EXPERT ADVISER ON DRESS

Woman Has Achieved Success In Occupation That Is Something of a Novelty.

I heard lately of a plan adopted by one young woman that has worked out well with her, and might be of use to someone else, says a writer in the Pittsburgh Dispatch. She lives at home, but must help the family exchequer, and this is how she does it:

Her one talent lay in her good taste in dress. She had an instinctive feeling for what was becoming, not only for herself but her friends, and was often called in to consult over a prospective new gown. So that is what she determined to do professionally. She let her friends know that for a certain sum she would give advice on costumes, helping to arrange a whole wardrobe, and from friends she soon branched out to regular clients.

She goes to the house of her employer and looks over everything the lady has. She gives definite instructions as to what each dress or suit or waist requires to bring it up to par. She advises as to the most becoming styles and colors, and lists what new garments are necessary. Of course she regulates the expenditure according to the purses of her various clients.

She has made a success. Many women do not know what to wear, what suits them best, what to put together. She tells them. She also saves them a good deal by her cleverness in adapting what looks hopeful. She can also tell where you should go for materials; she has addresses of tailors, dressmakers and sewing women, and knows they can do what they promise. She is thoroughly up in her chosen job, in fact. She also makes a point of attending carefully to the details of a costume, making sure that each item will harmonize. The work is extremely interesting, and it pays both her and her clients.

EXPLAINING THE WILD MAN

Curious Individual Learns All About Him, Including Reason for His Wildness.

"The wonderful curiosity which you see before you, lay-dees and gentlemen," announced the sideshow lecturer, in tones admirably adapted for talking down from a great altitude to the subnormal understandings of the masses, at the same time waving an indicatory hand toward the hyperpessimistic looking personage in the steel barred cage, "is the Wild man of the Everglades, captured at the cost of seven lives and eleven thousand dollars in gold! Thru-ree times a day this savage mon-ster leaps upon gurgling hunks of r-r-r-raw and r-r-r-rooking flesh and devours them with terrible ferocity and bloodcurdling yell!"

"What caused the cus to go wild and live on raw meat?" asked a sharp-nosed ruralist, interestedly.

"He lived on his brother-in-law for five years and it made him wild when his long suffering relative would no longer support him. He eats his meals raw because he is too lazy to cook them himself."—Kansas City Star.

Changing Diet of the Chinese.

Americans who have been influenced by the Orient to the extent of taking their tea clear, without milk or sugar, will be astonished to learn that the Occident is now bent on teaching the Chinese to use milk with their decoction of tea leaves—and condensed milk at that.

An enterprising condensed milk company is pushing the campaign and expects to be successful. This concern has already introduced condensed milk ice cream to the Chinese, and they like it so well that many of the restaurants keep it always on hand.

Practically no fresh milk is to be had in China, although the natives seem familiar enough with the virtues of both the fresh and the condensed article.

Perhaps after all of the Orientals have taken their tea clear because there was no milk to put in it and not because they thought the addition of milk ruined the beverage.

New Uses for Old Rope.

Old rope, like old tin cans and other things generally considered as waste, has its special market and uses, and in every seaport the collecting and classifying of old rope is an important business. Rope that is covered with heavy graphite or tar is even more valuable today for making oakum than lightly tarred material, while hemp rope with the original heavy coating of tar worn off by weathering is often used for bag paper. A small percentage of untarred hemp rope, used in its prime for hoisting and other purposes, is being converted into cigarette paper in Europe. Scraps and waste from old tarred rope, and also old oakum removed from seams of ships, are now used for making boards.

Bamboo Blooms Slowly.

Certain species of bamboo flower only once in about fifty-five years, and strangely enough, all the trees in a locality flower about the same time. Those in Burma began flowering last year, and now they are all in blossom. The last time this species flowered was in 1859-60. They will now die and those that spring from the seeds born of this flowering will take their place and will not flower until about 1970. They may flower sporadically at other times, but the seed does not mature, for the bamboo cannot fertilize itself.

The Millennium.
Nobody has the faintest idea when, if ever, the war of competition is to cease. It may be that sometime men will live only in thoughts, not deeds—in a beatific contemplation of their own ideals. Sometime the valley's may be exalted and the mountains brought low, and we shall live on a high plateau of co-operative equality, when, to supply his wants, a man will have only to touch a button and the machinery of government will do the rest.—"Truth—Business and Political," Henry D. Estabrook, in National Magazine for August.
