NEWS OF THE DAY.

—Gold closed in New York yesterday at 112½.

—Cotton closed quiet; low grades steady; uplands 20½ cents; sales 1807 bales.

—In Liverpool cotton closed quiet and steady; uplands 9½d, Orleans 9¾d; sales 12,000 bales.

—Paris is said to be unusually full of Americans.

—The latest German prima donna whose fame is heralded across the ocean weighs 375 pounds.

—Belles are beginning to return to the primitive style of wearing their hair parted in the middle.

—The commander of the "Wacht Am Rhein" has received an imperial pension of 1000 thalers, as a reward for the excellent service the song did in the recent war.

—Mr. W. W. Corcoran, the Washington banker, has almost fully recovered from his late severe illness, and with his family, is now at the White Sulphur Springs, Virginia.

—The story of William Tell and the apple is said to have been distinctly told in an ancient Persian manuscript just discovered in the library at Breslau.

—Charles D. Wrightington, a mechanical genius of Ashaway, Connecticut, has recently completed a miniature steam engine perfect in every detail, of about one mouse power. The engine is three inches long, and the machine contains over 800 pieces, some of which are of gold. It runs finely—the machine, we mean, not the mouse.

—The operation of lengthening screw steamers has been, says a Scotch journal, for some time past most successfully performed at Granton. The vessels are placed on the patent slip in the usual way, and in the course of a day or two are cut in two and drawn apart to the requisite length. The space between them is then built up, and in a few weeks the vessel is again ready for sea. The steamship Garrison, the last vessel lengthened in this manner, which is now about to sail from Granton to Constantinople, was made thirty-one feet longer. This has increased her carrying power from 950 to 1280 tons, without diminishing her speed or rendering a larger crew necessary. The advantage thus gained to owners whose vessels and trade require the outlay is equal, in the case of the Garrison, to a new steamer of 350 tons, without the great expense of engines, coal or crew.

—England has been having a surfeit of royalty lately. Besides her own royal family, there have been gathered together the French Emperor and Empress, the Brazilian Emperor and Empress, and the Imperial Prince and Princess of Germany. The latter couple have been most cordially received, and the Prince has not as yet taken a survey of the field of Dorking. The Brazilian magnates astonish London by persisting in their practice of having breakfast at 9 o'clock in the morning, just as society is preparing to go to bed, and doing all their sightseeing in the early morning hours. They have "done" all the sights in the city, from Dan to Beersheba. His Majesty has made a very favorable impression there. His manner is courteous, his appearance attractive and his education remarkably excellent and thorough. The French Emperor continues his quiet and meditative manner of life, strolling occasionally down Bond street, and visiting the club houses and public buildings. Whenever he meets bodies of workmen he is always greeted with enthusiastic demonstrations. The Empress is intending to make a visit to her mother in Spain.

—The valuable improvements recently introduced in the construction of marine boilers and engines for ocean steamers have been forcibly illustrated by the modification of the English steamer Syria, which was originally a paddle-wheel vessel, but has lately been changed into a screw with the compound engine. The Syria was registered originally at 1998 tons, with engines of 450 nominal horse power, and steamed at the rate of 13 knots per hour, requiring a consumption of 45 tons of coal a day. The Syria, after having been converted into a screw and fitted with compound inverted engines of 300 nominal horse power, only consumed 18 tons of coal a day, and steamed at the rate of 12½ knots an hour, thus exhibiting only a slight falling off in her speed. At the same time the carrying capacity of the vessel was enlarged from 500 to 1200 tons of cargo. These facts show that the adoption of the improved engines applied to a screw enables the Syria to carry more than double her former cargo, and reduces the expenses for fuel to less than half of the former cost. By these various changes and improvements the economic power of steam navigation is increased nearly four-fold, and further development of the use of steam in ocean navigation which is to take place year by year may be anticipated. The compound engine has been in use now only about two years.

—In Germany, in 1869, and in previous years, 300,000,000 francs were expended for military purposes, and with that sum North Germany was capable of passing from a peace to a war footing in a fortnight, and of presenting itself on the frontier with a first line of 500,000 fighting men, divided into thirteen corps d'armee, all perfectly equipped and provided with a first-rate material. This first army could be reinforced immediately by thirteen divisions of landwehr, forming an effective force of 180,000 old soldiers. And behind these 650,000 men were 300,000 in the garrisons, depots, &c. This immense force was all splendidly officered and furnished with an admirable artillery, engineer corps, ambulances, &c. France, on the other hand, with a military budget of 400,000,000 francs, could only place an army of 300,000 men on the frontier, that force being insufficiently provided with artillery, badly equipped, and with a villanous administration. France, too, had hardly arms and clothes for a reserve of 200,000 men, and, less than a month after the war with Prussia was declared, she had to form whole corps from the depots. As for the 250,000 mobiles who should have been ready to take the field, they were found in a state of total disorganization.

—A correspondent, writing of "the future of New York," says: "In twenty years from now this city will, if it continues in the path of industry and enterprise it has trodden the past, be the leading city of the world. The grandeur and prosperity of Paris have fallen before the decree of revolution, and the strength and ambition of London cannot compete with the fresh young life that animates the growth of New York. The boulevards in their broad, sweeping, substantial way, are rapidly carrying the centre of the metropolis to what five years ago was the city limits. Magnificent depots, stately hospitals, wonderful hotels and princely private houses come up like magic. With slower growth the vast cathedrals are rising on several avenues. Twenty years from now the Central Park may be cut up in streets and building lots to accommodate people who must have their dry goods palaces within reach. Already Arnold & Constable and Lord & Taylor, who are at Eighteenth and Twentieth streets, are too far down town. Ground on the Hudson, from Ninetieth up to One Hundred and Fiftieth streets, is to be laid out for a magnificent park, to be called the 'River Side Park.' Vanderbilt's big depot on the east side is an immense structure, its domed roof towers into the heavens proportionate to its spread on earth, and it covers several blocks."

The Irish Vote.

Of all the expedients to which the Radical managers in South Carolina have resorted to prolong their lease of political power, much the most pitiful and degrading is their present studied effort to create an antagonism between our Irish citizens and the rest of the community. To accomplish this result, not only is the patronage of the city government distributed, at this time, with a lavish and discriminating hand, but our Celtic friends are plied day after day with artful appeals to the passions and traditions of the old country, in the hope that some of them may be cajoled into supporting for the nonce a party which has ever been the bitter and unrelenting enemy of their race.

But, for once, the Radicals will be foiled. The Irishman, of whatever station, has the wit to comprehend and to balk their tricks. He knows that wherever Radicalism has held sway the honest and hard-working among his countrymen have been proscribed and persecuted. And if anything were wanting to convince him of the animus of the dominant party towards his race and religion, a glance at the illustrations in the last number of that delectable Radical sheet, Harper's Weekly, would suffice to enlighten him.

The Irish of Charleston, in the coming election, are going to stand shoulder to shoulder with the other respectable citizens in the effort to redeem the city. Mr. Pillsbury may generously employ some of them at the expense of the city. They will give him their full and faithful labor in exchange for the people's money. But they will give him nothing more.

The Two Men!

As Mayor of Charleston, at this critical period, there is needed something more than a respectable mediocrity flavored with fanaticism. The times demand a Mayor who can lead the city out of the financial desert, who is pledged to reduce debt and taxation, who will do equal justice to all classes of citizens, irrespective of creed, color, or political opinion. If Charleston is to prosper it must be, in other words, under the auspices of a man of long local experience, one who is familiar with our strength and weakness; one who has proved his patriotism and his administrative ability; one who is the champion of no political party, and who will see to it that not a dollar is unnecessarily drawn from the poverty-stricken treasury. Such a man is General Wagener, the candidate of the Citizens of Charleston. Such a man Mr. Pillsbury is not.

In the first place, Mr. Pillsbury represents a political party and not the whole people. As a party politician he was nominated, and as such the Radical Republicans propose to elect him. His administration is a party administration, and while he is Mayor the welfare of the city must be made subservient to the interests of his party. This alone is enough to condemn him in the mind of all thoughtful citizens. He who runs as a party candidate, and cracks the party whip, in an election which, as all agree, should be sedulously kept clear of all political issues, deserves, and should meet, an ignominious defeat!

We admit that Mr. Pillsbury has his strong points. Doubtless he draws his salary with edifying regularity, and honors with Bourbon and a cigar every Radical passer-by. Nor can it be denied that he stretches his official power to help Radical politicians to keep the wolf from the door, and to give his opponents practical evidence of the advantages of a prompt affiliation with Radicalism. But, beyond these signal virtues, there is not in Mr. Pillsbury a single trait of character which entitles him to the confidence of the people. Notoriously weak and unstable, he drifts to and fro, having neither the acumen nor the moral courage necessary for filling worthily his high position. For three years he has been in office, and with what result? Hundreds of thousands of dollars have been spent with infinitesimal benefit to the taxpayers. Is Mr. Pillsbury blind, or does he share in the profit? No attempt is made to face the dangers which environ the city. Neither the agitation for a scaling of the city debt, nor the sale of city property, under judgment, to pay over-due city stock, aroused Mr. Pillsbury from his dull lethargy. His official term at an end, Mr. Pillsbury leaves the city debt just as he found it. The whole record of his administration, however examined, is barren of practical good. There has been a curtailment of expenditures; but what of the sales of valuable real estate, belonging to the city, at nominal prices? For the money which has been spent the people have not had their money's worth. The expenses of the city government might have been made $100,000 less than they are; and with all the cry about economy this has not been done.

Mr. Pillsbury is no doubt, in one sense of the word, a well-meaning man, but he has not—and his public history shows it—the brain, the stamina, or the steadiness of purpose which these stirring days demand. To reelect him is to remand the city to torpor and unrest, and to make Charleston, in perpetuity, a hot-bed of official jobbery and wrong.

The Way to Win.

The lesson taught by the Conservative victory in Charleston, at the State election held last year, is still fresh, we trust, in the minds of the people. Two years earlier the Conservative candidate for Mayor had been defeated by twenty-three majority. There is little room for hoping that the result in Charleston City would have been approximated even in counties redeeming from Radical majority in the rest of the county. But the citizens of Charleston put doubt behind them, worked vigorously and incessantly, and, on the day of election, all business was suspended, and the whole community devoted themselves to the great work of redeeming the State. And they had their reward! The Conservatives carried the city by a majority of four hundred votes. This was brought about by steady labor and the sacrifice of one business day for the common good.

As we won in 1870, so can we win in 1871. To Charleston the election of next week is of supreme importance. A victory then means, at no distant day, comfort, order and justice for the whole State. The prize is worth a mighty effort, and we are assured that there will be no indisposition to do whatever is necessary to insure success. Let there be no lukewarmness. Give business the go-by for twenty-four hours. Let young and old turn out early and remain at the polls until they close. And we shall defeat the party of animosity and extravagance by a majority which will carry dismay into the heart of every rogue in the State.

A Word to Naturalized Citizens.

All citizens of Charleston who have taken out naturalization papers in the City Court, (now presided over by Judge Pringle,) since December, 1856, are earnestly advised to take out new certificates at once in the United States Court. The naturalization papers granted by the City Court, dated after December, 1856, will not be accepted by the managers of elections; and any persons now holding such papers, who do not take out new certificates in the United States Court, will not be allowed to vote.

A WASHINGTON dispatch says that "the Union Republican Executive Committee are now engaged in reorganizing the Republican party of South Carolina," and "many documents are sent thither from their rooms in this city" in aid of the good work.

It is hoped that the committee will send their brethren lively sketches of the life and secret history of C. C. Bowen, ex-bigamist and ex-M. C.; also, of the inside history of the Land Commission, the Greenville Ring and the School Fund. A biography, with a carte de visite, of the Radical members of the South Carolina Legislature, showing the condition of their persons and purses in 1868 and 1871, might help to reorganize the Party on the basis of nominating and electing only intelligent and trustworthy men.
