Quit Meat if Your Kidneys Act Badly

Take Tablespoonful of Salts if Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers.

We are a nation of meat eaters and our blood is filled with uric acid, says a well-known authority, who warns us to be constantly on guard against kidney trouble.

The kidneys do their utmost to free the blood of this irritating acid, but become weak from the overwork; they get sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and thus the waste is retained in the blood to poison the entire system.

When your kidneys ache and feel like lumps of lead, and you have stinging pains in the back or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or the bladder is irritable, obliging you to seek relief during the night; when you have severe headaches, nervous stomach or rheumatism in bad weather, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a teaspoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in urine so it is no longer a source of irritation, thus ending urinary and bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and can not injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink, and nobody can make a mistake by taking a little occasionally to keep the kidneys clean and active.

Whooping Cough.

"When my daughter had whooping cough she coughed so hard at one time that she had hemorrhage of the lungs. I was terribly alarmed about her condition. Seeing Chamberlain's Cough Remedy so highly recommended I got her a bottle and it relieved the cough at once. Before she had finished two bottles of this remedy she was entirely well," writes Mrs. S. F. Grimes, Crookville, Ohio. Obtainable everywhere.

The Contented Herd-Boy.

In a flowery dell a herd-boy kept his sheep; and because his heart was joyous he sang so loudly that the surrounding hills echoed back his song. One morning the king, who was out on a hunting expedition, spoke to him, and said:

"Why are you so happy, dear little one?"

"Why should I not be?" he answered. "Our king is not richer than I." "Indeed!" said the king; "tell me of your great possessions."

The lad answered: "The sun in the bright blue sky shines as brightly upon me as upon the king. The flowers upon the mountain and the grass in the valley grow and bloom to gladden my sight as well as his. I would not take a hundred thousand thalers for my hands; my eyes are of more value than all the precious stones in the world; I have food and clothing, too. I'm happy as the day is long. Am I not, therefore, as rich as the king?"

"You are right," said the king, with a laugh; "but your greatest treasure is a contented heart. Keep it so, and you will always be happy; happier, yes, and richer, perhaps, than the king."—Exchange.

Do It Well.

A group of children were happily playing on the broad door stone, under protecting shade trees. They were going to play "Mothers."

"I'm the mother," cried the largest little girl. "There always has to be a mother, and I'm it."

Black-eyed Ned sat next. "I'm the father," he asserted, sturdily. "Nellie and Rob can be the children, but I'll be the father, and, of course, I'll see to things and make everybody do what I say."

A little, blue-eyed tot of a girl saw a very good chance of being left out in this pretty family game.

"What am I?" she asked, a little pitifully. Very little girls are so apt to be left out anyway.

"There has to be servants," said the self-selected father and mother. That's all that's left that we can see."

"Well," remarked the little girl very sweetly, "I'll be a real nice one, then. Somebody has to do something for the rest, and it's just as good as anything if you do it nice."—Selected.

Obedient Jack—A Story of a Dog.

(By Miss Julia Graydon.)
Jack was a great big Scotch collie who was very fond of children; and when his mistress, Jamie and Janet's mother, found that he could be trusted to go with her boy and girl to school every day she was very glad, for father had to go to his office so early that he could not go with them.

When the three, Jamie, Janet, and Jack, returned from school at noon 'for Jack always went for them at 12 o'clock), mother would give Jack his dinner as soon as they arrived; and then she would pat him on the head and say, "Good old dog." Jack would wag his tail and give a pleased bark.

The teacher knew Jack's bark; and if the children were kept in and he did not see them with the others, he would go round to the window where they sat and bark and bark, and she would say: "A little late today, Jack. Be patient." He never came until school was out, although I think he would have enjoyed coming at recess and romping with the scholars.

When the town clock struck twelve, mother would say, "Go to school, Jack," and off he would run.

One day mother was talking to a friend in the sitting room, and she was telling the friend what a good dog Jack was, and she said: "I just say, 'Go to school Jack,' and off he goes." Now, the friend was a little deaf, so she had to repeat it several times; but she did not notice that Jack was just outside wagging his tail. After her friend had gone, mother went into the kitchen to make a pie. Passing through the hall, she saw that it was only eleven o'clock; so she knew she had plenty of time. She was just putting the pie into the oven when she heard children's voices and there at the gate stood Jamie and Janet and Jack.

"Why, children!" mother exclaimed. "What are you doing here? It is only half past eleven."

"O mother," they answered in the same breath, "Jack came and barked under the window, and Miss Morse said we might go home."

"Where was Miss Jenkins, your regular teacher?"

"She is sick," said the children, "and we told Miss Morse that you always sent Jack when it was time for us to go home."

"Well, well!" said mother. "But what made Jack go for you? I did not send him."

Here Jack looked up at her so wistfully that she had not the heart to speak sternly to him.

A CONFESSION

Hopes Her Statement, Made Public, will Help Other Women.

Hines, Ala.—"I must confess," says Mrs. Eula Mae Reid, of this place, "that Cardui, the woman's tonic, has done me a great deal of good."

Before I commenced using Cardui, I would spit up everything I ate. I had a tired, sleepy feeling all the time, and was irregular. I could hardly drag around, and would have severe headaches continuously.

Since taking Cardui, I have entirely quit spitting up what I eat. Everything seems to digest all right, and I have gained 10 pounds in weight."

If you are a victim of any of the numerous ills so common to your sex, it is wrong to suffer.

For half a century, Cardui has been relieving just such ills, as is proven by the thousands of letters, similar to the above, which pour into our office, year by year.

Cardui is successful because it is composed of ingredients which act specifically on the womanly constitution, and helps build the weakened organs back to health and strength.

Cardui has helped others, and will help you, too. Get a bottle today. You won't regret it. Your druggist sells it.

Then suddenly as she stood there looking at the trio, who were as much surprised as she herself, mother remembered her deaf friend and how she had told her about Jack and had had to repeat it.

"It's all right children," she said, laughing. "Mrs. Burke was here, and I told her how I sent Jack to school for you; and I had to say it so loud that Jack must have heard me say, 'I just say, 'Go to school, Jack,' and thought I was talking to him, for he was evidently out on the porch."

Then they all laughed heartily, and Jack had his dinner a little earlier than usual; and he enjoyed it as much as Jamie and Janet enjoyed the cranberry tarts mother had made for them. And when they went back to school in the afternoon and told their little friends about Jack, he became more of a pet than ever; and the teacher said she wished that little boys and girls could be as quick to obey their parents and teachers as Jack had been, for, though he did not see his mistress, he obeyed her voice right away.
