

Young Singing Strings Entertain Old Timers

Five hundred Clinton Mills Old Timers and their guests attended their 21st Annual gathering at Presbyterian College Dining Hall on November 28th.

Clinton Mills Vice President of Manufacturing, D.H. Roberts, served as Master of Ceremonies.

In a written welcome, in the official program President Robert M. Vance noted that the banquet "comes at a time when we can pause and give a special thanks to our Creator for our many blessings."

"The company is proud of the honor, loyalty, pride, and hard work which each "Old Timer" has demonstrated over the years," continued Vance.

The Old Timers were entertained by the Singing Strings, a talented group of musicians from Greenwood's First Baptist Church.

Executive Vice President George H. Cornelson introduced Miss Laura Hoke, Miss South Carolina Textiles. Laura talked briefly about her association with textiles as well as her textile family background.

Twenty nine incoming Old Timers were recognized as new club members by President Vance. In addition, seven employees were recognized for completing forty continuous years service during the past year.

Claude Crocker, right, and Executive Vice President George H. Cornelson explain to Miss S.C. Textiles the significance and background of the Old Timers Club.

INCOMING OLD TIMERS - Seated left to right, Doris Harvey, Inez Turner, Betty McElhannon, Gladys Hughes, Janie Sumeral, and Lucille Dunaway. Back, left to right, John Campbell, Ronald Pace, William Blackwell, James Kernells, Marie Taylor, Flem Ray, Dot Lanford, Betty Webb, John McNinch, Floyd Moore, Walter Heaton, Herman Nabors, and Vice President D.H. Roberts.

This food looks delicious.

The line moved very fast.