CITY COUNCIL FAIR-MINDED

A few month ago, City Council decided to employ for 2 months a colored physician to look after the indigent colored citizens in need of medical attention. Recently, it has decided to make such permanent. That council has done this is not surprising to the colored citizens. Composed as it is of fair-minded and progressive men. When the need for such a physician was presented to Council by a colored committee, Council did not hem and haw as some governmental bodies do and have done when a matter needful and necessary for the welfare of colored citizens is presented, instead, it acted promptly. In fact, City Council in its effort to make Columbia a worthwhile community does not fail to take in consideration the fact that the city is composed of colored people as well as others, and this attitude is reflected on down the line. The colored people are grateful for this last act of helpfulness by City Council.

STATE COLORED TEACHERS' ASSOCIATION

Thursday and Friday of this week the annual meeting of the Palmetto State Teachers' Association was in session in this city. That color teachers are realizing more and more the importance of organizing is attested to by the fact that over 3,000 are active members of this association. This association is headed by able and experienced educators and the fine programs of their meetings show that the education of their people is a serious matter with them. Perhaps there is not more hopeful and sweet tempered body of men and women anywhere than colored teachers. Realizing as they do, that oftimes they are expected to "make bricks without straw," yet they seldom indulge in complaints of bitterness. They carry on with the tools given them, though they must realize that by comparison they are in many instances of very poor material. All honor to this body of men and women. Colored Columbians are glad that they have had the pleasure of entertaining this gathering.

GEORGIA BELIEVES IN LYNCHING

If one were to take seriously a resolution passed by the house of representative of the legislature of the State of Georgia, he could but reach the conclusion that the people of that State believes in mob murder. The house of representative is composed of members elected by the white people of Georgia. These members are supposed to represent the views of the white people. The resolution contains a number of "whereases," among them being the following in reference to the Costigan-Wagner Anti-lynching bill now before Congress: "Whereas, said bill is aimed directed at the South and is a reflection upon its people, its state and local governments, and is violative of the principle of State rights." If the Costigan-Wagner Anti-lynching bill is aimed at the South, it is so because the South has all too long allowed mobs to take the place of its courts, and under the Federal constitution, every citizen has the right to have his day in court; mobs think otherwise. The "reflection upon its people" is not so much in the bill as in the over four thousand men and women who have been mobbed; the reflection is not so much on its state and local governments" as the failure of the state and local governments to function as governments in the matter of proving themselves superior to cowardly mobs. The concluding paragraph of the resolution is: "Resolved by the house of representative of the State of Georgia. That we condemn this bill as a violation of State rights and a reflection upon the people of the South and their local officers." "State rights!" These words once stood for a principal that had some merit in them and if they meant something in the past, it never has embody the right of a state to murder helpless men, women and youths. Local officers; some of them deserve to be reflected upon. Too often have some of them aided and abetted the mobs. But Georgia is not hopeless. It has many thousand members of the association for the prevention of lynching made up of white women.

PERSONALITIES

BY H. V. G.

MATHEW ALEXANDER HENSON

Whenever we rate men by their attitudness, loyalty, courage and ability, we pause to pay tribute to "Matt" Henson. This brave, couragous, adventurous, and trustworthy Negro accompanied Admiral Peary to the North Pole.

Henson was born in Maryland along the Potamac River, in Charles County August 8, 1866. His parents, Lemuel and Carolina Henson were very poor. While Henson was quite young the family moved forty miles up the river to Washington, D. C. When he was out eight years of age his mother died leaving him a little orphan. He went to school for about six years, and then went to Baltimore. He finally got a job as cabin boy on the Ship "Katie Hines" and for four years traveled to China, Africa, Japan, France and the Phillipines.

After returning to America in 1907 he married Lucy Jane Ross. The same year he met Admiral Peary, the famous explorer and the two became great friends. Henson proving to be ambitious, trying and a "Jack-of-all trades" he soon became the Admiral's assistant.

Admiral Peary made several trips to South America, on which Henson was taken. His service on each trip proved his indespensibility for the next. Eight attempts were to reach the North Pole, but were unsuccessful.

On July 8, 1908 Peary with Henson, a doctor and several scientist left New York. Peary had made up his mind, once for all, that he would not return to civilization until his ambition was realized. The trip was hard and long, furs, sleds and dogs were brought from the Eskimos, who also went along. After they traveled as far as they could in their ship, it was unloaded and a part of the party were sent ahead to make a trail and store food supplies. As these returned and told conditions others were sent. The nearer they came to their goal the harder the trip was. The tempreture of the Arctic regions would almost freeze their bodies. "Matt," as he was called, was always the one to fix the sled, harness the dogs or some other task; with almost frozen fingers. These things, among many other things, he did, made the trip a success.

As Peary neared his goal, he sent his men back one by one, until finally only one American, Henson and four Eskimos a companied him. On April 6, 1908, the flag was won, the Stars and Stripes were placed on the North Pole.

The Liberty magazine stated July 1923, "Few people realize that Matt Henson, Peary's Negro assistant was actually the first man to reach the Pole. Henson, the trail-breaker during the last lap of the expedition, was there forty-five minutes ahead of Peary."

In 1912 this explorer wrote The Negro Explorer at the North Pole. In 1913 he became employed by the United States Government as Collector of Customs in New York City. Morgan College in Baltimore, June 5, 1924 conferred a degree of Master of Science on Mr. Henson. While he lived he worked.

PROSPERITY NEWS

At ten o'clock services began with an excellent S. S. lesson. The high noon sermon was delivered by the Rev. W. Wheeler. His text Rev. 22:10 and he used a subject, "The servant of God is citized." At both places the guests were highly entertained. On last Friday the scholars around Howard Jr. High School celebrated their first Field day. Kampbellgrams

By Stephen C. Campbell

"By their fruits ye shall know them" not by their leaves, stems, roots or shade. I think this means by their works, accomplishments, achievements, tasks finished, you will know character. "By their reports in May, by their presence, by their support, we will know each other at Florence in May, when Baptists from everywhere will be there, every moderator of an association, union meeting, every church will be there, with a delegate, a donation, and doorway. We are calling for men who will mend up the broken places, men whose ambition is to see the Baptists organized, and who will push whoever has a plan. Come on pastors, start new, organizing your members. Come to the convention to see what it is like, see what it is doing, come on you are a big man, and will be named to some important position, sit up at the front, get by the wayside. Jesus of Nazareth will pass this way.

Isolation, staying in your own corner, keeping away from others, going alone does not get me any where. These Grams plead for a larger attendance. Send your pastor, send one of your leaders so in the mouth of two the truth may be planted. President Butler, the friend of the unknown man, wants to know you. Vice-president Daniels, the champion of the little preach "who is a child of God," wants to shake your hand. Presidents Pinson and Starks, "the gates to an education for your children" desire to see you face to face. The corresponding secretary wants you to serve on some committees. We all want the convention to know you, and you know the convention. Whether you need the convention or not, we need you. The world will miss you when you are gone, if you will do like the little streams, unite with other streams and make a great river, We do not have Big I and Little You. It is a we, an us, and ours. You will know what is programmed before you get there. Come on brothers, lets make our convention a real State Baptist gathering. It was planning, pushing, pepping, publicity, pressure, persuasion, personal interest pregnant programs—that made The State Teachers' Association the biggest gathering in the state. Men like Dr. A. A. Sims (a Baptist) Prof. C. A. Lawson (a Baptist), Prof. S. L. Finley (a Baptist), Dr. H. H. Butler (a Baptist) help to make the Teachers' Association. These were not all. Alice Webb Anderson, supervisor of Negro schools in Anderson County, has put the schools on the map. She plans, she purposes, she pushes. We want more men at the convention this year. As one of your leaders, I am taking the field to reach every minister.

The "Voice from The Mountain" roared last week in The School and Union against men "running for office" instead of letting the office run to them. It does sound funny since I that of it for me to nominate myself for an office. Well, I suppose my world consists of me, I, myself and mine. I know me, and myself knows mine and it may be nice. Animals that run hardly ever get sick. All that I am running for now is to do better what I am trying to do. I will be glad to see some one else try to run up a good attendance for the coming convention. Roar on Voice from the Mountains.

It is better to have something to tell before opening a story. It is better to have some corn before you call the hogs. It is better to prove your worth, to give a demonstration of ABILITY, Capacity, adapatation, and all those other things which go to make one ready for a position. It is better to let jobs run for you and not you run for the job. You might be too tired to do the job. I ran once to catch a train and when I caught it, I was too tired to tell the conductor where I was going. Let preparation, experience, accomplishments, and recognize personality commend you. No, I am not trying to keep anyone from running against Dynamo Campbell at Florence. I want you to run. I wish 25 would come out and get in the race for recording secretary, assistants, president, treasurer, and all the other offices. I saw ten canines at a rabbit once. Nobody shot. We had a time running, hunters and dogs, all running. The rabbit got away.

KINGSTREE NEWS

By M. C. Mitchell

The student body and friends enjoyed very much the Mock Faculty play given by Prof. W. M. Anderson on Monday night, Mar. 11, 1935. WHAT HAVE I DONE?

By W. L. Williams

Nor let soft slumber close your eyes
Before you've recollected thrice
The train of action thro' the day.
Where have my feet chose out the way?
What have I learnt, where I've been,
From all I've heard, from all I've seen?
What know I more, that's worth the knowing?
What have I done that's worth the doing?
What have I sought, that I should shun?
What duty have I left undone?
Or into what new follies run?
These self-inquiries are the road,
That lead to virture and to God.
