Bradford's Springs.
IT is a circumstance of no small importance to the citizens of this State, to have a convenient and healthy situation, to which they can have access during the Summer and Autumnal months. The Bradford Spring, at this time, exhibit such a situation. The buildings, here, are capacious and convenient; and are as well calculated for the accommodation of the delicate and infirm, as those who are in search of pleasure. The situation is, probably, one of the most eligible that this country affords. The elevation is considerably above the common level of the surface. The rise and declivity of the hill is gradual and regular; and its summit smooth and unbroken. The Springs empty out of the basis of the hill, at different apertures, where it abruptly breaks off, in almost a perpendicular descent. The water is a strong mineral. It is transparent and palatable. The ingredients which form the composition of this mineral, have not yet been accurately ascertained by chymical analysis. A few individuals have annually visited those Springs, and those alone, can form an adequate idea of the advantage which results from attending them.

The ruinous condition of the buildings in all probability, and the want of accommodation has, hitherto, prevented a number of persons from attending these Springs. But the subscriber flatters himself that he is now, well prepared for the accommodation of a number of persons. And he pledges himself to spare no exertions to render the situation of all those who attend these Springs both comfortable and agreeable.

CAMDEN School Association.
THIS School, under the direction of Mr. CARPENTER, has now commenced its fourth quarter. The unassuming merit, and great diligence of the Instructor, are conspicuous in the progress made by the Children under his care. Each quarter has hitherto produced evidence that Parents may, satisfactorily to themselves, entrust the education of their offspring to a Gentleman, whose retiring modesty bespeaks his real worth, and whose attention to the instruction of those under his care is such, as to induce us highly to recommend him to the notice of the public.

From the Richmond Compiler.
YES AND NO.
These words appear trifling in themselves—weigh them and they are as light as feathers. Unite them, and they fill but a little space. Yet there are no words in our language half as expressive and important as these little monosyllables.—On the right use of them depends the highest or most dreary portions of our life. There is scarce a scene in the many colored drama of existence in which they do not exert almost a magical power.

Scarce has the infant escaped from its nurse's arms, before he learns to distinguish between them. At that early period of our lives, when the management of our passions is in the hands of all around us, more especially of our parents, and when the habits we acquire, impart a hue to all our subsequent character, a yes or a no may have the deepest impression on our lives. An indulgent parent scarcely ever says no; a severe one never says yes. A mother who can never say a no to the importunate and capricious wants of her child, is in the fair way of ruining her offspring forever.—She has not the resolution to deny him any thing that he asks; and he becomes forward, arrogant, passionate and headstrong. The father on the other hand may nip the hand of kindness and benevolence, by an unrelenting employment of no. In what a variety of situations is our happiness dependent upon the proper use of these monosyllables.

Behold you lovely girl, whose charms win the attention of a hundred admirers. Peace dwells in her bosom; but a sly seducing admirer, beseeches her in a soft voice to walk with him by moonlight in the grove. Beware, easy maiden! what you say. On the monosyllable that flutters on your lips, depends all the happiness of your future life.—She has not the courage to say no, and she is undone forever.

A gay and thoughtless youth is pressed only for once to visit the gaming table. He has formed no taste for the dangerous amusement, but unable to resist the importunities of his friend, he consents to accompany him. One false step leads to another—and from that moment, date the ruin of Anastasio. That fatal night when the courage of virtue slept, he was plunged into dissipations and courses which ruined his peace of mind forever.

That slippery facility of disposition which dislikes to give pain by the articulation of a no, is the weakest trait in the character of a man. It is the property of a great mind to think for itself, and to do that which it thinks right. A common man again, is blown about by every breeze in nothing firm, in nothing energetic, every thing turns him from his path, every thing plunges him into embarrassment, more or less serious, according to the occasion which brings him.

"Will you endorse my friend (said the smooth Rinaldo to the smooth Philippo.) "I want your name for sixty days; and I pledge you my honor, you shall hear of it no more." Philippo, who knows the smooth and hollow character of Rinaldo as well as any body, has not the firmness to refuse him, and by one moment of irresolution, has ruined himself and his family.

It is unpleasant, nay, it is sometimes positively painful to say no.—Yes is so soft and silvery a sound,
