WAVING THE BLOODY SHIRT.

The Irish National Alliance.

Typhoid Mortality in Chicago.

M. Cunnebland, chief of M. Pasteur's laboratory, has been writing an important report demonstrating the unsatisfactory character of hygiene in France. He finds that the deaths from typhoid fever per 100,000 of population are 63 in Paris, 19 in Brussels, and 17 in Berlin and London. A critique on this report, published in a Lyons medical journal, points out that, in addition to faulty hygiene and quacked methods of treatment usual in France may have something to answer for. Readers would be interested in an explanation of the cause of the typhoid mortality in Chicago. Even in such a phenomenally healthy year as 1887 there were reported 199 deaths from typhoid fever in this city. On the basis of our 1880 population—assumed by the Health Department—this gives a mortality of 12.7 per 100,000, or nearly one-fourth greater than the mortality in Paris, and more than four times that of Berlin and London. It would be worth knowing from a typical Irish shanty, in the unsanitary character of Chicago, to Cairo, quacked methods of treatment—or do the most zealous insurance of physicians who report all their fatal cases of continued fever as "typhoid?"—Chicago News.

Story of "Pass to Boston."

Pass, a moral story in Russia. Sally, among the Arabs and at Zanzibar. In those countries the way lies up that from a mountain of [illegible]. In France, Italy, [illegible] Spain, it is an [illegible] road. In Germany it is a [illegible]. The Hungarian [illegible] is a [illegible]. In Russia it is a [illegible] road. In Turkey it is a [illegible]. In Persia it is a [illegible]. In Tartary it is a [illegible]. In Tibet it is a [illegible]. In Japan it is a [illegible]. In Boston it is a [illegible]. In Paris it is a [illegible]. In Zanzibar it is a [illegible]. In Cairo it is a [illegible]. In Jerusalem it is a [illegible]. In Rome it is a [illegible]. In London it is a [illegible]. In New York it is a [illegible]. In Chicago it is a [illegible]. In San Francisco