as satisfaction for trouble, which by some legerdemain we could not comprehend, and therefore cannot describe, was taken possession of by some spirit unseen and unknown.

As the dividing line between Rhode Island and Massachusetts is at high water mark on the east side of the river, it will be perceived that customers from our sister state, by their platform being placed on their side, could be accommodated without violation to the Massachusetts laws. Not so, however, with the laws of Rhode Island; Against these laws there was an offence committed, but establishing the identity of the offender was a very difficult matter. Witnesses in abundance were produced, who testified they had drunk deep of the waters of the ark, but whom they obtained them of, they had neither desire or ability to say.

One person in Pawtucket testified that he furnished from seventy five to one hundred dollars worth of liquors per week; that he charged it to "the ark"—that he delivered it sometimes to one and sometimes to another, who were employed to do chores—and finally he identified one person who had at one time received it, against whom the jury returned a true bill, and whose trial will take place at the present term of the court.

It is surmised that, as none of the brood were preserved in the ancient, it was from this modern ark came the "striped pig," which has so recently been astonishing the natives of Boston.—Providence Jour.

A very spirited excitement is now prevailing in Massachusetts, and R. Island; it seems that the Legislatures of these States at the last Session passed a law forbidding the good people to drink any [illegible] or wines, in less quantities than 15 gallons, or what is the same, forbidding its sale without a license, in less quantities; the sovereign voters, are, however, determined not to submit to such wholesale guzzling, wishing, most probably to take it in smaller and more temperate allowances; they are moving every thing to have the law repealed at the next Session, so that they may buy and drink just as little as they please.

Western Carolinian.

"Not less than four "striped Pigs" were brought before Mr. Justice Wells last week, and fined, for violating the laws of the Commonwealth. One of these "poor shoats" has been shut up in the County "pig pen."—Northampton Courier.

"Striped Pig Party," is the name now applied in Massachusetts, to those who are opposed to the "1½ gallon" licence law of the State.

A cow belonging to Mr. Henry Kent of West Springfield, during 60 days, beginning in June last, has given 1346 quarts of milk! averaging 22½ quarts per day! Largest yield 14 quarts in the morning, in the evening 16!

Colic Mixture.

THE above is a never failing cure for that variety of colic, so distressing to Infants, and to which the most injurious anodyne substances are too commonly given. It is safe and soothing, and instead of producing costiveness, it usually operates gently on the bowels.

This remedy has now been used for several years, with that success and approbation, which quack medicines made to sell, cannot command. It is extensively used by the best physicians in the country, and to use the language of many a mother, is to them a charm. When it allays the pain and lulls the child to rest, it does not leave behind it those unpleasant symptoms, which Anodynes, Balsams, Drops, &c. generally produce. Ample directions accompany each vial; & testimonies of its efficacy (if required) can be produced from the most respectable citizens of Carolina and Georgia. For sale by

Dr. John Sappington's ANTI-FEVER PILLS,

Are offered to the public as a certain and effectual remedy for fevers of every description.

I AM of opinion that all fevers are a unity of disease from the mildest intermittent up to the highest grade of yellow fever, and that the different denominations of fevers are simply owing to some particular state of the atmosphere or to some peculiar condition of the system, and with slight variations, such as I have made, the treatment should be the same. I am also of opinion that this must be the prevailing theory of the day, or how is it that physicians treat fevers throughout with Calomel and a few other depletives.

Description and treatment of fevers, viz:—1st. Intermittent or Ague and Fever. 2dly. Bilious Fever. 3dly. Typhus or Nervous Fever, and all other fevers by whatever name they may be called.

1st. Of Intermittent or Fever and Ague. I consider all fevers of an intermittent character which cool once in twenty four hours, whether preceded by a chill or not, or whether the fever and chill rise and continue together, or if there be no chill at all. Sometimes fever of this character continues 24 or 48 hours without intermission, and sometimes it occurs only every third day. Nine tenths of the fevers of this state, and most other states of this union, partake more or less of this character, and in all their various appearances the treatment should be the same.—This medicine cures by correcting the bile, giving tone and energy to the stomach and bowels, and thereby communicating health and strength to the whole system. It is also possessed of such singular and admirable properties, that it does not sicken the stomach nor operate on the bowels as a purgative. It breaks the fever in from 24 to 48 hours, during which time the patient feels no sensible benefit from it, but finds himself suddenly well without being conscious of its mode of operation. There is no arsenic or any other article of a poisonous nature in this medicine. It is entirely harmless; women in any situation may take it with perfect safety, and if double the quantity herein recommended was taken, no bad effects would be produced by it.—The increased demand for this medicine, has induced me in future to prepare it only in the form of pills, as the transportation of vials is both inconvenient and unsafe. For grown persons or children who prefer taking it in a liquid form, it can be prepared conveniently by any person in the following manner pound twelve pills well, put the preparation into a vial, and pour two common sized table spoonfuls of whiskey or water to it—spirits of any kind are best. Any other quantity of the liquid may be prepared at the same time, by increasing or lessening the quantity of the medicine in the same proportion as described above.

Treatment.—If the patient prefers taking a puke or purge before he commences the use of this medicine, I have no objection, but it is rarely if ever necessary. He can drink cold water or make use of any kind of diet suitable for a sick person, without the least danger, or suffering the slightest inconvenience from it. A grown person will take for a dose a pill or common sized tea spoonful of the liquid every two hours, both day and night, until the disease is broken; children 8 or 10 years old will take 20 or 40 drops, and those three or four years old will take 15 or 20 drops, and infants 3 or 4 weeks old will take from 3 to 6 drops, repeated and continued as recommended for grown persons. But as persons are very subject to a relapse or return of this disease, whether they are cured in this or any other way, it would be well to continue taking three or four doses a day until the strength and complexion are restored, and particularly if the person has already had several relapses. One box will cure two persons of a common attack of ague and fever. Before the liquid is taken the vial should be well shaken.

2dly. Of Bilious Fever. This is a more obstinate and dangerous disease than intermittent, or days indisposition, previous to the onset of the disease, and frequently chill sensations for a day or two after. When this disease is properly formed it rarely yields to any treatment under 8 or 10 days, and sometimes much longer.

3dly. Of Typhus or Nervous Fever. This is still a much more obstinate and dangerous disease than bilious fever, and apparently more so from the commencement. It often continues fifteen or twenty days with scarcely any remission or intermission, with great prostration of body and depression of mind. It may be well to observe that Typhus fever is most common in the winter and spring, and Billious fever in the summer and fall. In the first stage of all fevers, it is common for the tongue to be covered with a whitish coat, and if the fever is not broken and runs it to the second stage, it is apt to assume a yellowish brown color, and in the third and last stage of fevers, (and particularly if they are of a high grade and malignant character) the tongue is apt to assume a dark brown color, of different degrees of moisture; sometimes it is exceedingly dry; in this stage of the disease the patient is often sensible of a hot or burning sensation in the stomach. The symptoms of these two diseases are so much alike in their first stage that physicians often differ as to their real character, nor does it matter materially, because the treatment of both should be pretty much the same, with this exception, that typhus fever does not require nor will it bear as much strong sickening medicine as bilious fever.

Treatment. In the first stage of the two last diseases, give a puke or one or two small doses of calomel or some other medicine that will operate upon the stomach and bowels. Under any circumstances I object to giving more strong medicine, and am decidedly of opinion that repeated doses of such operating medicines do more harm than good. After this operating on the stomach and bowels (and even without it) if several days have elapsed and my patient become weak, I commence with the pills and drops, and give a dose every three hours, that is eight doses in each twenty four hours, with a regular use of Virginia snake-root, or some other sweating tea, such as hyssop, sage or balm. Should the patient suffer much with pain in the head, back or elsewhere, give twenty or twenty-five drops of laudanum at night, if the grown person (children should take less or regulating with their ages) and should he become much debilitated from a continuation of the disease, and particularly if the hands and feet become cold, give a draught of toddy or wine every three or four hours, until he recovers; continue all the time to use the pills or drops as recommended. The diet should be light, and taken only a little at a time and often.

Bleeding is so seldom required in these diseases that it is scarcely necessary to mention it; if it ever is resorted to it should be in the early stage of them.

Blistering is sometimes useful and rarely if ever injurious; but it should be chiefly resorted to in the last stage, when there is delirium or lasting coldness in the extremities. In the treatment of either of these diseases, I would prefer the bowels to be in rather a costive than laxative condition. But should the bowels be too inactive, give broken doses of salts or oil, or open them with injections, and if they should be too laxative, give six or eight drops of laudanum two, three or four times a day, until the looseness is restrained. My experience in the treatment of yellow fever has not been very extensive, but it is neither more nor less than the highest grade of bilious fever, and should be treated pretty much in the same way.

JOHN SAPPINGTON,
Saline County, Missouri.

Price $1 50 per box.

Numberless certificates of this medicine, have been tendered, but I have thought fit to insert only the following from the Rev. Joel H. Haden, Register of the Land Office for the Spring Filled district, Mo., which seems to embrace the opinions of many in different sections of the country.

J. S.

Having travelled much over the states, both west and south, and having heard much said in favor of Dr. Sappington's fever pills, I do hereby certify that I believe there has never yet been any medicine offered to the public so efficacious in the cure of fevers as that which he has prepared. I have known many labouring under fever and ague, cured in the course of from 24 to 48 hours, and all cases of fever in which I have known it used it has never failed to effect a cure, so far as known to me, in a shorter time than any medicine I have ever known used. I do therefore recommend it to all persons labouring under fever, as the best remedy known to the public.

JOEL H. HADEN.

TEACHERS WANTED.

THE Principals of the Male and Female Schools at Greenwood, having determined to retire from their respective occupations at the close of the year, we propose to the consideration of Teachers generally, the charge of those Institutions the ensuing year, 1839. These schools will be limited to a certain number of students, and a Principal required for each one of them, viz: The Classical, the Female, the Male, English, and the Musical department of the Female school, a liberal salary will be given to all, and none need apply unless they are qualified in every respect, and can come well recommended. The Teacher for the Male English school, must be thoroughly acquainted with the sciences. We would invite those who may wish to make application, that we desire them to do so as early as possible, or previous to the 20th October next, at which time we expect to go into the election. A married gentleman, if such can be procured, would be preferred to take charge of the Female school, whose Lady may be a competent Assistant, particularly in the Musical department. Letters on the subject may be addressed to me or any of the Board of Trustees, directed Woodville P. O. S. C.

Improved Cotton Gins.

THE subscribers having established a COTTON GIN MANUFACTORY in the Town of Hamburg, S. C., on the improved system of Mr. Boatwright, beg leave to recommend their Gins to the public. They warrant their Gins to be equal if not superior to those of Mr. Boatwright, on account of an alteration, which, in their opinion, is a decided improvement: that is, instead of blocks of wood on the ribs, they have adopted the plan of making the ribs of their Gins entirely of steel and iron, which have proved by experience to be preferable.

Mr. Boatwright having declined the gin making business in Augusta, Mr. L. B. COBB, who conducted it there for him, being one of the partners in the concern, they will endeavor to give satisfaction to all who may favor them with their custom.

Abbeville Land for Sale.

THE Subscribers propose to sell a Tract of land in Abbeville District, containing about 500 acres; situate five miles above Cambridge on the Stage Road from Aiken to Greenville Court House.—This road is the great thoroughfare from the Mountains to Hamburg and Augusta. The improvements are tolerable—the frame of the dwelling house is large and well arranged and is susceptible of being made a convenient and comfortable building. There is on the tract an excellent orchard, about [illegible] for a residence immediately on the Greenville road, with an excellent spring of water convenient. It may be made a superior and profitable stand for the accommodation of travellers. There is a sufficiency of land open for the employment of eight or ten hands. Persons wishing to purchase, will do well promptly to examine the premises, or address the subscribers Ludi, Abbeville District, for further particulars.
