TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 1, 1870.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

—In New York, yesterday, cotton closed quiet; uplands 16⅞c.

—Gold closed at 11⅛.

—In Liverpool cotton closed firm; uplands 8⅞d and Orleans 9⅛da9½d.

—Germany has felt several earthquake shocks recently.

—Oswego intends to import one hundred coolies for stevedores.

—Business in Germany is looking up again. A good many factories have resumed operations.

—The Mobilians receive one franc fifty centimes a day. They don't find it at all too much at present prices in Paris.

—A movement is on foot in Louisiana to induce white farm-laborers to immigrate into that State from Canada.

—The day after the fall of Rome the city was flooded with newspapers. No less than thirty small penny papers come out morning and evening each day.

—Honey is getting to be a very important item in the marketable products of the West. Jefferson, Wis., in one day last week, shipped 10,520 pounds.

—Princess Beatrice, daughter of Queen Victoria, now nearly sixteen years old, has never yet worn anything but short dresses even upon the grand occasion of a drawing-room reception, when court trains are universal.

—Bismarck was riding past a mounted battery the other day and shook hands with every artillerist. "I cannot help it," said he; "you have done so well that I must shake hands with every artilleryman as soon as I see him."

—The German Aid Society of England, presided over by Queen Victoria, has so far collected more than thirteen hundred thousand dollars in gold for the German wounded. Copenhagen has sent thirty thousand dollars to France.

—The statue of Napoleon I, in the cocked hat and great coat, which used to be on the top of the column of the Place Vendome, and which was removed a few years ago to a pedestal at the end of the Avenue de la Grande Armée, has been concealed to preserve it.

—Major Yelverton, whose infamous treatment of his wife a few short years ago is still fresh in the memories of the readers of newspapers the world over, is now Lord Avonmore, succeeding to the title by the death in London, a few days since, of his elder brother, Viscount Avonmore.

—A correspondent says: "It is somewhat discouraging to an intending emigrant to see how much sickness prevails on both shores of the Mississippi. Half the inhabitants are down with chills, and the other half seem only to wait their turn. The shakes constitute a leading topic of conversation, and never fail, when introduced, to elicit personal experiences."

—To be courteous in time of peace is not hard. To be courteous to an enemy in time of war shows a noble spirit. The Germans have always been rated far below the French in polite and polished bearing; but the general order lately issued, commanding all German private soldiers and noncommissioned officers to salute all French officers now held as prisoners by Germany with the same observances due German officers of like rank, shows a heighth and depth of good breeding to which the French do not seem to have yet attained. Prussian officers are also to salute French officers in the same manner that they salute German officers of the same rank; and in this matter French officers are requested to take the initiative when a meeting occurs.

—D. Strauss, in a reply which he has written to M. Renan's letter, says: "When one day our victorious armies shall recross the Rhine to return to their homesteads, but without many young men who left full of ardor, they will bring us, as the best prize of the victory which could not be too dearly purchased, the impossibility of those who have fought side by side in so many battles against a common enemy, and shed their blood for the same cause, ever finding themselves face to face as enemies, or even disunited. The blood of the sons of the North and South will have forever cemented German unity, for, taken in this sense, the saying is true, 'blood is a liquid of peculiar power.'"

—The generosity of the German soldiers is illustrated by a recent incident. A soldier of the 60th regiment, wounded in one foot and the face, was making his way along "the Lindens," in Berlin, with the help of a stick, shortly after the news of the capitulation of Strasbourg had arrived. The street was filled with rejoicing crowds, and in a few minutes the wounded warrior found both his hands full of coins, the voluntary offerings of unsolicited sympathizers. He was about to transfer the not unwelcome windfall to his pocket, when his eye fell on one of the receiving-boxes of the Konig Wilhelm Verein, a charitable society for the relief of sick and wounded soldiers. "The other lads shall have a share!" cried the brave fellow, as he poured the contents of his right hand into the box.

—A Washington telegram of Friday, to the New York Post, says: "A letter has been received here from Chief Justice Chase, in which he says he is improving in health, and by no means in as bad a condition as reported. He expressed the determination to be present and open the session of the Supreme Court in December, even if his health should forbid remaining on the bench during the remainder of the session. He makes no allusion to resigning the chief justiceship, and his friends here do not credit the report that he has determined to retire. Although he has given up housekeeping in Washington, and purchased a residence a few miles out of the city, it is not expected that he will take immediate possession, but will probably take rooms at the Arlington House during the early part of the winter; such is the statement, at least, of a member of his family."

—The private papers of Napoleon continue to afford rich developments by persistent unearthing. The marriage settlement of Miss Howard, pensioned as the Countess Beauregard, and better known as the reputed mistress of the Emperor, shows that she possessed £117,000 sterling in English and other foreign securities, including the sum of $90,000 in Pennsylvania (United States) railway debentures, $74,000 in St. Louis and Cincinnati bonds, besides another and additional sum of £59,000 sterling, jewels, plate, stocks and securities, a landed property in France, &c., aggregating £176,000 sterling, at her marriage in 1854, which must have been amassed in two and a half years—between the 2d of December, in the year 1851, and the 5th of May, 1854. The deed of settlement contains a provision to the amount of £20,000 sterling in favor of Martin Constantine Hergett, entitled and called in France Count Beauregard, a son of the Countess, and among the trustees is Nathaniel John Strode, of London. The most singular fact developed in this connection is that the dwelling house at Chiselhurst, England, which is now occupied by the Empress Eugenie, was rented by her Majesty of Mr. Strode, which house is merely held by Mr. Strode in his capacity of trustee, but is actually the property of the Count Beauregard, the illegitimate son of the ex-Emperor's mistress.

—Poor, desolate Cuba has yet again passed through the furnace. Hardly had the details of the cyclone of the 7th and 8th been recorded when we learn that another portion of the island was scourged on the 19th and 20th. The Vuelta Abajo, spared before, is the part of the island that has suffered the most. All telegraphic communication with the west being interrupted, and travel in part suspended, the news at hand is incomplete. San Diego de los Banos exists only in name, so great was the violence of the wind there and the devastating strength of the inundation produced by the torrential rains and overflowing streams. The estates, plantations and farms of the Vuelta Abajo districts heard from have suffered as much as the towns and villages—hardly a sugar mill untinjured, and all outbuildings and negro cabins more or less damaged. The banana plants are all down. The storm made terrible havoc in the vicinity of Guanajay and the villages in the district of San Cristobal were entirely swept away. Four of the cities on the south coast have suffered greatly. At Batabano the water rose fifteen feet, flooding the greater portion of the town and causing great injury to houses and trees. Steamers anchored in port got up steam and left their anchorage, taking refuge in the Keys near the Bay. A Jesuit father, at Havana, who pays great attention to meteorology, and predicted the two last storms five days ahead, prophesies yet another at hand.

The Charleston of To-Day.

The grand Fair of the South Carolina Institute opens to-day, and, if there is any virtue in hard work, good management, and a lavish outlay of money, it will be a credit to Charleston, and a lasting benefit to the people of the State. In every section of South Carolina there is an activity never known before. The low under-tone of mechanical improvement and industrial development made itself heard in the pauses of political strife, and, now that the battle is lost and won, the people are turning their whole mind to the better cultivation of the soil, to economizing labor, and to making the most of the varied riches which Providence has bestowed upon them—riches which have lain buried in the ground, or, in ruddy robes, have rolled with mighty force from the mountains to the sea. Abbeville and Anderson and Oconee, and other districts, have their local Fairs, which bring the people together, and expose them to salutary contact with those whom some good souls insist upon calling "outer barbarians." Columbia, the capital of the State, opens next week her second grand Fair—a worthy and generous rival of the Institute Fair in Charleston. Already the number of manufacturing establishments in the State is largely increased, and upon all sides it is evident that a temperate, just and honest State Government is all that South Carolina requires that she may pursue unimpeded the paths which lead to public contentment and private and public fortune. Such a government we do not expect to have for two years more; but, in the meanwhile, the people may rid themselves altogether of listlessness and sloth—they may make some headway, seize every favorable opportunity, and be ready to turn to account all the occasions of healthy progress and intelligent advancement.

And Charleston, we think, will be a pleasant place during this Fair week for both the stranger and the native Carolinian. The weather is superb, and our up-country friends will see for themselves that the metropolis of South Carolina has a fall and winter climate which cannot be surpassed this side of the sun. All the city is alive with trade. Wholesale and retail houses are busily employed. An interminable line of drays carries the fleecy staple of the South to the wharves, where lie the steam fleet and the fast sailing vessels which bear the cotton of our own State, and of distant Alabama, to the ports of the North, to Germany, and to England. The different manufacturing establishments are hard at work, and the Charleston specialty—the manipulation of the South Corolina phosphates—goes on night and day. Hayne street and Meeting street are as close to the front of commerce as their brethren on the Bay. The jobbing merchants have full stocks of every article needed for the interior trade, and we are justified in saying that the country dealers can buy in Charleston as advantageously as in New York or Baltimore. This does not apply to any one branch, but to all the divisions and varieties of commercial life. The retail stores have stocks of which the leviathan cities of the North and West would not be ashamed. Our hotels cannot be excelled. In every department, activity and enterprise are the order of the day.

And in the way of amusements, none of our visitors will have any reason to complain. They can run down the beautiful harbor, or take a trip up the picturesque Ashley. There is the shell-road upon which to drive. There are the phosphate works and other factories to visit. There is, towering above all, the fascinating charm of the Institute Fair. And, in the evening, and at night, there is the grand Fair of the German Ladies' Society—in itself a host; and there are, besides, two theatrical companies, each of them standing among the first in its own line of dramatic business. This ought to be enough, in all conscience, to make the time pass pleasantly and well.

Charleston will do her part in the grand work of building up South Carolina, and extends a cordial welcome to all her visitors, whether they come from North or West or South. There is no sectionalism in commerce, and we can promise to all who now pay our city a visit a hearty and generous reception.

Making Peace.

There is one great difficulty in the way of speedy peace between Germany and France. The French can gain nothing by further resistance, and the Germans occupy a position which enables them to obtain, whenever peace is concluded, all the material guarantees which their interests and security require. But France has no government with which Germany can treat. The Rump Government at Tours, has little power, and does not receive the unquestioning support of the people. In Paris, General Trochu is dictator. At Marseilles, the Reds are likely to have everything their own way. In the country districts, the peasantry have not abandoned the Empire. The middle classes look upon a Republic as the synonym of insecurity, communism and loss of fortune. King William, were he incautious enough to conclude a peace with the Tours Government, might find the whole affair repudiated, a few days later, by three-fourths of France.

The first thing to be done is to form a government which shall be binding upon the French people. A Constituent Assembly may give the country such a government, and it would seem that the most sensible course for France is to ask for an armistice for a time sufficient to allow of the assembling of the Constituent Assembly. It could be so arranged that the short truce would not put France in worse case than she now is, and the delay would rather strengthen than enfeeble the mighty hosts of Germany.

First an armistice; then the formation of a government—probably with the Comte de Chambord as King; then PEACE! And, the war ended, the victors will be at liberty to pursue to the end their mighty mission of bringing together, under one German Government, all the German-speaking peoples of Europe. Then, indeed, will German unity be accomplished. This will be the answer to the sonorous question: Was ist des Deutschen Vaterland?

THE POLICY-HOLDERS' LIFE AND TONTINE ASSURANCE COMPANY of the South is the only Purely Mutual Southern Company.

No stock capital to take toll from the surplus. All surplus belongs to the policy-holders, and will be returned to them annually in the reduction of PREMIUMS, or applied to the purchase of reversionary additions to the policy, or will be credited to the Policy-holder, and interest thereon compounded annually at whatever rate the Company may realize on its investments, to be paid with the Policy, or may be withdrawn and applied to the payment of future premiums. The FIRST mode will reduce the amount of future premiums. The second mode secures an annual increase of the POLICY. The third mode provides a fund payable with the POLICY, or that may be applied to the payment of future premiums, if the necessities of the policy-holder should require it.

The advantages of Life Assurance have been illustrated in several cases in this city recently. The following notes refer to one of the cases:
