ORANGEBURG, S. C., OCT. 8, 1880.

The Situation Now.

The Solid South and the necessity for increasing the number of Republican members of Congress controlled the State nominations by that party and gave direction to the campaign at the South. This necessity overriding every other consideration, it was determined to yield up every state and, if required, every county office to the Democrats, and to concentrate the entire Republican vote upon the electoral and congressional tickets. This scheme had a two-fold meaning; one to increase their power at Washington, and the other to fight the Solid South by detail. Success this year in this field would the better enable them to win the entire South in 1882; hence the failure on the part of the Radicals to a State put ticket in the field at the late Convention in Columbia, and confining themselves to the electoral ticket and congressional nominations. This policy has controlled the party in this State and will probably continue to do so unless a coalition be formed with the late Greenback movement, the organization of which was a contingency looked for early in the campaign. Such a union is likely, judging from the character of the gentlemen mentioned in connection with the movement. More than half the ticket recently announced is composed of old Republicans and experienced Radicals, and there is certainly not enough honesty in the composition to act as a bar to the talked of coalition. In the National campaign the same union is suspected, between Gen. Weaver, the Greenback candidate, and the Republican leaders. So far as the Democracy is concerned we can see no danger in the movement more than would be, if the Radicals had put a strict party ticket in the field. The Greenback movement in South Carolina is little else than the Radical wolf in sheep's clothing and no true Democrat will be deceived by it.

Grant as a Tool.

The New York Times publishes an interview between Gen. Grant and Rev. C. H. Folwer, a Methodist Minister in which the ex-President speaks of Gen. Hancock as a man "ambitious to do his duty as an officer" up to 1864 "as a man greatly excited" and "crazed" by receiving one vote for the Presidency in that year; as an office-seeker pandering to Democratic leaders and courting Southern favor; as only a very fair corps commander, but was never thought of for any great place; and as a wire-puller watching and planning and waiting for a Democratic nomination. Grant attempts to give a true inner history of Order "No. 307" written by Gen. Hancock, but in the attempt gives the inner motive which prompted the hideous interview. No one can fail, by reading this article of the Times to notice a vein of spite and bitter hatred running through the whole interview which bears witness to the low meanness of the man who could conceive such a malicious libel. The time of its publication, just long enough before the Indiana election on 12th instant to prevent an answer, bears witness to Grant's piracy and adaptability for this special work. This interview makes Grant, what we always thought he was, a convenient tool in the hands of republican leaders and only because he happen to be a bull dog in the manger. Such a scheme, bearing its purpose upon its face, will not change a vote, not even that of the most ignorant colored man in Orangeburg.

Ex-Judge R. B. Carpenter, who in the days of Radicalism was a candidate for Governor in South Carolina, but whose residence is Colorado, is said to be an enthusiastic supporter of Hancock.

The ladies of Orangeburg are respectfully invited to meet the committee on Decoration, at Engine Hall this afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Grant to the Rescue.

[illegible] Republican [illegible] Maine, their demoralization in Indiana and Ohio and the political extremity to which the party has been reduced by the disreputable character of Garfield make a change of horses necessary even while crossing the stream. Dame Rumor says that a recent visit of Grant, Conkling and Cameron to Gen. Garfield presages the withdrawal of the latter from the ticket and the substitution of Gen. Grant, as the Presidential candidate. This is evidently expected in case the Republicans are defeated in Indiana.

Such an event will be an acknowledgement on the part of their leaders that the election cannot be carried by the ordinary means, that some dirty work must be done in order to accomplish their ends, and that Gen. Grant is the man to do it. His inordinate ambition will make him a willing tool of his party and will make him scruple at no measures however mean and revolutionary they may be. The Republican party, however, must remember that another Presidential steal whether by an Electoral Commission or the bayonet or any other unconstitutional means will not be tamely submitted to again by the citizens of this country. They must remember that Gen. Hancock leads the Democracy now instead of Mr. Tilden.

Hampton in the Field.

At the Campaign meeting held at Marion Court House on Monday last, Gen. Hampton joined the party and spoke to a large and enthusiastic crowd. It is to be hoped that he will continue with the campaign party until the election and speak at every appointment. The magic of his name and the position he holds in the affections of our people will command a crowd however rapidly the cotton may open or blunting may have been the effects of the primaries. If there is a county in the State that ought to be visited by Gen. Hampton, it is Orangeburg. In 1876 his visit here was short on account of family affliction and in 1878 he failed to fill his appointment. On both occasions the crowd was immense and the disappointment great. We bespeak for the campaign party a hearty welcome from our entire county, but if Hampton be one of the party the 12th of October will be memorable in the political history of the county for its glorious meeting and patriotic enthusiasm.

In the Wind.

The frequent consultations held by Radical leaders at No. 5, Bolivar's Row, have a meaning—a concealed purpose which as yet has not been disclosed. Scarcely an evening but Bolivar, Livingston, Webster and other distinguished leaders of the Radical party, may not be found closeted here and sometimes they prolong their discussions until a late hour of the evening. Those who are acquainted with this locality and these gentlemen know that these meetings are not social gatherings, but business consultations every time, and when taken in connection with the Radical nominations noticed in these columns a week or two ago, their purport can be easily surmised. A full fledged Radical county ticket will be the outcome.

Some new phase of crime is daily developed in Ohio. At Sidney, in that State, the Superintendent of the Public Schools was removed by the Board of Education. This brought on trouble, and one of the members of the board had an altercation at the school, in which both drew revolvers and fired. This in the South would be called barbarism, but in Ohio it is said to be a new and improved method of teaching the young idea how to shoot.

It having been noticed that young ladies who act as bridesmaid soon get married, the desire to officiate in that capacity has led to increasing the number until now fashion allows sixteen to stand up with one couple. This is a better plan than observing leap year.

A new paper is to be established at Rock Hill, in York County, as the organ of the Greenback party. Whether it will be a daily or weekly is not yet decided—probably weekly.

Chauncey M. Jewell appeared before the New York Union League Wednesday evening September 28, and appealed for money to carry on the Republican campaign. He frankly said that money alone could save them from defeat. The League appointed a committee of fifty, among whom are some of New York's most solid bankers and merchants, who are to try to raise a million or two. Subscription papers have been in circulation in Wall street for some time, and Jay Gould is credited with giving a handsome check for use in Indiana.

The Philadelphia Times says that "General Hancock is the juiciest, most incisive letter-writer of the day. It is probable that he may be called to more responsible public duties in a short time, but if he shall miss the Presidency and then inclines to retire from the rankrod exactions of military life, he can find a permanent situation, at a major General's salary, as a staff correspondent of the Times.

Go to C. D. Kortjohn for bargains in Calicoes, Homespuns, Handkerchiefs, Blankets, Flannels, Hats, Shoes, Towels, Hose and Half-Hose Dress Goods, Lace, Buttons, Shirts, Clothing, Notions &c., all of which he is selling to the trade, liberal discount to Country dealers, we ask a trial.

The Garfield men are organizing what they call "tow path clubs." It won't do. The Democratic locomotive will reach the White House long before the Republicans canal boat.
