WAR HAS WROUGHT BIG CHANGE IN PARIS

Parisians Returning From Trenches See Vast Change in Gay Paree.

Paris, Aug. 11.—(Associated Press Correspondence)—The reservist home for the first time after a year at the front realizes less change in himself than the transformation of his Paris. He has acquired his new color gradually and has built up his hitherto unknown muscles almost imperceptibly. The blasé Parisian, who left for the front soft and pallid, with slooping shoulders and spiritless eye, indifferently interested in life, comes back not only strengthened but brightened; his mind has been reopened to impressions. The little revolutions that have transformed Paris, gradually, break upon him all at once; he is more like a tourist visiting the French capital for the first time than a man who knows, or knew, his boulevards by heart.

It was a curious spectacle to see the reservists swarming into the court of the Gare du Nord like children full of picnic enthusiasm. They seem to discover something new everywhere; first of all it is the civilian that gets their curious attention. There is first the surprise of the man from the trenches that so many men were left at home; then there is unconcealed amusement at the gravity with which the less reassured of the noncombatants read the official communiques and calculate the chances of being safe in Paris another winter. The absence of motor buses, the reduced number of automobiles and decreased facilities for transportation inspire all sort of quips and jokes at the "civils" as for himself the reservist has increased his stock of resourcefulness. A year ago he would have fumed when unable to find a cab; today he trots off to the subway, satisfied and amused to think that the "civils" must be devilishly annoyed.

When he sits down on the terrace of a cafe he amuses himself by ordering prohibition drinks and nokes fun at the old boulevardier at his side who takes his substitute for absinthe with a grimace.

Having lost the habit of a soft bed until 8 or 9 o'clock in the morning, he has discovered a new Paris—the Paris of the early hours—that goes cityward from seven o'clock on and is rarely seen at its best by those who find it only when submerged by the bustle of the later hours. The ordinary sewing woman, with pricked and stained finger-ends, comes first. A little later the smart class of milliners models and seamstresses, the shop-girls, stenographers, terminating with the mannequins and foreladies, the aristocracy of the great fur cloak and dressmaking establishments.

War has reduced the number and leveled conditions; the procession is still charming, but with new features. It is a long line of white and black. No craps here, for their mourning is democratic; rich bereavements alone may wear the aristocratic weeds. Those that work content themselves with black skirt and little jacket with white collar. This little world that flies past in the early hours, is witness of the tribute Paris has paid to the "patrie." Conversations vary little. One has a letter, another is anxious because she hasn't one. Those in black talk without bitterness, without a sign of revolt against what they endure. Formerly most of them en route devoured stories published by the morning papers. Now they are plunged into the official communiques, from different belligerent countries, which they comment with quite as much perspicacity as the baldheaded gentleman who later in the day wins or loses a dozen battles over his aperitif at his favorite cafe. Strangest of all, these girls become assiduous readers of the "Journal Officiel"—The Congressional record of France. They look at once to the pages containing the citations in the orders of the day. Everyone of them hopes to find there the name of some of the boys at the front. They generally have a little flower to spare, and this an early morning reservist gets, along with one of the touching lessons of wartime in Paris.

Realization

Crawford—What do you think would happen if we could see ourselves as others see us?

Crabshaw—As far as the women are concerned they would probably put on more clothes.—Judge.

The Remains.
"The Girl he Left Behind Him" is the heroine of an anecdote by Frances Pritchard, fair dancer in the Passing Show of 1915.

A negro died without medical attendance, and the coroner went to investigate.

"Did Samuel Williams live here?" he asked the weeping woman who answered the door.

"Yussah," she replied between sobs. "May I see the remains?" asked the coroner.

"I is de remains," she answered proudly.—Young's Magazine.

Heavy Meat Eaters Have Slow Kidneys

Eat Less Meat if You Feel Back-ache or Have Bladder Trouble.

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which excites the kidneys, they become overworked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood, then we get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, dizziness, sleeplessness and urinary disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, stop eating meat and get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate the kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.
