Open House Surveys Draw Few Responses

By SUZIE BROWN

A majority of students completing a survey concerning 24-hour open house in dorms were in favor of the idea.

From 6,000 questionnaires distributed by the Student Senate Residence Life Committee, 1,000 were returned stating approval of the plan, while 309 opposed the idea.

Bill Kennedy, committee chairman, said the committee is preparing a bill to submit to the Student Senate to propose 24-hour visitation on an experimental basis in Bates West during the fall semester.

Each apartment in the Bates West complex would set its own regulations, Kennedy said, and if the experiment is successful, the student government may decide to propose 24-hour open house in all dorms.

Kennedy said the survey's poor response showed general apathy among the students, "even on a matter which strikes as closely to home as visitation."

"I was very disappointed in the results," Kennedy said. "The thing that got me is so many people gripe about not being able to have visitors after a certain hour, yet they did not take the time to answer the questionnaire."

The main conflict centered around rights as adults and questions of privacy, and the survey showed more males favoring the plan than females.

As to parental consent, a majority of the students said their parents would consent to the 24-hour plan.

An appropriate number of surveys was given to the government of each dorm, who were responsible for distribution among student residents, Kennedy said. No surveys were distributed at Sandwood Lake Apartments or at the old Columbia Hospital.

The highest percentage of responses came from Bates House. No surveys from the International House, Baker and Preston-Woodrow were returned.
