WAR MAKES DRASTIC CHANGES IN FASHION; RUSSIAN TUNIC LINES ALREADY POPULAR

High Military Stocks and Collars Begin to Decline in Favor, Says the Charming Peg in Oliver Morosco's "Peg o' My Heart."

ONE of the uppermost themes of conversation during the most beautiful time of the year is clothes. The atmosphere seems to inspire the subject. The decadent note in the fashions is very obvious, and I find that whenever two or three women are gathered together and the subject of togs is brought up the opinion seems to be unanimous that the appalling war will stamp out this deplorable note.

War ever since the creation of fashion has had its influence on modes. For some time we drew ideas from the Balkans. The barbaric seemed to touch some inward sense that we never paused to analyze, and we just accepted the swathed hips and baggy corsets as good style. To this were added the typical embroideries and colors emanating from that corner of the globe where, in a measure, the spark of the present dreadful flame of war was ignited. We may rest assured that when the present war is concluded we will have a drastic change in modes and quite apart from any pecuniary reason.

The influence of the war on fashions can be observed even now, for there are strong evidences that the Russian tunic lines advocated by all the best couturiers are the very acme of elegance, and the high military stocks and collars are already in the decline. I have had the good fortune at various times to peep into the wardrobes of the most fashionable women in America.

An Afternoon Frock.

An afternoon frock which has caught my fancy is quite different from anything that has been generally seen. It is in that choice color, tete de negre. A chiffon tunic running around the satin petticoat like a spiral staircase is edged with four inch velours ribbon, edged in turn with an inch moire, the beginning and the end finished with a wonderful tassel. The corsage is chiffon, loose and blousy, and a big, queer burnt orange rose holds the girle in front. The toque, the only one of its kind in existence, I think, is of Chinese feather, with a tango fantasy of paradise. So simply and yet so costly and exquisite!

Another gown is of silver cloth and a lace tunic of delicate weave—so light it could almost be pulled through a bangle—with ropes and ropes of pearls, which form the corsage and sleeves.

Still another very delightful one is white and black charmeuse with a tunic of the two colors combined in strands of chenille, from which dangle brilliants and a queer, quaint, or glistening black jet, with diamond sequins. Airy, loose sleeves of black tulle, are hung with jet tassels to induce them into proper position.

It would be impossible to wear petticoats with these gowns unless they were of a very light fabric, so that some freedom of movement could be allowed.

Early Winter Hats.

Long before the cold weather really comes we have drifted the way of all feminine flesh to early winter hats. We have had for some time a strange obsession for dark colored headgear, and our winter bonnets are still conforming with this whim. The new shapes, most of them black velours, are of the most enchanting description and sufficiently beautiful in themselves to do away with anything out of the slightest ornamentation.

Peg, as conceived by J. Hartley Manners, is a crude sort of creature, with a lot of innate charm and an abundance of magnetism. She has never been accustomed to wearing pretty dresses, and the only one she adores is "the one I go to mass in."

This, a very simple dress bordered with cheap lace, is her idea of the epitome of fashion, and so, when she enters the household of her stylish relatives and is told that she will have to be recouffited she remarks that she cannot see how her mass dress can be improved upon. However, the good taste of Mrs. Chichester prevails, and she is adorned with two very stunning frocks, and she wears them with the natural grace of the true Irish lass, who, tradition says, looks good in anything.

New Method Used In Handling Patients At Hospital For Insane

Columbia, Oct. 9.—The state hospital for the insane has been changed from a place where the mentally afflicted are given what alienists call "custodial care" into a hospital in which they receive treatment for their mental diseases as well as their bodily ailments. In an interview today, Dr. C. Fred Williams, superintendent of the state hospital, outlined the routine treatment each patient in the state hospital receive now.

During September, 1915, the state hospital for the insane cared for an average of 1,823 patients a day, an increase of almost eight per cent over the average number cared for daily in September, 1914. In fact, the daily average of patients treated at the state hospital for the insane has steadily increased as the following figures show:

Daily average number of patients treated in the state hospital for the insane during July, 1914, 1,721; during July, 1915, 1,798; during August, 1914, 1,711; during August, 1915, 1,820; during September, 1914, 1,688; during September, 1915, 1,823.

It is hard to state with certainty the cause for the marked increase in the number of patients at the state hospital. There is strong reason to attribute it in part to the fact that under its new management patients receive treatment for their mental diseases as well as for ill of the body. Consequently, families and friends of mentally afflicted patients who had been kept at home or sent to private sanitariums have been committed them to the care of the state's own hospital.

In his interview today, Dr. Williams made it clear that no distinction was made in giving treatment to patients. Beneficiaries of the state and paying patients, supported by their own estates or by their relatives, receive the same careful attention from the medical staff and eat the same food.

The percentage of cures for mental diseases is low, but the state hospital is doing everything in its power to effect cures by modern methods. "Upon the arrival of a patient at the state hospital, we put him to bed in a receiving ward," said Dr. Williams in explaining today the new routine practice at the state hospital. "In this ward he is kept under the close observation of a physician. As soon as the condition of the patient permits a complete history of his case is written by the physician who has him in charge and all the available data in connection with his case is compiled. During the time the patient is in the receiving ward the physician who has him in charge makes a complete mental and physical examination of him, including any laboratory examinations that may be required.

"The record of the patient compiled while he is under observation in the receiving ward is typewritten," continued Dr. Williams. "Within a week or 10 days after he enters the receiving ward, the patient is taken before a meeting of the entire medical staff of the state hospital. These staff meetings are held every morning in the week, except Sunday. At the meeting all the information obtained by the doctor who had the patient in charge in the receiving ward is laid before the staff of physicians. Dr. W. C. Sandy, medical director of the state hospital, presides over these meetings. After discussion of the patient's case, a tentative diagnosis is made, and an outline of the treatment to be given him for his mental disease as well as for any physical ailments is drawn up. The patient is then assigned to the ward in the state hospital where other patients with the same form of mental disease are undergoing treatment.

"All the physicians on the medical staff of the state hospital are required to visit their patients at least twice a day, and oftener if their mental or physical condition requires it," concluded Dr. Williams. "We have added five people to the staff of white male attendants who have charge of the white male patients in the state hospital, which makes the total number of white male attendants 37. Likewise, we have added five young women to the staff of nurses in charge of our white female patients, raising the total number of white female nurses now employed to 55. The additions to the staff of attendants and nurses were made to insure the giving of adequate attention to patients. We will increase the number of nurses an attendant again if the number of patients committed to the state hospital continues to increase."

W. C. Sandy, M. D., of New Jersey, an alienist of ten years experience is medical director of the State Hospital for the Insane. On his staff are the following physicians: Dr. Annie Austria, Laurens; Dr. J. F. Munterlyn, Georgetown; Dr. D. W. Register, Georgetown; Dr. C. A. West, Kershaw; Dr. E. L. Horgor, Orangeburg; Dr. J. C. von Lane, Charleston and Dr. G. H. Peace, Sumter. A senior physician for the state hospital is yet to be chosen. Dr. Sandy and the seven members of his staff all live at the State Hospital for the Insane and devote their entire time to the patients there.

Bringing Up Father.

"What are you studying now?" asked Mrs. Johnson. "We have taken up the subject of molecules," answered her son. "I hope you will be very attentive and practice constantly," said the mother. "I tried to get your father to wear one, but he could not keep it in his eye."—Kansas City Star.

"You've had plenty of rain in your section." "Yep, hurt my crops, too." "Will you lose much money?" "No, I'll break about even by hauling autos out of mud holes."—Kansas City Journal.

At The Anderson Monday Night.

On account of the success of the Norene St. Clair Stock Co. which has just completed a weeks engagement at The Anderson, the management has secured the company for one more week, with a complete change of program nightly. With a Wednesday and Saturday matinee.

Ladies will be admitted free on Monday night under the following conditions one lady with a paid thirty cent ticket, providing the tickets are reserved before six o'clock Monday evening.

MISS EMOISE SUMMERS

Dainty Little Comedienne With Norene St. Clair Stock Co. at The Anderson

The pay for Monday night will be "Mary Jane's Pa," Henry E. Dixey's greatest success, and in which this sterling actor starred for three seasons. Mary Jane's Pa, has never been presented by any stock company in the South, and is a play that for, cleanliness, naturalness, and sparkling wit, with a few tears, a hundred laughs, and not a single blush, has not an equal in the realm of American drama. Mary Jane is a most lovable character, and will be ably handled by Miss Emoise Summers, who has made such a favorable impression here with her dainty ways and manner. Miss Lole Francis will have an emotional role, in the play, and as an emotional actress Miss Francis has no superiors in this section. Miss St. Clair and Mr. Pollock will have two decidedly strong parts, in Betsy Strong and Jonathan Strong, two rural characters that will win the approbation of the audience, and these two characters will be very instrumental in furnishing the comedy of the play.

DARKEN GRAY HAIR, LOOK YOUNG, PRETTY

Sage Tea and Sulphur Darkens So Naturally that Nobody can tell.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is messy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wright's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle for about 50 cents. Everybody uses this old, famous recipe, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger.

We are recommending our 10-1-0 and 10-2-0 and 10-2-1/2-0 for wheat and oats this fall when you sow it.

This will give it stalk and grains in the head, and that it what you want in grain. If you will sow five acres in wheat and five in oats this fall, after preparing the land well and fertilizing it well with either of these goods, you will find it advantageous. The 10-2-1/2-0 is an especially fine goods for grain. Let us hear from you.
