

READY TO HELP LOCAL SOLDIERS IF NEEDED

BUSINESS MEN OF CITY HOLD HOOD MEETING AT CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

TO VISIT BOYS

Committee Will Go to Columbia to Talk Matter Over With Militiamen and then Act

Several of the leading business men of Anderson met in the rooms of the chamber of commerce yesterday afternoon at 6 o'clock for the purpose of devising a plan whereby a "privates' luxury and necessity" fund, for the boys of Anderson county who responded to the call for border duty, might be raised. Because of the new turn the border situation has taken it was decided that no definite action was necessary until a committee of business men could talk with the militiamen at Camp Moore, Styx, and learn just what they thought of the matter; also, whether or not it had been determined definitely that the South Carolina National Guard would be called to Mexico.

The original idea of the business men behind the movement was to raise a club of 100 local residents who would subscribe $5 monthly to such a fund. It was the consensus of opinion of these in attendance that there would be no difficulty in raising sufficient money to provide for the boys, and in the event they actually go to the front such action will be immediately taken.

Other cities are already soliciting subscriptions for a fund to aid the soldier lads; notably, Augusta, Ga. That city has raised among its business men $700 and the fund is daily growing. Atlanta has also started such a movement, and similar contributions will likely be started all over the country; within the next week or ten days.

Interesting Sidelights To The Camp News Tell Of Doings Of Anderson Folk

Several newspaper men are members of the South Carolina militia now stationed at Styx, among them being C. C. Hall, of The Intelligencer. It had been planned by the various newspapers to have members of their editorial force who went to Mexico make reports to their respective papers, but it is now learned from an official source that militiamen will not be allowed to send out press dispatches. Regular correspondents of the different news associations will accompany the army and will send out dispatches passed upon by the war news censor.

The following from Camp Styx will be interesting in that connection:

Camp Moore, Styx, June 29.—Among the newspaper men in camp, not in their professional capacities but as soldiers, are: Robert E. Gonzales of The State, machine gun company, Second Regiment, John Elliott Puckett of The State, Troop A, cavalry (Charleston Light Troop); A. Floyd Littlejohn of the Charleston News and Courier, Troop A, cavalry (sergeant); H. A. Rogers of the Charleston Evening Post, Washington Light Infantry, Second Regiment, Clement Hall of the Anderson Intelligencer, machine gun company, First Regiment. All of these are privates with the exception of Sergt. Littlejohn. Regulations explicitly forbid any member of the military establishment, whether officer or enlisted man, from acting as a correspondent. Newspaper men accompanying the field forces are formally certificated, are required to wear olive drab and bear no insignia except a brassard of buff of white, having on it the letter G, which is worn around the left arm. They are subject to military regulations and are entitled to the privileges of commissioned officers.

Careers of Anderson Men.

Interesting sidelights to the real happenings at Camp Moore, Styx, are accounts given of the careers of Anderson men. A story sent out from Styx, that will be of peculiar interest to the people of Anderson, is given as follows:

Camp Moore, Styx, June 29.—First Sergeant W. A. Hudgens of the First Regiment machine gun unit was at Jacksonville with the South Carolina troops during the Spanish-American war and shortly afterward raised a company at Honea Path, of which he was elected captain; the war ended, however, before the company could get into service. Joe J. Trowbridge of Anderson, who was among the active promoters of the machine gun unit, was also a volunteer in the affair of '98.

Capt. B. B. Gossett, commanding the First Regiment machine gun company, got leave today for a short visit to his home station, leaving the company in command of First Lieut. Ralph Ramer.

Major Miller, medical corps, U. S. A., who is supervising the examination of the South Carolina troops, and Capt. Gossett at that time a lieutenant in the marine corps, were both on duty at Camp Columbia, near Havana several years ago, when a West Indian hurricane severely damaged that post. Capt. Gossett was officer of the guard had in his charge nearly 40 prisoners. These he set at large during the storm lest they be killed by the collapse of the guard tents, but next day they all returned to durango.

Interesting Relic Of Mexican War Days Is Now Owned By A Resident Of Anderson

Probably the most interesting relic of Mexican war days ever seen in Anderson—a handsome medal presented to a member of the famous Palmetto Regiment—is in the possession of Mrs. E. M. Griffin, of this city. The medal was presented to her uncle, Hazel Hardwick, one of three brothers who went from Chester county to Mexico as members of the regiment that will ever live in the annals of American wars.

The medal is a handsome affair and a work of art. Just when it was presented to the original owner, is not known, but it is supposed that similar medals were presented to all the members of the Palmetto Regiment some time after their return from the Mexican War. The medal appears to be made of silver and is about three inches in diameter and probably a quarter of an inch thick. It is fitted into a handsome velvet case. On one side of the medal appears the seal of the state of South Carolina, this being executed in bar relief of the finest workmanship. Around the outer edge of the medal appears the following well known motto: "Animus Abasque Parati Dum Spem." Underneath these words appear the well known names: "Dickinson, Butler, Gladden." The inscription "E Pluribus Unum" appears on the streamer surmounting the palmetto tree of the state coat-of-arms. About the center of the medal the following words are engraved: "To the Palmetto Regiment." On one of the shields leaning against the palmetto tree is engraved the date 1846, while on the other shield appears the date 1847. At the bottom of the design is engraved the name of Hazel Hardwick, to whom the medal was originally presented.

The reverse side of the medal shows a squad of seamen or soldiers standing under a fort from a small boat. This scene is supposed to depict an incident at Vera Cruz on the occasion of the occupation of that port during the Mexican war. On the outer edge of this side of the medal appears the names of important battles of the Mexican war, namely, Vera Cruz, Contreras, Chapultepec, Chapultepec, Gaitia de Baten. It was at the battle of Chapultepec that the famous Palmetto Regiment covered itself with glory.

This interesting relic was presented to Mrs. Samuel Blair, mother of Mrs. E. M. Griffin, by her brother, Hazel Hardwick, some time after he returned from the Mexican war. Blair kept the medal for years, and then it passed into the possession of Mr. Griffin. Mrs. Blair has three brothers in the Palmetto Regiment, but only one of them, Hazel, survived the first conflict with Mexico.

AS HE ARRIVES HERE CAPT. HENDERSON GETS CALL BACK TO CAMP

SOME SPECULATION AS TO SUDDEN ORDERS FOR HIS RETURN.

TO LEAVE TODAY

Lieut. Bradshaw Also Ordered Back to Camp—Come Here as Recruiting Officers.

Capt. R. D. Henderson, who organized the Anderson Volunteers in Anderson and surrounding territory, and who was on Wednesday of this week commissioned by the United States war department as a special recruiting officer, to be stationed in the Piedmont section of South Carolina, returned to Anderson last night for the purpose of establishing here a recruiting office, and upon arrival received instructions from Acting Brigadier General Blythe to return immediately to Columbia.

Capt. Henderson said he was without the slightest information as to why he was called back to Columbia, and the order came as a surprise to him. He will leave over the Blue Ridge railway at 9 o'clock this morning for Camp Moore, Styx. He stated that it was his present intention to stop over in Greenwood and arrange for transportation for several recruits lined up by Messrs. Pearman and Tribble, who recently were working for new men at that place. Lieut. Bradshaw, who came to Anderson Wednesday afternoon for the purpose of recruiting new men, was also called back to Columbia and will leave this morning with Capt. Henderson.

Capt. Henderson reported the Anderson Volunteers, as well as the other boys stationed at Camp Moore, as being in fine spirits. "The Anderson Volunteers, to be known in the future as Company K of the First S. C. Regiment, are the pride of the camp," he said. It was a much discussed fact that the company was organized, transported to the state camp and sworn into United States' service in 36 hours after a call for a new company was received in Anderson," continued Capt. Henderson.

As is well known here Adjutant General Moore telegraphed Capt. Henderson Sunday night to get together another company, and practically all of the recruiting work was done on Monday, the volunteers leaving Tuesday morning with 66 men. On Wednesday at noon, less than 36 hours later, they were put into United States' service.

Capt. Henderson said he was commissioned by Capt. Graham, U. S. A., whom he said was higher in authority than any man at Camp Moore. He said Major von Kreskow, an Austrian, is in charge of the Anderson Volunteers.

"There's a frightful rush about Camp Moore, especially among the higher officers," Capt. Henderson said. "Capt. Graham barely had time to review our company, as he had so many other urgent duties to perform. I was told that he had not slept more than two hours in 24 since taking charge of the camp, and many of the other officers have been just as busy."

As there were no startling developments in the Mexican situation, so far as the general public had been informed up to that time Capt. Henderson received orders to return to camp, there is some speculation as to just what situation has arisen to necessitate his sudden return. It was suggested by some that the officials at Camp Moore possibly had information that would mean the sudden departure of the South Carolina guards to the border, although up to midnight no such report had been received in Anderson.

UNION MILLS TO GIVE BIG PICNIC

Public Invited to Big Festival at Jolly Spring July 4th.

Union Mills of Anderson county will hold a big picnic at Jolly Spring on Tuesday, July 4th. The general public is cordially invited and a special invitation is extended to all candidates for public office and to the management of the mills.

Up to this time no 4th of July celebrations for the city of Anderson have been announced. It is reported that picnic trips will be made over the F. & N. to Williamston and other points on that day.
