HOPEWELL WON GAME Shut Out Pendleton in One-Sided Game Yesterday. The Hopewell baseball team defeated Pendleton yesterday afternoon by the score of 7 to 0.

A Correction. In a notice appearing in this paper a short time ago in regard to the reunion of Orr's regiment it was stated that it would be held at Pendleton when it should have read that it would be held at Westminster. The reunion is to be held at Westminster and not Pendleton.

GOOD PROGRESS IN COLLEGE EDUCATION

There were 216,493 students in colleges, universities, and technological schools in 1914, according to the annual report of the commissioner of education, just issued. This is an increase of 14,262 over 1913. The bureau's list for 1914 includes 567 institutions, a decrease of 29 over the preceding year.

Receipts during the year totaled $120,579,257, of which $18,422,856 was for endowment. Benefactions to colleges and universities totaled $26,670,017, something over $2,000,000 more than in the year previous.

The dominant note of the year in higher education, according to the report, was concentration, both in internal organization and in relation to state authority. The movement in the direction of authoritative classification gained momentum during the year, chiefly through the activities of several voluntary associations.

Degrees conferred by colleges and universities included 26,533 baccalaureate, 5,248 graduate, and 749 honorary. The degree of doctor of philosophy was conferred as the result of examination by 46 institutions on 446 men and 73 women.

It was stated yesterday that the first real show of the season would appear about September 17.

MANUFACTURING ICE AT COUNTY HOSPITAL

Plant was Finished Yesterday and Operations Begun—Useful and Economical.

The little ice plant at the Anderson county hospital was finished yesterday and operations begun. The plant has a capacity of about 150 pounds a day.

The ice is made from sterile water which is a great advantage, especially since it will be used for patients. It has a storage capacity large enough to contain the vegetables, fruits, meats and milk and will be a great saving to the hospital in many ways.

The plant is located in the hospital building just across the kitchen.

WAR WILL CHANGE METHODS OF SCHOOLS

Dr. Heeren Says Physical Training Will Have Larger Part of Education.

Berlin, Aug. 6.—The director of one of the largest boys' high schools in Germany, Dr. Heeren, writes from the trenches before Rheims that he believes the war will cause a complete change in the course of studies for boys in schools of the grammar and high school classes.

"Physical training will have a larger part in education," Dr. Heeren believes. "School gymnastics of the acrobatic variety will be abolished, and long cross country runs will be practiced in order to develop the lungs and heart, which this war has shown are the weak points of our young manhood.

"In the class room there will be less dogma and more religion. His story teaching will aim to arouse enthusiasm for great personalities. In geography the essential question will be in studying each country. What interests has Germany there?" "Much more importance will be attached to physics and chemistry. Knowledge of Russian and Spanish will be compulsory, since Germany's economic interest will mainly lie in the Slav countries and in Spanish South America. English will be taught merely for practical purposes.

One Good Reason. During the lessons one afternoon in a public school a thunderstorm arose, and seeking to lessen the fright of the children, the teacher began an entertaining discourse on the wonder of the elements.

"Jimmy," said she, finally turning to a bright little youngster, "can you tell me what lightning is?" "Yes, ma'am," was the ready rejoinder of little Jimmy, "lightning is streaks of electricity."

"That's right," smiled the teacher, encouragingly. "Now tell me why it is that lightning never strikes twice in the same place."

"Because," answered Jimmy, quite easily, "after it hits once the same place ain't there any more."—Toronto Evening Telegram.

Revised Sentiment. Darling, I am growing old. Plate these silvering locks with gold. Bing a can of patent cream. Hold me underneath the steam. I must seem as fashion fly. Younger than in years gone by.

In those days of sweet sixteen I was clumsy, shy and lean; Now artistic charms attract mine. Of the most approved design. And the years that slip away Find me younger every day. —Washington tar.

MANY MAKE DEBUT IN GREAT SPOON OFFER Now Have Spoons of Six Different States—Supply Limited So Come at Once.

There have been quite a number of new "spoon faddists" to make their debut this week in the souvenir spoon collection. The reason they gave for their delayed entry in the saving of these souvenir spoons is that they waited until they could get six different spoons. We now have six: North and South Carolina, Georgia, Delaware, Florida and Alabama; and next week we will have the souvenir spoon from the volunteer state, Tennessee.

To those who have not the spoons for the six states named above, we will say that when this lot of these six states is exhausted we will not reorder more for these states. We will order more spoons of other states, but for the states already on now we will not reorder when our present supply is gone.

Our extremely liberal offer of a set of these souvenir spoons with a three months subscription to the daily for a dollar and eighty-five cents certainly has hit a tender chord with a great number of people of the city within the last few weeks. We started out to give only 257 sets of these spoons away on this offer, and this supply is diminishing rapidly. Those who contemplate subscribing on this proposition had better hurry.

MANY MEN THROUGH STREETS OF PARIS

Wounded Soldiers From Trenches Engaged in Making Munitions of War.

Paris, Aug. 5.—(Associated Press Correspondence.)—There are more men in Paris now than there have been since the eve of the battle of the Marne, when the army of the defense of Paris crept out by night to its heroic work on von Kluck's western wing and left the city of light drained of every male able to bear arms. For, though the French capital is itself still almost on the front, there never have been many troops stationed in the city since the early days of hostilities.

The business of France for the present hour is war, and those who are not actually engaged in it are in depots scattered throughout the Republic, making themselves ready or holding themselves in readiness.

To the casual eye the only men of fighting age in Paris, so far, have been the wounded. But now it is different. The entire redistribution of the forces of France, necessitated by the enactment of the Dailbles law, is in progress; and thousands of men are being brought in from the front and from the depots back of the lines to serve their country in the production of the material of war, and to be replaced in the trenches by those who lack the skilled, technical training to be used in this specialized field.

The Dailbles law was passed out of the conviction of the French that the war will last at least another winter, and that it is, in view of the enormous consumption of munitions, equipment, artillery and foodstuffs rendered essential by the nature of this siege warfare, to organize the entire nation on the lines of a long campaign conducted at the highest level of technical efficiency.

To do this every skilled workman capable of aiding in the manufacture of any of the thousands of articles required is being transferred to the production corps. At present, and doubtless for some time to come, while this readjustment is in process, the people of Paris are being deputed to the sight of their defenders in their mussy campaign uniforms and all that shaggy, bearded unkemptness which had earned them their nickname of "pollus"—the hairy ones.

During working hours they are scarcely in evidence. It is along the boulevards in the evenings or on Sunday, or better still in the early mornings that one sees them, suddenly reconverted to domesticity, after almost a year in the trenches, accompanying their wives to the Halles, the great municipal market of Paris, basket on arm, each in tow of some woman radiant in the pride of her returned warrior. Now and then the air of domesticity has been acquired at the expense of hair and beard, and the faces and backs of the "pollus" shorn of their hirsute adornments are striking mixtures of practical tax on cheekbones and forehead, and a curious unhealthy palar where beard and long hair have protected the skin from sun and wind.

Making it Emphatic. She called into the telegraph office and rapped on the counter. As the clerk came forward to meet her he remembered that she had been there about ten minutes before. He wondered what she wanted this time.

"Oh," she said, "let me have that telegram I wrote just now! I forgot something important. I wanted to underscore 'perfectly lovely' in acknowledging the receipt of that bracelet. Will it cost anything extra?" "No, ma'am," said the clerk, as he handed her the message. The young lady drew two heavy lips beneath the words and said: "It's awfully kind of you to let me do that. It will please Arthur ever so much."
