

THE LEADER.

THE SUPPLEMENT

No man in the country can doubt what the result will be, when the constituent States shall have admitted their delegates into Congress. Although these delegates may have been chosen in the most liberal and patriotic spirit, they will not be able to do more than to carry out the will of the people. The will of the people is the only authority that can be appealed to in a free government.

The President has called for all his military and naval forces, and has ordered them to be ready to move at a moment's notice. This is a clear indication of his determination to maintain the integrity of the Union, and to suppress any rebellion that may attempt to break out.

At your hands, then, ye men of the North, and ye men of the South, I have a word to say. Give the right to the right, and the wrong to the wrong. Let us stand together, and let us stand firm.

Henry Wilson, in his speech on February 22, 1852, in the Senate, said: "I have been a member of the Senate for twenty years, and I have seen many a President. I have seen many a man who has been elected to the Presidency, and who has afterwards been found to be unworthy of the office. I have seen many a man who has been elected to the Presidency, and who has afterwards been found to be unworthy of the office."

Since the commencement of the war he has been Chairman of the Committee of Military Affairs, which has had to do with every military matter that has come before the Senate. He has also been a member of the Committee of Finance, and has had to do with every financial matter that has come before the Senate.

The President and the Cabinet are in a state of great anxiety. They are waiting for news from the front, and they are hoping that the Union will be preserved.

Yesterday I had a talk with the President, and he told me that he was very anxious to see the Union preserved. He said that he was very anxious to see the Union preserved, and he was very anxious to see the Union preserved.

A conversation with William Linn Garrison, on the 10th inst., at the meeting of the Pennsylvania Anti-Slavery Society, the following conversation was had. This was the first time that the cause of the oppressed has been so fully and so ably represented in this country.

The Herald, in its issue of the 10th inst., has a very interesting article on the "Dental Notice." It tells us that the dental profession is becoming more and more important in our country. It tells us that the dental profession is becoming more and more important in our country.

But have we not all noticed the curious fact that men go to the dentist for their teeth, and that they go to the dentist for their teeth, and that they go to the dentist for their teeth?

The "Dental Notice" is a very interesting article. It tells us that the dental profession is becoming more and more important in our country. It tells us that the dental profession is becoming more and more important in our country.
