

Russian Reserves From Manchuria

Harbin, Manchuria, Nov. 13.—Russia's last call for reservists took 3,000 men from this city, which has a population of 30,000 inhabitants. Although Manchuria is not Russian territory and Harbin is nominally a Chinese city, Russian control of the railways and other great corporations, which are developing North Manchuria, has made the line between Siberia and Manchuria very imaginary. For many months after the war began Manchuria did not feel the effects of the struggle, but recently it has fallen heavily under the grip of war. Troop and supply trains, which are robbing this new country of its settlers, its livestock and its grain, pass through the city constantly. Scarcely a home in Harbin has escaped the last sweeping call for reservists and recent casualty lists bear the names of many young Russians who left Manchuria to fight for their emperor. All business in Manchuria not directly connected with war supplies is practically at a standstill. The staffs of business firms have been depleted and in many offices the work is being carried on chiefly by young Danes and other European neutrals.

Before the Russo-Japanese war there were few settlers in this part of Manchuria and Siberia. Since that time the Russian government has offered very favorable terms to prospective landowners and at great cost has located many peasant farmers in Siberia, near the Manchurian border. These men were carried east with their families at very low rates. Immigrant lodgings were afforded at various points along the railway and the government advanced large sums of money to get the new farmers started.

Now the very men who were brought to Manchuria at such great expense and pains are being torn from their new prairie homes to join the army. But there is little grumbling on the part of the stolid peasants. They do not question a call from Petrograd. The same power which made it possible for them to acquire a farm in this new country now demands their service and they start for training camps with the blessing of the priests who have their complete confidence.

The reservists from various towns along the western part of the Trans-Siberian railway are taken chiefly to Harbin or Vladivostok for mobilization. At nearly every station reservists and their families are waiting for orders. The government has provided chapels in many of the railway stations located far from a Russian church. Traveling priests hold services in these occasionally, and at this time they are busily holding masses for the men about to leave their families for the front.

At one station, east of Harbin, the correspondent of The Associated Press saw an open air mass held for 800 men who were about to enter a troop train. The men were closely grouped about the priest, with the long beard and hair, common to the clergy of the Russian church. He wore a yellow satin robe, richly embroidered in gold and held aloft a golden cross which reflected the rays of the sun, which was just setting at the edge of the vast prairies behind him. The reservists chanted the responses with unwavering voices and listened with rapt attention to the priest. Their religious fervor was shown especially by the eagerness with which they pressed forward to have their brows moistened with holy water after the priest had pronounced the benediction. Many of the reservists led their sons forward with them so they might stand together before the priest and receive his blessing.

Throughout the service the wives, mothers and sisters of the reservists stood at a respectful distance and listened intently to the inspiring singing of their menfolk. They had no part in it and manifested more of the enthusiasm shown by the robust men, standing with bared heads, completely under the sway of their spiritual adviser whose intensity of manner was heightened by his unusual garb. No man could have more closely approached the appearance of the great artist's conception of Jesus Christ and the priest's inspiring influence upon the peasants starting upon such an unhappy mission was little less than miraculous.

Even the tearful embraces of wives and mothers did not dampen the ardor of the men, who bravely answered the warning whistle of the waiting engine and sang the Russian hymn as the train whisked them off to an uncertain fate.

Every troop car contains an icon, a brass picture of Jesus Christ, the Virgin Mary, or one of the Saints. Usually a candle is kept burning near this after the custom of the orthodox Russian home. The soldiers seem to find great comfort in their religion, and on their long ride across Siberia, may be heard chanting hymns more frequently than other songs.

LANDER COLLEGE

The all teachers' recital will be given next Wednesday evening the 18th. This occasion is looked forward to with a great deal of interest. No doubt a large audience will greet the teachers who give the recital.

On Monday morning the college household had the opportunity of hearing a talk by Mrs. I. R. Graham, a missionary at home from the Presbyterian mission in China. Long residence in the Orient has given her a thorough knowledge of these interesting people. Her words were most impressive. She told us that "foot binding was dead." That this strange custom had been broken down utterly by the persistent persuasion of missionaries. She also said the education of women was rapidly growing in that far-off land.

Miss Helen Hill was an interesting visitor at Lander College last Tuesday. She made a strong talk to the student body telling of work for children of arrested mental development. Recently Miss Alexander, of our faculty, once a teacher in the Seguin school, had spoken on the subject and will make further address on it. The current issue of the Erotheolus has an editorial plea for a state school for mentally defective children. This proposed school is the thing Miss Hill is advocating. It should be established by our state, separate from any other institution.

A large number of the students on Friday attended the flag-raising exercises at Magnolia street graded school.

Money Saving Specials In CHRISTMAS JEWELRY FOR EARLY SHOPPERS

Our Lay Away Plan
Upon the receipt of a small payment we will lay aside any article you may choose and hold it for you till you are ready.

Owing to the limited amount of floor space in our salesroom and the large amount of new Xmas Jewelry we are receiving daily, we have decided to run weekly specials for the sole purpose of inducing you to make your purchases early in the season. The inevitable rush that will come later will so tax our space that to wait on every one will be humanly impossible, unless we make some provision—and here is the provision. Each week we will offer a group of specials that (if you really care for price and quality) you cannot afford to overlook.

IVA NEWS

Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Jackson and sons, Beaty and Lewis, have returned from Augusta where they spent several days this week attending the fair.

Mrs. J. L. Sherard returned to her spending the week here.

Rev. J. Ed. Wallace of Westminster was here for a night this week with his friend and kinsman, Rev. J. R. McRee.

Rev. and Mrs. S. J. Hood, Mr. J. D. McDonald, and Mr. and Mrs. W. F. McGee are in attendance on the A. P. Synod in Duo West.

Congressman Wyatt Alken was in our town on Thursday shaking hands with his many friends.

Rural Route No. 5, from this place will be extended to near Prices Mill in Abbeville county on December 1. This will be a great convenience to the people in that community as they have been practically cut off from mail facilities for some time. They should and no doubt will show their appreciation by giving the route a liberal patronage.

On Monday night the 15th instant, there will be some special exercises held at the A. R. P. church here. The occasion will be the delivery of diplomas to seven young ladies who have completed the teachers training course in the Sunday school. Rev. J. W. Carson will deliver these diplomas and also lecture on his trip to the Holy Land.

Genetotee A. R. P. church expects to observe "Home Coming" day on the third Sunday of this month. Rev. T. Bonnar Stewart, a son of the church, will preach. One or more of the former pastors will also be present and take part in the exercises. Every member and friend of this church who has ever lived within its bounds and whose father or mother were members are cordially invited and urged to come back on that day and enjoy a day of reunion and fellowship.

In Re the Lawyers.

In New York city last Friday justice of the appellate court disbarred thirteen lawyers, suspended seven from practice for a year or more, censured six and preferred charges against 10 others to official referees. The number of lawyers in New York city is about 15,000 as compared with only 1,000 in the state of South Carolina.

It is scarcely in the memory of living man that a lawyer has been disbarred in South Carolina. Seldom is a South Carolina lawyer officially disciplined in any way.

Is the level of professional conduct of South Carolina lawyers incomparably higher than that of New York lawyers, or—

Is the bar of New York more vigilant, positive and severe in the enforcement of the rules of correct professional conduct upon its members? One prefers, of course, to assume that South Carolina lawyers are superior in virtue to those of the populous and heterogeneous Yankee towns. Is the assumption safe?—The State.

Bryan's Book Barred.

William Jennings Bryan's latest book, "British Rule in India," which has had a wide circulation in his recent peace propaganda, was ordered excluded from the mails to India today by Postmaster Charles W. Fay.

Attributing the widespread revolt of the Hindus against British rule in part to this book the British government of India has asked the United States government not to accept the book in any language for mailing into India.

Bryan's book an arraignment of the British government in India is based on personal investigation there some years ago. Bryan charges that the British with the aid of the native princes have been exploiting the people to the extent of driving millions of the Hindus into famine every year.

After sending many copies of the pamphlet to India from here, Ram Chandra, editor of The Hindu Gadar, received the following notice from Postmaster Fay:

"I have to inform you that the government of India has prohibited the importation into British India of any copy of the pamphlet entitled 'Anga' (Gawah), published by Yugar P. Ashram, San Francisco, U. S. A., whatever may be the language in which the pamphlet referred to may be printed.

"Under these circumstances, it will be necessary for this office to decline to accept for mailing to British India copies of the pamphlet referred to."—San Francisco Dispatch.
