...one to be stiff and coarse, but on ...the other hand, her carriage, from ...the habit indulged in by the lower class of carrying their worldly possessions on their head, is generally majestic in its erectness, whilst the curvature of their neck and shoulders is well nigh perfect. This description is not intended to include the Mestizos. They, of course, draw on either the Spanish or Filipino type according to the preponderating blood. Sometimes they are really very beautiful women. The caste line is drawn with a very much lighter hand than in India, and the Spaniards seem to mix with the well-to-do Mestizos socially and in business on equal terms. The Filipino women of the better class appear not very much inclined toward coquetry with the male sex. At dinner, if left to themselves and not coaxed out of their reserve, they will tend together, and afterwards absent themselves as long as they can with a decent show of politeness. All of them play on different musical instruments and sing with more or less effect, generally preferring selections from the different operas in Spanish. Many of them dress in European type, which does not befit them nearly so well as their own native dress. As far as lies within their power they mimic closely the Spanish women as their model. If their means permit of it they are indolence personified and leave most of the household work to be done by servants. Their education of course, is not very far advanced, though they are quick at picking up anything in which they betray an interest. Their home life seem to be a happy one, for their children are petted and very little corporal punishment, such as one might expect, is meted out to them. If, however, you really wish to study the Filipino women you must go to the so-called lower class. There you will see their passions and characteristics laid bare before you. They are impulse itself. One minute they will wish to claw you to pieces for some imaginary slight you have inflicted on them, the next minute there is nothing they are not willing to do for you. They will bargain and howl for the difference of a cent and then turn round and offer you the loan of five dollars. (I never borrowed any). A great many of them are fair learning American sojourners that are not in the dictionary, though telling in its effect. They are not very particular as to the tidiness of their apparel and wear it as it suits their convenience. As for their hair some wear it loose down their backs, others coil it round their heads and keep it in place with clumsy combs and pins. They bedeck themselves as far as their means will allow them, with jewelry of all descriptions. When excited they let themselves go with all the abandon of White-Chapel fish wives. Their eyes sparkle, they use their arms discriminately in all sorts of violent gesticulations and become transformed into regular viragoes. The next minute everything is beautifully calm and they are all milk and honey."

They all smoke, even the little girls. Many a time have I seen them on the street with a large cigar puffing away, oblivious of their surroundings, but of course it is the custom, and nobody thinks anything of it when they see it.

"The women are not the down-trodden drudges that are the servants of man in the other Oriental races. On the contrary, though they labor in the field and engage in all sorts of work which we would not suffer our women to engage in, they have plenty to say on all matters, and their voice carries plenty of weight with it. They are devout Catholics and attend to their religious duties with great regularity. Few of them, however, have attained any great prominence in their national affairs, owing, in a great measure, to their neglected education."

New Southern Schedule.

The reporter has it, not on the authority of the railroad officials, but on authority that is to be considered reliable, that the promised change in the Southern schedule, whereby Yorkville and other points between Rock Hill and Blacksburg, as well as between Rock Hill and Kingville are to have four passenger trains a day, is to go into effect next Sunday, Nov. 30. The trains that will pass through Yorkville are to be run between Rock Hill and Marion, and Blacksburg and Kingville. There are to be two trains each making a round trip every day. One is to go west in the morning and east in the evening, and the other to go east in the morning and west in the evening, furnishing people along the line the convenience of making extended trips either east or west and returning the same day. This service between Rock Hill and Marion is to be in connection with similar service between Blacksburg and Kingville, giving almost uninterrupted connection with Columbia and Charleston. As no schedule is yet available, it is not practicable to give the exact time of the arrival and departure of these trains, but it is understood that at least two of them each day, one going east and the other west, will ...—Yorkville Enquirer.

Schedule Changes.

A change in the schedule of the Seaboard went into effect last Sunday. Train No. 31 from the north, which has been arriving here at 9:28 a. m., now gets in at 10:05. Train No. 27 from the north arrives here at 12:10 a. m., instead of 12:53 a. m., as formerly. Train No. 34 from the south arrives at the former schedule time, 8:00 p. m., but the early morning train arrives half an hour later, 6:23 a. m., instead of 5:52 o'clock. These trains run through without change between Washington and Jacksonville and carry through Pullman sleeping cars between New York and Jacksonville. Dining car service meals a la carta are operated on Nos. 31 and 34.

CAMDEN RESTAURANT.

I wish to announce to my friends and the public generally that I have moved my restaurant from lower Main street to the building on upper Main street recently vacated by Mrs. S. A. Parle where I will be glad to see and serve them with the best the market affords and at moderate prices.

Auction Sale.

Our buyer is in New York. In the auction sales, sheriff's sales and all other places to get 'em cheap every day in the year except Sundays. He watches for bargains, always the lost-seven touches trash—grabs them, fires them to Camden to Caddell, and always writes "got 'em cheap—sell 'em cheap and quick." Keep the ball rolling and Caddell does it. We have not tried to sell all the goods in Camden, but we are going to sell our share, and the best evidence that we are doing the people good is the fact that they come back to us. We are fair and square—nothing about us except we get good goods—get them cheap and sell them cheap. We believe we are going to build a big business here in Camden for we have started on the right track. We are not going to lose our head the more trade the people give us the cheaper we can bring goods they need to show. Drop in, see what the people are buying of us.

Camden's Greatest Store!

Hirsch Bros. And Co.

The fastest growing house in Camden. Keeps up its remarkable run of progress. The right buying and the right selling keeps the wheel turning here at a rapid rate. Small profits and quick turnovers is our motto. Everybody seems to be waking up to our superior system of cash trading. Count with your fingers the merchants who have adopted our plans since we have been in Camden.

That's right boys, if a man can't be a leader let him be a follower; then some one else will follow him. Our would-be competitors sigh for the good old times when they could charge you what they pleased. Hirsch's small profits and big business has put that antiquated theory to the wall.

We are used to busy days, but last week's crowds nearly took us off our feet. A look into our store would have told you what store is doing the business of the town.

People naturally seek the largest store and biggest and best stock to make their selections. Hirsch's is considered to be the largest by far in Camden. Every train brings us new goods. Saturday night and Monday morning we opened up Thirty-seven Hundred Dollars worth of new Goods.

Just follow the crowds and you will see where they stop at.

Owing to the immense sales we have been having, we havedecided to go North in a few days. Before going we have decided to make big cut prices in every department in order to make our purchases larger.
