WINNSBORO, S. C. WEDNESDAY, MAY 16, 1906.

ESTABLISHED 1844.

MEMORIAL EXERCISES

Largely Attended by Veterans from All Parts of the County-- Col. Lumpkin Captivates His Audience--Crosses of Honor Awarded 183 Veterans.

Memorial Day was a memorable day in the history of Winnsboro and of Fairfield county. It was truly a veteran's day and they were here from all parts of the county to enjoy it. And from the many expressions that were heard on every hand throughout the day, they did enjoy it and that to the fullest. From the time that the school children of Mt. Zion first made their appearance in the front of the line of the veterans that was forming at the corner of College and Congress streets, as the town clock was striking 10, till the ladies, as the sun was sinking in the west, returned from the cemeteries, where they had placed their beautiful floral tributes on the graves of the heroes, whose memory they thus honored, everything seemed to move without a flaw and the exercises in all their details were well nigh perfect. The town had been given over wholly to the veterans, and however much it was a pleasure for them to enjoy the courtesies that were extended, it was no less a pleasure to the good people of this community to contribute to making the day one long to be remembered by them on account of the delightful social intercourses.

The opening feature was the appearance of the pupils of Mt. Zion in line of march from the school building to the court house. The larger girls led the way, the two fore-most each waving a Confederate flag. Then followed the pupils of the lower grades, each pupil carrying a beautiful bouquet of flowers that was to be used in the decorations that afternoon. They marched in splendid order and made a most impressive scene, one that brought the old Rebel yell out in voluminous force.

Behind the Mt. Zion pupils came the veterans, who had been formed in line of march by the marshal of the day, Capt. W. G. Jordan, who still possesses the military spirit in a marked degree and is a master of a body of soldiers. The old soldiers too, as they marched, though many of them gave evidence of the passing years, manifested no little of the martial spirit of years gone by, when they marched upon the field of battle.

At the stand in the court house yard J. E. McDonald, master of ceremonies, took charge of the exercises and after music by the band Rev. C. E. McDonald in a most impressive manner invoked the blessings of the God of hosts on these survivors of the Lost Cause and upon their sons and daughters. Then followed a song, "Tenting on the Old Camp Ground," by the pupils of Mt. Zion.

The address of welcome was made by Capt. H. A. Gaillard, the old hero, who is still loved and honored by his comrades of former years and there was in his language such a tenderness of feeling that every one must have felt that the warm spoken words were truly utterances from the heart. The welcome was indeed cordial and eloquently and feelingly spoken, just a suitable expression of the real feelings of the community in having these honored guests in our midst.

"Dixie" by the Mt. Zion pupils was the next number and when they had concluded, the band then struck up the same strain and there followed such a cheering as only Dixie produces.

Mr. McCants in his introduction of Col. Lumpkin, the orator of the day, was most happy. He was at his best, and, in keeping with the spirit of the day, he paid beautiful tribute to the heroism of the soldiers and the part the women had played in immortalizing their brave deeds. Col. Lumpkin was greeted with a great round of applause when he arose and with an even greater applause when he took his seat after a short, but most forcible and most eloquent address. No wonder this son of Georgia is so much in demand for these gatherings of the old soldiers, for he is just full of the sentiments of patriotism that still burn within their breasts and gives utterance to these lofty thoughts in a manner that is ever so simple and yet ever so captivating. Any synopsis of his address would be an injustice. It was a great treat to his old comrades to hear from him again such beautiful references to their courageous deeds and to the noble sacrifices of their mothers, wives and sisters; and surely such eloquent words did not fall upon the ears of his younger hearers without arousing in them a nobler conception and a deeper appreciation of what their fathers and mothers went through in those trying days.

A number that was not on the program, though none the less enjoyable, was the expression of thanks to Winnsboro on the part of the veterans, which was made by that son of Fairfield who is still honored at his old home, Capt. R. H. Jennings, state treasurer.

Immediately after the speaking was over the veterans were lined up in the street in front of the court house and as the names of the 183 veterans for whom crosses had been secured were called, each veteran stepped two paces to the front, the line containing 137. Thus formed they made an impressive sight and while still in line their Crosses of Honor were pinned upon them by the following young ladies from John Bratton Chapter of the Daughters of the Confederacy: Misses Elizabeth Cureton, Mary E. Ellison, Isabelle Douglass, Mamie Jordan, Anna Beaty, Theo Rabb, Bessie McMaster, Laura Gerig, Marie McCants, Tirza Ketchin, and Maggie Neil.

It was just 12 o'clock when this interesting exercise was concluded and the hour till dinner was spent by the old veterans in a quite social way. At 1 o'clock the veterans were again formed in line and marched to the DesPortes building, where the ladies, assisted by a committee of gentlemen, had left nothing whatever undone for their comfort or their enjoyment. The dinner was not only an elaborate and bountiful one, but served in such an easy home-like manner by the maidens in waiting that it seemed that every one had personal attention and that it was just one great big family set down to one common table and that was just what it was. After the veterans had passed out of the building more than 150 others came in and partook of what remained and still there were bucketsful taken up.

At 6 o'clock in the afternoon the ladies, in keeping with a beautiful custom that has prevailed for years, went to the various cemeteries and decorated the graves of the Confederate dead. It was noticeable that many of the children assisted in this most beautiful tribute.

And when the exercises of the day were over there was but one sentiment on the part of the visitors and that was that Winnsboro had done herself proud. And on the part of the home people there was rejoicing that it had been done and the determination that it must be done again another year.

Dixie, a National Hymn.

In referring to the matter of a "national hymn," the New York Sun recently declared rightly that such a thing was not a matter of law nor of congressional or other kinds of resolutions, but that a real national hymn is one which the people will spontaneously accept. In commenting upon the subject, the New Bedford Mercury, a New England paper, says: "If the truth is told about everybody with a musical ear has a sneaking preference for 'Dixie.' It can be whistled and sung with satisfaction, while the 'Star Spangled Banner' lacks the quality which pleases the masses and is quite unsingable. There is nothing more uninspiring than to hear an average company of people drone the 'Star Spangled Banner.' If this be treason, make the most of it."

There is no question about that paper being entirely correct. "Dixie," stirs up the Southern heart especially, but is almost as popular in the North and elsewhere as here. It strikes a responsive chord and brings forth cheers wherever played or sung. It seems to fill the bill, according to the standard laid down by The Sun. The Savannah News says the words of "Dixie" are not so inspiring, but the music is all right. If we are to have a national hymn to be sung at popular assemblages some poet can grind out words to fit the tune and maybe to inspire, so let it be "Dixie."—Columbia Record.

Letter to W. R. Rabb & Co.

Winnsboro, S. C.

Dear Sirs: What is lumber worth? "Depends on the lumber,"—"what sort do you want?" That's how some people talk about paint. They ask: "What'll you paint my house for?" The Yankee answer is: "How do you want it painted? One coat? two coats? three coats? first-class or cheap?" The proper answer is; "I want the best paint put on as it ought to be." That's Devoe; but the usual answer is; "I want a good job; but I want it cheap." Which means; I want you to paint it for nothing. I want to be fooled. Lead-and-oil is the oldest paint used there is; not the best; it used to be best. Devoe is best since zinc came in: Devoe lead-and-zinc. Zinc costs no more than lead; and we grind by machinery. We have no patent on zinc; but nobody else is treating it right. Devoe is your paint. Yours truly

He Was the Plan.

Shortly after the Civil war Senator Vance was lecturing in Boston. "Fellow Citizens, he began, 'you are all my fellow citizens. We all belong to this great country. We of the South wanted to leave you, but you would not let us go, and now we are with you to stay. I belong to you. You belong to me.'"
A voice in the rear of the hall cried: "Aren't you the man who said one Southerner could whip ten Yankees with a cornstalk?"
Instantly Vance replied: "Yes my friend, I am the man. I said that one Southerner could whip ten Yankees with a cornstalk. I believed it then and I believe it now. The trouble was that the Yankees didn't want to be whipped that way."

Not Able To Draw It

A teacher in a public school asked her pupils to draw a picture of that which they wished to be when they grew up. The pupils went diligently to work with tablets and pencils drawing pictures, all but one small girl who sat quietly holding pencil in hand and looking down at her tablet. The teacher observed the child's silence and said: "Don't you know what you want to be when you grow up?"
"Yes, I know," said the small girl looking up, "I know I want to be married, but I don't know how to draw it."—Columbia Herald.
