Redeeming the Time.

If but half the precious moments
That are squandered day by day,
Were employed in friendly missions
To the needy by the way;
What a burden of affliction,
What a weight of bitter woe,
From the children of misfortune
Might be lifted as we go!

Very much we might be doing
While we sit with folded hands,
Thoughtless of the call of duty
And philanthropy's demands;
Careless of the waits of anguish
That we hear on every side;
Sleeping closely to our bosoms
Our own selfishness and pride.

The Newspaper.

The following is from an exchange:

Some individual without reflection perhaps, ask and expect the newspaper to do work without charge that is of direct benefit to their trade and can expect the newspaper to invariably pay them a good round price for everything they buy from them. Not long ago, a gentleman brought to our office a job of printing which he asked done at a competitive price so close that the amount of profit was hardly any inducement to accept the order and do the work, when the order was accepted, however, he remarked that as it had been placed at a price he would expect considerable advertising space devoted to his enterprise (gratis) for the money. When we suggested that the last proposition was a different matter entirely, he explained that he thought it reasonable, since the concern was in debt, had no money and needed a little 'helping along'. How that helped us defray the expenses of our business he did not say. We suppose that if we would go to the store of any merchant to buy, and after buying a dollar or two's worth of goods to be paid for, and then ask him to throw in sugar enough to do us we would be smashed. And so we would be right. It is a matter of business. The public simply needs education and a little demonstration that newspaper and printers ink are as staple articles as sugar and coffee. The publisher has to pay for them and in order that he may do so that the business may go on, as other business men do, and so much thank you accepts, which is the only thing he receives in exchange with the ink-roller, the page frame and in the office of the press mill.

By correctness of logistics we show ourselves superior to them.

Slander not others because they have slandered you; bite not a reptile because you have felt his bite.

Ragged clothing cannot defame a man as much as a bad reputation.

The Statesburg section of Sumter county was visited by a terrible hailstorm Friday afternoon. About one Ferguson plantation the ground was covered several inches deep and the stones were as large as a small hen egg. Cotton, both open and unopened bell, was beaten from the stalk and vegetation generally destroyed.

ARE YOU GOING TO PAINT?

If so, write to the Southern Paint Company of Pinebluff, N. C., and save from one-third to one-half. They can give you a better paint for less money than you can get elsewhere. They do not sell by the gallon and sell at less price than those who do. Place a Southern Paint and Varnish Card on your house and you will be a walking advertisement for the Paint. The Publisher of this paper will answer questions about the Paint to subscribers, who would like to paint. This paint has a thick body. It is not a varnish. Does not crack, blister or peel. Does not need thinning. Lasts five years. Covers more surface than any other paint. Costs less than other paints. Ready for use. Any color. Any shade. Any quantity. Any gloss. Any kind of surface. Any place. Any time. Any purpose. Any man can use it. Any woman can use it. Any child can use it. Any fool can use it. Any one can use it. Any one who can use a paint brush can use it. Any one who can use a pen can use it. Any one who can use a pen can write a check. Any one who can write a check can buy it. Any one who can buy it can get it. Any one who can get it can have it. Any one who can have it can have it painted. Any one who can have it painted can have it painted with Southern Paint. Any one who can have it painted with Southern Paint can have it painted with Southern Paint and save from one-third to one-half. Any one who can do all this is a fool if he does not do it. Any one who is a fool can do all this except the last part. Any one who is a fool can do all this except the last part and be a fool. Any one who is a fool can do all this except the last part and be a fool and be a fool. Any one who is a fool can do all this except the last part and be a fool and be a fool and be a fool.
