TO OUR PATRONS.

In calling the attention of the public to our GAZETTE under a more general name, we have determined to omit the usual hollow professions of those independent principles, that liberal conduct, and the intellectual attainments, which will enable us not only to gratify the tastes, but inform the minds, liberalize the sentiments, and ameliorate the feelings of our readers.

We call these professions hollow, because in the majority of the instances in which they have been, and indeed are daily made, they have uniformly proved themselves fallacious and unfounded; hence, avoiding professions, we are content briefly to refer to practice.

Suffice it therefore to say, that it is the intention of the Proprietors of the SOUTH-CAROLINA HERALD, to make it a complete fund of information, and in order to effect this object to spare neither exertion or expense.

But, as in our internal economy are to be found the means of defence and the maintenance of the state, its commerce, its agriculture, and its institutions, the Proprietors of the HERALD will especially direct their attention to the development of those immutable principles of Political Economy, that thirty years ago were only to be found in the Port-Folios of the Learned; but, which unfettered by those chains with which the power, prejudices, and pride of the governors, and the weakness, ignorance, and degradation of the governed, had for ages bound them, are now likely to be carried into beneficial operation throughout the whole of Europe; principles which, aided by the convincing proofs that are about to be afforded of their practical and permanent utility, by the active and intelligent population of the most abundant countries, and the finest portions of the Eastern hemisphere, it will be the bounden duty of the governments and people of this country fully to understand, as upon their adoption alone depend, not only the domestic welfare of this Great Republic, but its rank among the nations of the earth.

To forward this great object in the course of Internal Improvement, in which our own State is embarked, no effort shall be wanting.

In stemming the torrent of official delusion; in advocating the rights of the less wealthy members of the community; in contending for the comforts of all; in endeavouring to call the attention of its readers to the public welfare; in urging the recollection of the public servants to the interests of the Districts of York, Chester, Lancaster, Kershaw, Fairfield and Sumter, the CAMDEN GAZETTE stood proudly conspicuous; and, until the establishment of the PINE-DEN GAZETTE was alone, in calling for an impartial distribution of the public Treasure.

Nor shall Literature be neglected; nor liberal Political Effusions be disregarded. True genius marks alone the path to life, And fame invites, and prompts the noble strife.

Her temples everlasting doors unbarr'd; Desert is various; various, the reward; No little jealousy, no ill tim'd sneer, No envy there is found, nor rival fear.

New Types &c. are on their way to strengthen our claims on public patronage. Prices Current, &c. will be unfornally published.
