A Happy Gathering.

A happy gathering in honor of Mrs. Elizabeth Holder was held at the residence of her son, Mr. J. B. Holder, last Monday afternoon.

A large crowd had gathered. About 70 children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren enlivened the occasion.

Fully 100 were served dinner at the noon hour, on a long table under the spreading oaks. After all were seated a photograph was taken of the diners.

After the crowd had bountifully partaken of the good nourishment provided for them, other photographs were taken of the families present.

The people greatly enjoyed themselves in pleasant converse, story-telling, innocent games, singing, etc.

About 4 o'clock watermelon, fruits, cake, etc., were served, and the people returned to their homes rejoicing. FRIEND.

The Harmon Campaign.

A gentleman named Wheeler, a St. Louis lawyer, has been in Atlanta feeling out the situation in the interest of Gov. Harmon's presidential candidacy.

About the time of his arrival the Georgia legislature by unanimous vote invited Woodrow Wilson to address that body, and a poll of the members showed an overwhelming majority for Wilson for president.

These incidents should not discourage the Harmon missionary: Dr. Wilson lived in Georgia and married there, he has friends and relatives in all sections of the state, and his career is such that they have no reason to hesitate in the advocacy of his nomination for president.

It is pretty safe to predict that Georgia will be for Wilson in the convention of 1912; in fact, in our opinion, Georgia is the safest state of all for Wilson.

The Harmon candidacy is proceeding along intelligent and proper lines; its management is intensely practical.

A press bureau is regularly sending out Harmon literature, explaining the Harmon viewpoint and answering any criticisms or attacks.

The latest bulletin makes it plain that the Harmon forces do not propose to stir up antagonisms needlessly at this time, and that no convention indorsements will be sought which do not carry delegations.

Gov. Harmon is an astute political manager himself, and there is at his command now much valuable political talent.

While the popular interest in Woodrow Wilson shows no signs of diminution, and while the New Jersey governor's hold upon the popular confidence is increasing, instead of waning; while the boomlets of Folk, Marshall and Foss are manifesting surprising animation; while the open antagonism of Mr. Bryan is a powerful handicap to Harmon—in spite of all these considerations, the evidences are that the name of Judson Harmon will be presented to the Democratic convention of 1912 with the backing of a splendid organization in all parts of the country and with plenty of spirit and enthusiasm.

And there is nothing that can be said against the record of the Ohio governor, though there is much that may be said as to the superior availability and suitability of another candidate.

The Harmon boom, however, is well developed, adequately nourished and fully awake. It will have to be reckoned with, not inaptly says the Columbia Record.

The New Congressional Apportionment

Discussing the new apportionment of representation in the national House of Representatives, the Springfield Republican says:

"As a result of the last census and of this apportionment in accordance therewith, the southeastern part of the country and the extreme western and southwestern parts gain in voting power in the popular branch of congress and the rest of the country relatively loses."

This conclusion is based on the following interesting table which has been arranged by that paper:

Table with columns: MOUNTAIN AND PACIFIC STATES, New, Old. Rows: Montana, Idaho, Wyoming, Colorado, Utah, Nevada, Washington, Oregon, California, Total.

However, the South does not seem to have shared so badly, says the Augusta Chronicle. (Classing Texas, Arkansas and Oklahoma as Southern states, which they are, the gains of this section are nine, and are exceeded alone by the mountain and Pacific coast states.

An analysis of the above table would indicate that not only the tide of empire but also the tide of power glides westward.

Blease Says Hands Tied on Near-Beer.

Gov. Blease made Saturday a statement as to his attitude in regard to the action of the boards of county commissioners in Greenville, Darlington, Edgefield, Barnwell and Union counties, in refusing to pay the salaries of special constables or detectives, detailed by him for service in those "dry" counties, to aid the local peace authorities in enforcing the liquor laws.

Gov. Blease said: "The county commissioners in Greenville, Darlington, Edgefield, Barnwell and Union counties have refused to pay the constables or detectives detailed by me to help enforce the liquor laws.

"Detective Kitchens, of Union, wrote me about the first of the month that the county attorney, Mr. P. D. Barron, had been retained to defend the persons arrested for selling 'near-beer,' and had also advised the county commissioners to refuse to pay Detective Kitchens any salary.

"The detective asked me what he should do. I told him he had been doing good work and I would be glad to see him continue, but if the commissioners would not pay his salary I saw nothing for him to do but to quit.

"Sheriff Creech, of Barnwell, asked me to appoint a detective to help him enforce the liquor laws, but the county commissioners, whom I directed him to consult, in regard to his compensation, refused to pay the officer's salary, so Detective Nunnemaker, who had started to work there, had to quit.

"In Edgefield county Judge DeVore, who is a resident of that county, ruled that the county board did not have to pay the detective if he had sent there, so I am informed; and if he decided so in his own county he would be likely to decide likewise in other counties. "I regret that this condition exists in the state and that the county supervisors and county commissioners are taking the position that they are in reference to the pay of these officers, for it ties my hands and I can go no further, except to appeal to the regular officers and beg them to do their duty.

"Their position is forever ruining prohibition and damning the political prohibitionists, yet it seems and they think their fight is to injure me.

"However, I am not a prohibitionist: I have fought prohibition all my life, and my predictions for the past 20 years, on the stump, in Newberry county and throughout the state, that it would prove a farce, are being strongly verified every day, and I believe the position these county officers are taking, namely, that of trying to keep me from enforcing the law, will give the people just what I want and have wanted and what I have been fighting for, and am now fighting for, to-wit, dispensaries in every county in South Carolina.

"And if people will look at the deplorable financial condition of many of the so-called prohibition counties and then look at the financial balance-sheets of the counties which have dispensaries, they will see that those counties which have dispensaries are out of debt, prosperous, with money in their treasuries and having less crime committed within their borders than the so-called prohibition counties, which are poor, in debt, tax-burdened, blind tigers all over them and crime on the increase.

"And when I as governor receive these complaints and try to enforce the law, other officials refuse to obey the Carey-Cothran act and leave the tiger to roam at will.

"However, I have spoken to more people this summer than I spoke to during the entire campaign last summer, and they understand the situation, and I am satisfied my administration is pleasing not only those who put me into office but also many of those who opposed me.

"I shall continue to enforce all the laws to the best of my ability, notwithstanding the organized fight that is being made against me by other officeholders, who are my political enemies."

Too Much Influence.

We are naturally a little old-fashioned in our ways of thinking, and naturally when it comes to the school book proposition we are a stickler for the old Webster blue-back speller.

We don't believe, as a foundation for the child's start in school, that it has ever been improved upon.

But the modern idea of teaching is to rush the child through all kinds of little 'new-fangled' books, and it now takes on an average of about one book a day for a child after it passes the second or third grade, and now comes the state board, which is adopting the school books for another five years, and makes the most sweeping change ever made in the state.

At least 80 per cent. of the books adopted are new ones.

This necessarily places a heavy burden on the patrons of the public schools throughout the state and a howl has gone up about it.

State Superintendent Swearingen protests against the sweeping change, and if the matter were left to the voters and patrons of the schools his contentions would be sustained.

These big book concerns have too much influence with these officials when it comes to passing on a million dollar proposition, as is the case when such sweeping changes are made.—Marlboro Mimes.

Strongest Animal Force.

Ask ten persons what is the strongest animal force in the world, and nine will reply that is a blow from a lion's paw. The tenth man may have had a checkered career and expressed the belief, based on experience, that it is a kick of a Missouri mule.

As a matter of fact, the blow of a whale's tail is incomparably the strongest animal force; a blow delivered by a full-grown whale placed at just the right distance would smash in the side of a wooden ship as though it were an egg-shell. The second strongest force is the kick of a giraffe.

—Mr. Jesse Morris, of Pickens and Miss Irma Hendricks, of the Oolenoy section spent Saturday and Sunday at Caesar's Head. They were accompanied by, and made part of a party consisting of Misses Irene, Ione Hendricks, Essie Kelley and Rudolph Hendricks. They had a most enjoyable time.

Mrs. L. S. Grandy, and children, of Greenwood, S. C., is visiting her sisters, Mesdames A. M. Morris and W. G. Lewis, in Pickens, and other relatives in the county.
