TEN YEAR OLD NEGRO STOLE $800 FROM BANK

Lumberton, N. C., Aug. 30.—A daring robbery occurred here today at 11 o'clock when Elliott Merriek, a 10-year-old negro stole $800 in cash from the Farmers and Merchants bank. Cashier Barnes stepped out a moment asking one of the directors who was present in the bank to watch for him. During his absence the sneak slipped around behind the counter and grabbing a package of money, slipped out without detection.

When he returned Mr. Barnes missed the money. Chief Redder and Lewis and deputies were soon on the track of the bank robber. In a short time he was under arrest and all the money but $22 recovered. Merriek is in jail.

The managers at each precinct named are requested to delegate one of their number to secure the boxes and blanks for the election.

Mr. Geo. Williams, janitor at the court house, will deliver the boxes to the manager delegated to call for them.

W. A. Hudgens, C. E. Tolly, J. C. Riggsdale, Commissioners of State and County for Anderson County, S. C.

The commissioners of election request the manager calling for the boxes for the election on September 14th, to get the registration book for their precinct as required by law, and that he also take the required oath before some one qualified to administer it and that he administer it to the other two managers before the polls are opened. That they require every person presenting himself to vote to have a registration certificate and tax receipts or proof that he has paid all taxes for the previous year. The commissioners realize that this election is going to be watched very close and they want to avoid any contest arising in Anderson county.

CHINESE GOODS FOR CHINA IS NOW SLOGAN

Peking, Aug. 27.—(Associated Press Correspondence)—"Chinese goods for China" is the latest slogan in the new republic. It represents the boycott against Japanese goods in a modified form, a form against which Japan can offer little objection.

President Yuan Shi-Kai's decree that there should be no boycott against Japan as a result of the Japanese demands upon China, has had no effect. In fact boycotting has become more marked. It is an affair wholly beyond the control of the Chinese government.

But the boycott has been given a new twist by the Shanghai chamber of Commerce and other commercial organizations which have started the "home-made goods movement." The campaign is ostensibly directed against all wares not manufactured in China, but the Chinese have shown a greater position to do without Japanese goods than the products of other nations.

Cheap cotton goods and cigarettes have suffered more than other Japanese products, perhaps, as a result of the boycott. Japanese goods are sold in China through Japanese selling agencies. Consequently Chinese merchants have no trouble in avoiding the wares of the country against which they feel a grievance.

The falling off in the sale of cheap Japanese cotton goods has been so marked that Japan is seeking a market in India. A commission recently visited that country and another Japanese commission is to go later.

A delegation from the Osaka Chamber of Commerce visited Hong Kong, Shanghai and other Chinese cities in an effort to conciliate the Chinese merchants. It was announced that the feeling against Japanese manufactures was due to misunderstanding which could doubtless be removed by closer personal relations.

Similar "get acquainted" movements have been organized by other Japanese commercial associations, but apparently without marked success. Japanese shipping has been especially hard hit by the boycott. The ships of the Toyen Kise Nkisha, which formerly carried several hundred Chinese in the steerage each trip, now seldom carry a single citizen of the new republic.

China imported about $105,000,000 worth of manufactured cotton in 1912. Of this amount about $67,000,000 worth was coarse fabrics and yarns of a sort which Chinese factories could produce. The same year it is estimated China raised slightly more than 300,000 tons of native cotton, only a small percentage of the amount required by its own factories.

Cotton is growing in eight of the southwestern provinces and in the Yangtze province, but the cultivation is so clumsy that the yield per acre is small. Definite figures are not available, but the highest yield per acre is said to have been 176 pounds of cleaned cotton. Poor seed and had cultivation are responsible for the short crop, as much of the land is said to be admirably adapted to cotton growing.

It is estimated that the amount of land in China available for cotton culture is 27,000,000 acres, with a possible increase of 2,000,000 acres through irrigation.

However, the successful extension of cotton manufacturing in China would necessitate a complete reorganization of its economic system. About half of the central government's income is derived from the import duty on manufactured cotton.

proposed to establish a bank with part of this fund which shall lend money to Chinese cotton mills and other industries which will make China more independent of other nations and keep its money at home. Dr. Wu Ting-fang and many other prominent Chinese are lending their support to this new industrial movement. The Chinese Honorary Commercial commission, which has just completed a tour of the United States, is interested especially in inducing foreign capital to come to China, and through its observation of American methods hopes to be able to direct Chinese industries into more progressive channels.
