WINNSBORO, S. C.

WEDNESDAY, November 2, : : : 188-

R. MEANS DAVIS, EDITOR.

J. G. S. REYNOLDS, ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

PRESIDENT GREVY'S daughter has just married one of the government attachés, rejoicing in the unfrenchy name of Monsieur Daniel Wilson.

ARTHUR weighs two hundred and fifteen pounds and David Davis three hundred and fifteen. Five hundred and thirty pounds of flesh between the United States and anarchy.

DAVID DAVIS refuses to say whether he will support Gorham or not and so both parties have postponed this knotty question by continuing Clerk Shober, a Democrat, as acting secretary.

THE word Bedlam is of English origin. In 1547 London established her first lunatic asylum, and called it Bethlehem, which was soon shortened into Bedlam, and became the synonym for noise and disorder.

THE Democrats of the Senate organized a deadlock on Thursday over the removal of the Republican postmaster at Lynchburg to make way for a Readjuster. The Republicans abandoned the field, and the Senate adjourned, leaving Arthur at liberty to make the removal after the Senate adjourns.

THE Connecticut Regiment has been in Charleston, and their reception was well befitting the proverbial hospitality of the old City by the Sea. Everything turned out to do them honor. When they return home they will be able to tell their people that the South well knows the difference between a Northern gentleman and a corpet-bagger.

IF the Readjusters decide to enter upon the warpath, the Democrats will be compelled to hire Bogardus and Carver to do their shooting. No other sportsmen in the land could hit Mahone. The renegade Senator is so emphatonous that everything about him can be seen through except his politics, and even they are thin indeed.

CONKLING always has a handy trick of getting sick about an election time, when he doesn't care about the Republican ticket. He may really be ill; but illness comes opportunely and leaves the half-breeds to elect their ticket themselves. Close observers say the election will be close in New York, but the majority may not be two thousand either way. If Kelly doesn't give away the party again it will score victory. He hasn't strength enough for anything but to keep other Democrats from winning.

EX-GOVERNOR MORGAN has been confirmed by the Senate as Secretary of the Treasury. He is seventy years old and very decrepit, but is a gentleman of high integrity and a good financier. Governor Morgan, years ago, gave Arthur a start: hence his present position. The rest of the Cabinet, except MacVeagh, will probably retain their places until the regular session. MacVeagh is intensely disinterested and he refuses to be beholden to Arthur or to share in the spoils. MacVeagh it was who started the prosecutions of the Star Route gang, and he has this glory. He might fall to marry them, so he retires with his present laurels.

PENNSYLVANIA is in a mild political furore. The Democrats have been whipped out so badly in the past few elections that the Republicans expected a walk-over in November, so the leaders forgot their prudence and put up a Cameron man, and one identified with a good many frauds, for treasurer. Thereupon State Senator Wolfe, the anti-ring and anti-corruption leader of the better Republicans, held a convention of one and nominated himself for the place. The organs laughed at him, but his canvass has been so vigorous that it is thought nothing can prevent the election of the Democrat through Republican divisions. Wolfe expects to put the finishing blow to the Cameron-Grant influence in Pennsylvania this fall.

A NEW paper has been started in Washington called the American Inquisitor. From the fact that Jeremiah Black, Alex. Stephens and Lamar are said to be among its managers, its thorough Democracy and ability should [illegible] Rosa Letters, a skillful [illegible] cannot be unquestioned. It will aim to be philosophic and statesmanlike. Such an exponent of Democratic principles is needed. One of the first numbers of the Register gives the Republican platform of 1860, which would easily be mistaken for a Democratic platform of the present day. Republicanism of 1881 has hardly anything in common with the Republicanism of Seward and Lincoln. Those worthies would open their eyes could they hear Conkling or Logan or Grant in a political speech.

A DESPATCH to the News and Courier emphatically denies a statement made by Colonel Randall that two-thirds of the Democratic Senators opposed the selection of Bayard, but that he changed the office as a right and it was reluctantly conceded to him. We should like to hear from Colonel Randall: for the charge made by him is inconsistent with Senator Bayard's whole record, in which he has shown himself singularly oblivious of personal aggrandizement in his political course. It is hinted that the Georgia Senators find Bayard in their way, hence the attacks on him by some Georgia newspapers. The Augusta Chronicle is an admirer of Bayard, but the Constitution has made several disgraceful attacks upon him. The Chronicle is a much better and higher paper in every way than the Constitution, though Colonel Randall, in his Washington correspondence, does get a little "off" in his politics sometimes.

The Monroe Doctrine Revived.

Secretary Blaine has resurrected the old Monroe doctrine which had been quietly reposing almost since the day when Monroe gave the European countries to understand that no part of America should thereafter be subjected to British colonization. When Maximilian attempted to found an empire in Mexico the United States had its hands full attending to the [illegible] and he was deposed and [illegible] the United States had had more than one opportunity of telling him to be off.

De Lesseps' scheme of digging a canal across the Isthmus of Panama has furnished the pretext for Secretary Blaine's manifesto. He has no objection to the canal, and he deems it of paramount importance that this canal be neutral and open to all nations; but the point he makes is that the United States have bound themselves by treaty with the United States of Colombia to secure this neutrality; and that European nations have nothing to say about it. We will not suffer England and France to enter into a compact of neutrality, because this would be recognizing their right to interfere in American questions.

The great European Powers have repeatedly united in agreements, such as guarantees of neutrality touching the political condition of States like Luxemburg, Belgium, Switzerland and parts of the Orient, where the localities were adjacent or where the interests involved concerned them nearly and deeply. Recognizing these facts, the United States has never offered to take part in such agreements or to make any agreements supplementary to them. While thus observing the strictest neutrality with respect to complications abroad, it is the long settled conviction of this government that any extension to our shores of the political system by which the Great Powers have controlled and determined events in Europe would be attended by danger to the peace and welfare of this nation.

Secretary Blaine adds that this government desires peace with all the world, as is shown by her small army and navy; but it must be understood that Europe must keep on her side of the fence.

This letter will not cause a quarrel, as nobody cares much to fight at this time.

Dress Reform in England.

That woman rules the world has long been acknowledged, but that woman's caprice in dress is a most potential factor in determining the industrial status of a nation has not generally been sufficiently recognized. A striking instance of this truth is furnished by reference to British statistics. In 1870 the number of sheep in the United Kingdom numbered about thirty-one millions, and in four years they had almost incredibly increased to nearly thirty-five millions, or a million a year. Now, instead of reaching forty millions the number has diminished to only thirty millions. The revenue from wool has fallen off also about fifty per cent., or twenty-five million dollars, so that the entire wool trade is languishing. The greatest fall in price has been on long or "lustre" wool. The explanation of this is that eight or ten years ago lustrous wool cloths were almost universally used by English women, and to a large extent by ladies of other countries. Since 1874 the French ladies have adopted close fitting, clinging garments, and discarded British stuffs for a sombre and dull material principally of French manufacture. Not long after English ladies were found following the fashion and attiring themselves in foreign fabrics, to the abandonment of lustrous garments and the annihilation of British wool manufacturers. Mills are now idle, wool has fallen to half its price, and the people are clamoring about hard times, and all because a certain style of fabric is prescribed by ladies of fashion. The poorer classes have also discarded woolen fabrics and dress in showy, insubstantial "shoddy," a mixture of all sorts of material.

A movement is now on foot in London under the lead of Lady Bective and several members of the Royal Family to return to old lustrous and British fabrics. A number of dressmakers and tailors have joined the movement, and it is again becoming common to see ladies in all grades of society wearing alpacas, mohairs and other fabrics of the lustre type. The reform will also embrace the use of Scotch and Irish stuffs. The movement on the part of these ladies is wise and patriotic, and they will be fully repaid if they again see an important branch of British industry again revived through their efforts.

The Confederate Bond Craze.

The demand for Confederate Bonds has reached Winnsboro, and on Saturday the bank was offering six dollars a thousand for them for parties in other cities. It is difficult to diagnose this bond mania. Certain it is that neither the Federal government nor any of the Southern [illegible] will ever pay anything on the Confederate debt. One explanation is that at the close of the war a deposit was left by the Confederate government in the Bank of England, which has been stated differently at from one to ten million dollars, more probably the former amount. Great Britain offered to turn the money over to the Federal government provided it would also assume the liabilities due to British holders—an offer which Uncle Sam declined to consider. The money is still in the Bank of England. Mr. Jefferson Davis will visit England soon, and ex-Secretary Benjamin is already there, and some say an effort will be made either to have them allowed to draw the money as "survivors", as it were, or else to get the British Courts to apportion the money out among Confederate bondholders. As over five hundred millions in bonds were legitimately issued and heaven knows how many more forged, the chance of realizing anything much from the small deposit in the Bank of England is absurd in the extreme.

Another theory is that speculators want something to gamble upon, and that worthless stock is as good as anything else for that purpose. Certain utterly worthless Honduras bonds and such other wild-cat securities have been made to realize something recently in some way by British bondholders; and as these capitalists are very gullible, the Confederate bond bait is used to catch them with again.

Financial Vezmors predict that after a while a public meeting will be gotten up at Richmond or somewhere to talk about redeeming these bonds; that this will be announced with flourish of trumpets to John Bull, and that all the worthless Confederate bonds will be unloaded across the water at an infinitely small price, it may be, but at enough to be better than nothing. We advise persons having bonds to get rid of them as the craze will soon subside, and they will be worthless again. They may remain a while at present prices; they may go up to ten or fifteen dollars, or they may drop to nothing in a day. Bondholders can weigh the chances for themselves. Whatever is given will be a purely fancy price, and we cannot undertake to gauge the caprice or gullibility of the would-be purchasers.

THE LIEN LAW.

Its Moral, Social and Religious Aspect.

III. While the great secret of individual prosperity is self-reliance, the Lien Law encourages and cultivates a disposition to rely upon others. Giving a lien is in some respects like buying upon an open account. We all know how prone we are to buy what is not really necessary, simply because we can get it on credit, hence most people find their account at the close of the year larger than they expected, however just it may be. True he intends to pay, but his reliance is not upon what he has made, so much as it is upon his name, upon the merchant and what he may do in the future. The aggregate of individual prosperity constitutes national prosperity, and individual prosperity must be in proportion as a man relies upon himself, not merely in respect of the future, but at the present. While the Lien Law exists the idea that we need not be so very careful about providing this year for the next, for we can give a lien next spring and get what we shall need, will have more or less influence upon our people. We must learn to stand alone, before we can prosper—we must learn to walk without holding to something. When a young man marries, and lives for a few of the first years off his relations, he is seldom of any account. I believe if our people were driven by the abolition of the Lien Law and the whole credit system to rely upon themselves they would soon learn to provide their own supplies for the next year. In the days of our prosperity the question was, who can keep out of debt? Who can borrow money? Who can give a lien? Quer—y How long before a farmer, paying at the rate of 90 per cent. per annum on his supplies, will be able to do without a lien?

IV. Its social influence, though generally unobserved, exerts a telling power upon us in all the relations of life. (a) It unmans the man. It leads him to loose confidence, to certain extent, in himself. He feels much more like a slave working for others, than a free man working for himself. However honest one's intentions may be, we all know the difference between working to pay a debt for what has already been consumed, and working to get money to buy whatever we may need. The frame of mind is different, however just the debt and however honest our intentions. (b) Then in proportion as we lose confidence in ourselves, others (even our families) lose confidence in us. The few men of our county, who raise their own supplies and give no liens, (as is the case now, with some living in the northwest corner of our county,) are considered among the safest and most solvent men we have. Their word is generally their bond, and, if for the sake of temporary convenience, (not for the want of money) they desire credit, our merchants would give it them without any other bond than their word. In fact, the whole lien system implies either a doubt of a man's veracity, or a doubt of his ability to pay. A man who raises his own supplies is a freeman, and merits, and generally receives, the confidence of his neighbors. (c) Being in debt has an almost imperceptible and yet a powerful influence upon our disposition. It often prevents that cheerfulness necessary to the enjoyment of life. It generally renders our disposition to a great extent sour and morose. This often leads to an unkind word or an unkind answer, and this is often the first step to a whole series of troubles either in our families or with our neighbors. Many don't believe this, but it is true. Our disposition has much more to do with our happiness or misery than most persons are aware of. If any doubt this, he need only look around him and ask what dispositions succeed, and what fail. This point ("c") is not a little matter, but a great one. Great because great results flow from it. If it be true that by established laws great things grow out of little ones, then, by necessary sequence, those little things are great.

One more number, Messrs. Editors, on my last point, and then I shall thank those who have read these articles, and ask pardon of those who have not.

B. F. C.

Another Communication on the Same Subject—A Reply to Mr. Corley's Second Article.

Messrs. Editors: I have for several years been opposed to the Lien Law. In fact, I had a conversation with our much esteemed Senator two years ago about the evil tendency of the law. I was, therefore, particularly anxious to read Mr. Corley's No. 1, after that grand flourish of a preamble which announced that crushers might be expected in his next. Well, sirs, when No. 1 appeared I felt as if a whole barrel of cold water had been emptied on me at once. Allow me to ask Mr. Corley one arithmetical conundrum. If he purchased [illegible] store for one dollar, and found out one hour after that he could get the style of hat from another merchant for seventy-five cents, would he multiply the difference twenty-five cents, by the difference in the time—sixty minutes, and then by twenty-four and again by three hundred and sixty-five, to determine the interest he paid one merchant in excess of the other? Whately to the contrary notwithstanding, I cannot help thinking that persons who reason in this way have got the cart before the horse. A lien account is a transaction for a year's supplies. Its usual duration is about eight months. The average time, therefore, for which the merchant will charge an extra per cent. on his goods will be four months. The per cent. usually charged in excess of cash prices is about twenty-five. Now the twenty-five per cent. additional is not a monthly interest to be multiplied by twelve to determine what interest a farmer may pay if he got some of his goods, one month prior to the expiration of his lien. It is simply twenty-five per cent. over cash prices for the time extended and risks taken, and not due until November 1st. The merchant usually pays one per cent. per month for money to do this kind of business. He extends an average credit of four months to the farmers. The money he uses, therefore, costs him four per cent. Deduct this from twenty-five per cent—leaving twenty-one per cent.—and you have the merchant's profit. He has to collect the whole amount let out. He has, further, to loose nothing on cotton taken in payment of liens. If ye doesn't attend to both of these pretty closely, the twenty-one per cent. and likely some mortgaged property will go where the woodbine twineth."

I am still, however opposed to the Lien Law, even with No. 1 staring me in the face. I believe it to be a hapha[illegible] zard way of doing business. I believe it engenders carelessness and carelessness is the parent of laziness. I believe our labor is rapidly becoming worthless. I believe worst of all, that our lands are not worth within twenty-five per cent of what they were five years ago.

INSURE YOUR LIFE

IN THE

Presbyterian Mutual Assurance Fund.

You have to pay but little for the sum which you receive, and only what the insurance actually costs.

You are sure that your family will get the sum at your death, as by special clause in the charter it is exempt.

No risk to run, nor any possibility of the corporation failing, as do other insurance companies.

You know what you pay each assessment for.

You can insure in this when you could not in a more expensive one.

You know there will be no long process of law and expenditure of means to obtain the sum at your decease.

You receive a benefit of five dollars a week when sick or unable to attend to business.

It is the easiest and safest way to secure so large an amount for the benefit of your family after your death.

No millions amassed to tempt the honesty of officers.

Experience has shown that the mutual plan is feasible and the result sure.

Instead of paying out large sums to insurance companies, the money is left with each member until actually needed.

Cannot be subjected to the claims of creditors nor reached by attachment, garnishment or other process of law, so as to divert it from the family.

THE "QUEEN BESS" CORSET.

The "QUEEN BESS" Corset and Skirt Supporter is by far the most comfortable ever introduced. It is a perfect fitting corset, and has new and improved shoulder straps, easily adjusted to any desired length. It also has the immensely popular PATENT CLOTH STEEL PROTECTOR, which not only prevents the steels from rusting, but also renders it impossible to break the clasps. Warranted in every particular. FOR SALE ONLY by

THE GUANO QUESTION

Agitates the minds of the farmers as well as some of our merchants, yet MIMNAUGH furls his banner to the breeze and thunders forth matchless prices, still adhering to that principle, pay as you go, and buy your goods at MIMNAUGH'S at prices that makes the world wonder and rivalry stare aghast.

HEAR THE FAME OF MIMNAUGH:

5,000 yards Standard Calicoes, at 6¼ cents—worth 8¼ elsewhere.
2,000 yards Fancy Dress Goods, at 9 cents—worth 12½ elsewhere.
3,000 yards Fancy Dress Goods, 16¼ cents—worth 25 elsewhere.
500 yards Black Alpaca, at 18¼ cents—worth 30 elsewhere.

Twenty pieces Lubins Black Cashmeres—the only house in Winnsboro that gets them direct from headquarters. If you want a good dress that will keep its color for years, examine these goods at 40, 52½, 75, 82, 96¼ and $1.10.

FROM AUCTION.

Four hundred Ladies' Trimmed Hats—fine goods—at twenty cents on the dollar. A nice trimmed hat at 25, 40, 62½, 90, $1.17½, up to something fine at $2.00 and $2.50.

My stock of Velvets, Satins, Ribbons, Neckwear, Embroidery, Handkerchiefs, Buttons, &c., &c., are now complete and at prices far exceeding previous years.

The facilities of the two Houses—Mimnaugh Bros., at Chester, and J. L. Mimnaugh, at this point—are unsurpassed, and this season shall rush goods at prices that will eclipse all previous efforts.

J. L. MIMNAUGH.

P. S.—PARTIES INDEBTED TO ME WILL SETTLE AT ONCE AND SAVE CASH AND EXPENSE.
