THE Camden Academy.

THE Buildings erected by the CAMDEN ORPHAN SOCIETY, for the accommodation of an Academy, situate in an eligible and pleasant part of the Town, are now almost complete and ready for the purpose intended. A Master is wanted, to take charge of this Academy; and the Standing Committee of the Society, are authorized to contract with a person properly qualified to fill that station. It is proposed to grant to the Master, for the use of the School, not only the Buildings, and spacious enclosed grounds belonging to the same, clear of charge, but also to furnish fire-wood in winter for the Scholars, to the value of one hundred dollars a year. And in addition to this, to pay the Master out of the Society's funds, a yearly salary of two hundred dollars. Also, to defray the expense of Premiums, to be distributed amongst the Scholars, to excite emulation, and encourage merit.

The Master will be allowed to take as many Pupils, as the Buildings will conveniently accommodate, upon the Terms, and at the Rates of tuition hereunder mentioned; and for compensation for teaching them, he must look to those with whom he shall engage. When the number of his Scholars shall exceed Forty, it will be his duty to employ a competent Assistant, or two if necessary, at his own expense. The Academy will be under the general supervising direction of the Camden Orphan Society, and under the control of the Standing Committee.

It is proposed to divide the business of instruction in separate chambers, one for the male pupils, and the other for females; and every attention is intended to be bestowed, in order to conduct in a good manner and give morals.
