Splendid Program At the Chautauqua

FRANK DIXON DELIGHTED A LARGE AND ENTHUSIASTIC AUDIENCE

IN AFTERNOON

Concert by Savranoff Trio and Interpretative Reading by Wells Watson Ginn.

Again last night the concert prelude, of the Redpath Chautauqua was given by the Savranoff Trio, the three Russian musicians. Their program was beautifully selected and effectively arranged.

On account of the heavy downpour of rain on the tent, it was difficult to hear distinctly and to some extent marred the full pleasure of the concert. This, however, fortunately moderated, and when the speaker for the evening, Mr. Frank Dixon, was introduced, it was not so hard to hear him.

Mr. Dixon's subject was "Taking Stock of a Town." He treated his subject under four different heads—the town beautiful, the town headful, the town educational, and the town governmental. With a keen insight and unerring aim, he pointed out the failures and mistakes of the average town to achieve the best possible results.

But with the failures he suggested the remedies and in a clear, forcible manner showed what could be and had been accomplished along each of these lines, and proved the great economic value it would prove in the long run.

Mr. Dixon spoke for almost an hour and a half and proved himself a speaker of power and knowledge.

Afternoon Program. The Redpath Chautauqua presented two very delightful programs to its patrons yesterday afternoon, and in spite of the rain and mud, the attendance was splendid.

The thirty minutes concert was given by the Savranoff Trio, three gifted musicians, using the piano, violin, and cello. Their work was particularly fine and fully appreciated by the audience as shown by the frequent applause.

The other number on the program was interpretative reading, "The Man From Home," by Wells Watson Ginn.

In four acts, he gave this popular book by Booth Tarkington and his portrayal of each character was done with a fine distinction of traits and peculiarities that made each person real to his audience, and he held their close attention to the end.

PICNIC PLANNED FOR POOR CHILDREN AND MOTHERS OF CITY

SALVATION ARMY HOPES TO GIVE AN OUTING FOR THEM IN SUMMER

SUNDAY SERVICES

Of the Salvation Army are Growing in Interest—Last Sunday's Attendance Large.

A picnic for the poor children and mothers of the city is being planned by the local post of the Salvation Army, Ensign Belcher in charge. Mr. John W. Linley has kindly consented to the use of North Anderson park for the picnic, which Ensign Belcher hopes to be able to give either in the month of July or the month of August.

It is presumed that the picnic will be carried along lines similar to those followed in larger cities where picnics are given for the poor children and mothers of the community by the Salvation Army. Contributions are usually solicited from the public to defray the expenses of the outing, or the housewives of the community are called upon to furnish lunches for the occasion. As a rule the events are always successful and many hundreds of poor children are enabled to enjoy a delightful outing which they probably could not otherwise enjoy.

The regular Sunday afternoon meetings held by the Salvation Army are steadily growing in interest. Last Sunday five companies were present at the Sunday afternoon service.

Envoy Bellinger, who is assisting Ensign Bellinger in the work here, alone brought 40 children from the Anderson Mill village to the services. Each child bore a small flag in his or her hand, and the spectacle was an unusually impressive one.

There is no doubting the fact that the good people of Anderson will come nobly to the assistance of the Salvation Army in their efforts to afford a day's innocent pleasure for the less fortunate children and mothers of the community.

Expert Aid for Rural Women.

At the Conference for Education and Industries in the South at Chattanooga, April 27 to 30, the need of an expert to help the rural women was agreed upon. The county farm demonstrator is carrying help to the men; the girls' clubs organizer is doing the same for the girls; but the needs of the rural woman, so far, have not received the same recognition.

A trained woman worker, is needed to help the rural women by demonstrations in cooking and sewing, by advice as to home-nursing and sanitation, by counsel concerning garden and poultry, by suggestion concerning dressmaking and millinery, by help in purchasing and marketing the supplies of the home, by inspiration and information which shall give an impetus to the community life through the rural woman.

The women on the farm does receive some help from the help which comes to husband and daughter, but it is only fair that her own problems receive consideration and first-hand help.

George Fitch Apologizes for Writing a Love Story.

In the May American Magazine George Fitch, the famous Illinois humorous writer, begins a new two-part story entitled, "Cupid vs. Geography"—a humorously alarming prophecy. It is a love story and this is the way he introduces it:

"Once more my biennial feeling that I should write a love story is coming too strong to resist. I am beginning to believe again that in refraining from romance as a theme I am shirking my duty. A billion love stories are being enacted into matrimony during each generation, and the task of reporting them should be shared by all.

"Who am I that I should sit happily by, writing of sports and politics, moons, green cheese and automobiles, while a thousand panting authors are emerging from the honeyed mazes of the last happy chapters of a love tale, only to breathe heavily and begin doggedly on another collection of saccharine words?

"Yet I always fight against the call of duty. It is not because I feel the writing of love stories to be an unmanly sort of business, for it isn't. There's a man mixed up in every love story. But I don't like to write the soft, adhesive parts of the romance. They embarrass me and, besides, I am an old codger of nearly 40 and I don't know how the young people of this land do their love-making in these innovative days.

"I am helpless before the rush of time which has changed our customs in the last decade until we have to look at the morning bulletins to find out what is still improper or unconventional. I have tried for a year to spy upon a proposal in order to get material. I have failed. The old haunts are all abandoned. There are no more parlors. Conservatories are as rare as the dodo. Flaring arc lamps have put the moonlight out of business. Only the hired help lean upon the garden gates.

The man who gets up with a "head" the next morning gives ample proof that he did not have much of a one the night before.

Surgeons have supplied one man with a steel backbone, reinforced concrete may come next—Toledo Blade.

American Manikins Have Come at Last.

Miss Mabel Palmer.

Miss Helen McMahon.

Here are the first American manikins to advertise clothes. But the experience was so successful that the young women will go to several other affairs in the near future.

On this occasion Miss Palmer wore a white linen crash riding habit trimmed with white and black lines, black satin stock and black straw hat. Miss McMahon wore a navy blue taffeta dress with yellow and black striped corduroy and canary colored fox fur. Her hat was of yellow with purple scalloped mushroom crests with white facings.

In this costume the canary colored fox fur is noticeable. Fashion experts insist that fox fur will usually be worn by women this summer. Heat or not it would be possible for young women to parade among carry fur.
