ELECTRIC CITY SPARKLETS

Items of Interest and Personal Mention Caught Over the Wireless on the Streets of Anderson

Beautiful Tea Window Display.
The Anderson Cash Grocery Co., the wide-awake, hustling "quality" grocers have an unusually pretty and clever show window of teas just now. Mr. Eugene Brown, the efficient and always accommodating bookkeeper, is a very versatile young man, being a first class salesman, a good bookkeeper, a fine ad writer and a first rate window dresser. If you can pass that window on one of these hot days, and not go in and buy some tea, it will be because you know that you have a sufficient supply at home.

Has Agency For the Maxwell.
Mr. Roland Phillips has recently taken the agency for the "Maxwell" automobile. He can be found at the "Central Garage" where he will be pleased to show the new Maxwell. Mr. R. J. Rowley of Greenville, with whom Mr. Phillips has been associated, has the agency for the Maxwell for Greenville county.

Freak Egg Is Exhibited.
Mr. W. E. Razor of the Hotel Chiquola Barber shop was exhibiting yesterday a freak egg that is quite a curiosity. The egg was flat on one side and bore the outline of a sunflower. Mr. Razor cannot account for the egg bearing such a decoration, unless it is that his hen had been eating sunflower seed, which is said to be a great food for hens. But more strange probably than the sunflower, was the letter N, which was cut deep into the shell on one end. The egg was laid by an ordinary, every-day hen and a rather amiable old sister of the barnyard.

City Officers Seize Whiskey.
Officers Whitten and Sanders searched the home of J. B. Carrol, 1325 Ligon street, Tuesday morning and found six pints of whiskey. Empty bottles and cartons of all sizes were found. A warrant has been issued for the man. The police were advised some time ago that liquor was being sold at this place, but no attempt was made to get the man until Tuesday when the officers searched the house. Six pints is not too much whiskey to be stored in a home according to the gallon-a-month law.

Demonstration Agent Is Fighting Blackleg.
Mr. S. M. Byars, county agricultural agent and Mr. J. O. Williams, of Clemson College, have been hard at work this week vaccinating cows to prevent the spread of the black-leg disease. These cows are all in the Three and Twenty section of the county. They belonged to Messrs. W. T. Watson, W. H. Smith, J. C. Smith, W. B. Hunt, Fred Henderson, Dr. W. T. Tripp, J. L. Henderson, A. G. Pepper and others. Over 100 cows in all have been treated and the agent thinks that the disease is now almost stamped out.

Good-bye corns, callouses, bunions and raw spots. No more shoe tightness, no more limping with pain or drawing up your face in agony. "TIZ" is magical, acts right off. "TIZ" draws out all the poisonous exudations which puff up the feet. Use "TIZ" and forget your foot misery. Ah! how comfortable your feet feel. Get a 25 cent box of "TIZ" now at any drugist or department store. Don't suffer. Have good feet, glad feet, feet that never swell, never hurt, never get tired. A year's foot comfort guaranteed or money refunded.

Huge Transformers Are Here For Use.
Two 1500 kilowatt transformers for the Tribble street substation of the Southern Public Utilities company have been brought to Anderson to take care of the power over the power line under construction between Anderson and Belton. This line of wire is almost complete and is being erected on steel towers. The line is a big one and will be ready for use in a short while. The transformers will be ready for use by the time the line is complete.

Local Elks to Attend Charleston Convention.
Anderson Elks are making plans for sending one of the biggest delegations in their history to the Charleston convention, which is to be held June 8th and 9th. A uniform consisting of natty clothes of the Elks colors has been arranged and the Anderson delegation will attend the meeting in a body. The delegation is so large that it is thought it will take two Pullmans to accommodate the crowd.

Schools Will Be Visited Officially.
Hon. J. E. Swearingen, State superintendent of education will come to Anderson Saturday afternoon to visit the schools of the county and deliver an address at the high school commencement. The county superintendent of education, Mr. J. B. Felton, has arranged an itinerary which will take Mr. Swearingen until Thursday of next week to complete. He will cover most of the schools in the county during this time.

To Pave the Car Tracks.
Mr. H. A. Orr of the Southern Public Utilities company stated yesterday that he has received a telegram from the Southern Paving Construction company of Chattanooga saying that they will send a man to Anderson at once to confer with the street car company officials in regard to the paving to be done between the car tracks. This contract was due to be let some time ago, but it has been decided that it is best for all parties concerned to have the same company pave the tracks as pave the rest of the streets. This contract will be formally signed in a short while, and the same company has a chance to get both jobs.

New Playlet at Bijou Theatre.
Mr. J. H. Goldsmith of Greenville has come to Anderson to furnish the music for the Bijou theatre. This young man does not know one note from another, but his native talent is wonderful. Almost any piece that is played, whistled or sung to him is remembered and reproduced by him. He can hear a tune whistled and then play it correctly on the piano without notes of any kind.

FOLEY KIDNEY PILLS

FOR BACKACHE, RHEUMATISM AND GRAVEL

FATEFUL FOOTSTEPS

By George Elmer Cobb.

(Copyright, 1915, by W. G. Chapman.)

It was hard pulling, for the business was a petty one. The stock consisted mostly of candles, cakes and the more common and popular delicatessen commodities. However, there came from the trifling sales sufficient to keep the two children in comfort and the patient mother was content.

How she longed to have them with her and how she hoped that such a consummation would soon come to pass! The echoing footsteps of passing pedestrians brought her rare dreams.

This night the dreamer aroused to a new sound. It was at the echo of a strange, unfamiliar footfall. First, there was the sliding swish of a halting foot, then a weird echoing as of an iron ferrule striking on the hard smooth concrete pavement.

Mrs. Howard leaned beyond the open doorway to observe a man pass swiftly by, despite a hindering infirmity. One lower limb was missing and he wore a wooden stump, metal shod and propelled with decided celerity. She noted that he used haste. He got past the little shop and stared excitedly in all directions. He suddenly observed her and ran up to her.

"Have you noticed a tall, thin, dark young man pass by here carrying a bundle done up in a shawl?" he shot out quickly, forcibly.

"No," replied Mrs. Howard, recollecting from a sinister face set with evil eyes that seemed to glow into her very soul.

The man disturbed her—nay, more, alarmed. She closed and double-locked the front door. The rear one had been left open to insure a circulation of air. She hastened through the unlighted rear room to secure it also. As she closed it Mrs. Howard felt some wet cold substance upon its knob smeared across her hand.

"Blood!" she gasped and trembled all over. Then she carried the store lamp into the middle living apartment. It was to confront a new amazing disclosure. Upon its floor lay a man—"tall, thin, dark!" Across his forehead was a lurid gash. In one arm he shelteringly held a shawl-enveloped burden. She made it out to be a cherub-faced infant, slumbering peacefully.

The spectacle dumfounded her and then appealed to her deepest emotions as would a thrilling and entrancing picture. The man suggested a poetic nature. In a sense his face was beautiful. The child was like some stray cherub dropped from the skies. It was clear that the young man was insensible. He stirred and she drew back. He raised up and stared about in a dazed way. Then he shivered and covered.

The footsteps! Plainly, across the pavement in front of the store echoed the sharp clasp of that metal-ended false limb. It passed, repassed, faded away in the distance.

It was just here that the wounded man discovered the woman. "Madam," he faltered, "forgive! See, I have frightened you. The intrusion—the shock—the blood—oh, forgive! Because of the little one, as you love children, protect this dear innocent child. She is pursued—by murder! She is the last of a doomed family. Madam, do not be terrified. Allow us shelter here till the scourge has passed—the dread, menacing footsteps!"

Mrs. Howard went for towels and a bowl of water. He seized her hand and kissed it fervently when she had dressed the wound.

By sections his tragic story came out. He Arlo Badein, had been the friend and companion of one Victor Ramonez. An old world vendetta pursued Ramonez and his lovely wife. The man with the false limb had located them, had murdered them. Nearly at the cost of his life Badein had saved the child.

There was but one thing to do, he told Mrs. Howard. He must remain in hiding until he could get word to the grandfather of the little orphan in Portugal. Would she shield him, penniless, until Don Castro Ramonez arrived to take the menaced child out of the country? Ah, surely the don would reward her!

Because of her good heart and womanly sympathy, Lella Howard consented. Badein aided her in making candles for the little store. He assumed the domestic cares.

Then one day the don came. He took the child away, but not until he had talked long and earnestly with Badein. They departed together, but with an eager looklight in his eyes, Arlo Badein promised Mrs. Howard to shortly return.

She sat listening to the footsteps that evening as usual. Suddenly her heart beat fast. Tripping feet crossed the pavement. In another moment her two darlings, brought by Badein, were in her arms.

"I have brought them to you and five thousand dollars from the generous don," he said. "And oh, dear lady! Those dreaded footsteps—" "You mean?" queried Lella Howard. "That the assassin, still seeking the child, the don, carried dynamite cartridges in his false limb. It exploded, killing him. Lady, one word more—I love you!"

She could not doubt him. She saw happiness, fealty supreme in his bright earnest face, for the footsteps, the dreaded ones, had died out forever!

bring a new taste, a new smoothness, a new satisfaction, because they are a blend of choice Turkish and choice Domestic tobaccos—more delightful than either kind smoked straight. Test your taste on Camels! Compare them with cigarettes you think you like best. They can't bite, parch your throat or leave any unpleasant cigarette after-taste. Smoke them liberally.

Cost of tobaccos blended in Camels prohibits the use of premiums or coupons. Smokers appreciate Camel quality and do not expect them.

CAMELS sell 20 for 10c. If your dealer can't supply you, send 10c for one package or $1.00 for a carton of ten packages (200 cigarettes), sent postage prepaid.
