

SOWING AND REAPING.

Sow with a generous hand,
Pause not for toil or pain;
Weary not through the heat of summer,
Nor weary not through the cold spring rain,
But wait till the autumn comes,
For the harvest of the golden grain.

OUTRAGES ON WOMEN.

The last number of the North British Review, taking for a text one of the almost daily reported cases of wife beating among the "lower orders" that are to be met with in the London papers, makes the following very just observations, which we think the reader will join with us in believing are entitled to something beyond a mere local application:

It is not to be doubted, that in the criminal annals of England, outrages upon women have of late years had a distressingly prominent position. It is no exaggeration to say, that scarcely a day passes that does not find one or more of the published cases of this description of offence, and the published—that is, the judicially investigated cases—bear but a small proportion to the unpublished. The outrage may be murder itself, or it may fall short of murder. Some wretched woman goes bleeding and staggering into court, to tell how her husband or her paramour has struck her down and trampled upon her—thrown her out of a window, or kicked her down stairs—or stabbed her with a knife—or perpetrated some act of violence on her person too gross and horrible to describe. It has become, we say, an every-day story. The details may vary, for there are many forms of cruelty on the one side and suffering on the other; but they are all written by the same strong hand in the blood and tears of feeble woman.

It cannot be denied that in all classes of society there are bad husbands. But in the upper classes men rarely lift their hands against their wives. To offer personal violence to a woman is an offence against society for which nothing can atone. Men of education and refinement do not strike women; neither do they strike one another. This is not their mode of expressing resentment. They may utter words more cutting than sharp knives; they may do things more stunning in their effects on the victim than the blows of pokers or hammers; they may kill their wives by process of slow torture—unkindness, infidelity, whatever shape it may assume—and society will forgive them. The law, too, has nothing to say to them. They are not guilty of what is recognised as an assault, because they only assail the affections—only lacerate the heart. They speak with horror of the "brutal wretches" who inflict on women blows, less painful at the time, and less abiding in their effects. But their treatment of women any better than that of these ruffians? Have they any higher sense of what is due to womanhood? They would not besmear a fair face with blood; but they would set a tender heart bleeding until it can bleed no more. They would not mar the beauty of God's handiwork, but they would soil the purity of a virgin soul. If we would see the worst type of man's cruelty to women, we must not go into the police courts where women with dishevelled hair and disfigured faces give painful evidence against their husbands, but into the best streets, after night-fall, where the unpeaking and unpeaking evidence meets us at every turn.

There are various forms of man's cruelty to women, of which wife-beating, we are assured, is not the worst. To seduce, betray, and desert a young and beautiful woman, in the first freshness and beauty of youth—to leave her to die slowly of hunger, disease, or grief, or suddenly by a leap, on a cold winter's night, from the parapet of a bridge, is to do what must be done amongst us on a much larger scale than wife-beating—also whence all those evidences of the "great sin of our cities" and it is to do it quietly and deliberately, under no irresistible provocation, and with none of those attendant excuses or palliations which are not unfairly pleaded on behalf of the poor, uneducated, ignorant man, whose neglected childhood and misguided youth are naturally and necessarily followed by a brutalized manhood. We have said that "cases" of wife-beating appeared almost every day in the public prints. Every now and then, too, the public are startled and shocked by the revelation of a "case" of the other kind—a case of cold-blooded, systematic trading in woman's ruin, of which it is evident that the aiders and abettors are not poor, uneducated, ignorant men. These published cases may be comparatively few; but every one is an unlucky member of a large private family—instead of an extensive system. It will have been gathered from the newspaper extracts, illustrative of wife-beating, which we have given above, that the more uncivilized and savage race of cruelty-mongers have a rude, ruffianly way of checking the complaints of the injured. These many fellows of the poorer classes assemble about the doors of the police court, and revile the sorrowing, and often reluctant witness, with gross epithets and loud bellowings, as the letters out of the presence of the "beak." She has to run the gamut of a crowd of heroes sympathizing with her persecutors. We confess that this, which appears to be a new manifestation, is in our eyes the worst phase of the evil. But where the wrong-doers are of a higher order, they have no need to check complaint and prevent inquiry after so primitive a fashion as this. They need but to open their purses; they can buy off inconvenient investigations. We do not mean by this that they can tamper with justice—that they can bribe the judge upon his seat, or effectually paralyze the activity of the police. But they can fence in their iniquity—can raise such barriers between their crime and the laws—as to render detection difficult and revelation rare. The wrong-doings of the poor man is as open as

The Man on the Iceberg.

"It is a man!" said the captain, handing his telescope to the mate, after a long, steady look; "and he seems frozen hard and fast to the side of the iceberg."
"Keep her away!" cried the skipper. "So—o—o. Steady!" and by thus altering our course we brought the iceberg right ahead.

The iceberg had been in sight since the weather cleared at midnight, when it looked like some high rocky headland, except that, by watching the bright stars behind it, we could see its gigantic outline swaying solemnly and majestically up and down. There was something sublimely grand in the slow stately movement of such a mass. There it floated, large enough, had it been land, to have been the dwelling place of hundreds of human beings. The lower part was of so dark a purple as to look almost black; but, higher up, it shined off to a bright azure, then to a light pale green, while on its lofty summit were long slender spires and pinnacles, and pieces of thin transparent ice, worked into all manner of fantastic forms, and either of a crystal whiteness, or tinted with a beautiful pale pink. There were bays and promontories, caves and grottoes, hills and dells, with every variety of light and shade. The island was almost equally divided by a great valley running through its centre. This was half filled with snow, which, thawing slowly in the sun, formed the source of a waterfall, at a height so great that it was blown and scattered into fine rain before it reached the sea. Around its base—a noise less booming and more musical than when it dashes on the solid shore—was a broad band of frozen spray, which, glittering in the sunshine, looked like the silver setting of an enormous sapphire.

Not far from the top, and on the side nearest to us, was a vast, smooth, glassy plane, inclining steeply towards the sea, and terminating abruptly in a tremendous overhanging precipice. In the very centre of this plane, those among us who had good eyes could see a small black spot. It was at this the captain had been peering through his glass, when he said, "It is a man!"

Every glass in the ship was in requisition, and every eye strained towards one point. The excitement became almost frantic when one of the watchers suddenly exclaimed that he saw the man move his hand.

We approached, so near, at last, that the plateau above, and its dread object, were at last hidden from view by the brink of the precipice itself, which seemed as if about to roll over and crush us. We sailed along its side, frequently lying to, to explore each nook and corner as we passed. The further end of the island, when we rounded it, presented quite a new feature: the base was capped away and undermined for about half a mile by a succession of low cavernous hollows, extending inwards farther than we could see, while the sea rushed in and out tumultuously, made the pent air within loud and whistle like a hurricane. Altering our course again, we steered almost due west into the southern straits, where its vast shadow spread out far and wide over the ocean. It now looked even grander, darker, more fear-inspiring than before, with the sun beaming over its rugged crest, shining through the thinner parts and showing all the prismatic colors of the rainbow. The form of the ice-land was that of an irregular triangle, and in about five hours we had sailed completely round it. But there was no single point at which any boat ever built could have landed, even had it been a dead calm, and the sea as still as a mill pond; much less in such a heavy surf as was then foaming and screaming all around it. No sign of living thing was seen, excepting one great sleepy seal, that had crept into a hole just above water-mark, and lay there as if he were in comfortable quarters. No sign of bone, or spar, or wreck. It was a picture of utter desolation.

We hove to again, at the nearest point from which the man upon the iceberg could be seen. He lay on his back, with one arm folded in an unusual manner under his head, the whole attitude being one of easy repose; indeed, had it not been for the marly look of his face and hands, we could have fancied that he was sleeping soundly. He was clothed as one of the better class of seamen in rough blue pilot-cloth with large horn buttons. He had no hat, and by his side lay a small book, to which was tied a strip of red woolen stuff, apparently a piece of the same which he wore round his neck. This, no doubt, the poor fellow had intended planting on the heights as a signal. In such a thin, clear atmosphere, with the aid of a powerful telescope, even his features might be plainly traced, and his iron grey hair seen moving in the wind.

The second mate stoutly declared that he recognised the man—he was quite sure of it—an old chum and shipmate of his with whom he had sailed many a long voyage, and some part of whose wild, varied history he told us the next evening. What seemed to convince him more than anything was the peculiar way in which the dead man's arm was stowed away under his head—his old shipmate always slept so even in his hammock.

Numerous and strange were the conjectures and remarks made by officers and men. Who, and what was he? How long had he been there? How did he get there? The general conclusion was that he was one of the crew of some vessel wrecked upon the iceberg itself, of which no vestige remained.

Getting up in the Morning.

The hour we get up in the morning very much depends on the hour we went to bed the night before. It is pretty evident that nature made a mistake when she calculated the sun's going down, or else some of the present generation are sadly in fault about retiring to rest, and no less so in regard to getting up. What a waste of beauty, what a waste of music, happiness, and health to sleep out the morning hours! Reader, did you ever live in the country, and in the month of June get up about half past three o'clock in the morning? There is no other hour like that in the whole twenty-four; its full of incense, full of music, full of heaven, full of inspiration. We should think, if angels ever came to earth, they would come then; and we fancy they do, for the air is full of fragrance, every grove has its orchestra; and such pieces as are played, too! Not an instrument is out of tune, not a note out of time. Such pieces! No Mozart, no Beethoven could play them! Every leaf and twig and flower sparkles with dew! We fancy there has been a hail-storm of diamonds! Talk of the splendors of royalty! The pomp of wealth and the glitter of gold! Did you ever see and realize a June morning? Then you will know better what estimate to put upon a jeweller's shop! Did you ever get one breath of air into your lungs from such an "incense-breathing morn?" If you did, you felt an inspiration more of heaven than earth. Awake, O sleeper! such scenes occur nearly every day, and you lose the sight. You burn your life out with gas, and sleep it out by sunlight, thus shortening it at both ends; wake up with a dull, heavy headache, bitter dried up mouth, and trembling limbs. The late hours, late suppers, late going to bed, and late getting up, are enough to make a man late all his lifetime, and he may think himself well off if he is not too late at heaven's door. Mothers should not try to make their children sleep in the morning. Give them very light suppers and put them to bed early. They will be enough better natured through the day to pay for it, so that in the end you will do just as much work as if they slept in the morning.

A TOUCHING DEED IN PROSE.—When Seth got home from mackereling, he sought his Sarah Ann, and found that she, the heartless one, had found another man. And then most awful fight he got, and so he went away, and bound himself to go and cut live oak in Florida. He pinned upon the live oak lands, he murmured in the glades; his axe grew heavy in his hands, all in the wild wood shades. Mosquitoes bit him every where, no comfort did he get, and oh! how terrible he swore when he'd get bit. At last despairing of relief and wishing himself dead, he went into the woods apiece, and chopped off his own head.

MR. JENKINS, the lumber dealer, says he is determined not to trade without a fair profit, and congratulates himself upon being so shy that nobody can tell whether he deals fairly or not. He overreached himself one day, however. "What," said a cunning customer, "will you sell me forty dollars' worth of boards for?" "Well, I'll sell that amount—to you—for about fifty dollars."

A CHARITABLE MAN.—Low Mr. Stiggins said: "I am a charitable man, and think every one entitled to his opinion; and never cherish malice against my foes, not even against Mr. Malberry, who has indirectly called me a sinner; but still, if the Lord law, a thunderbolt to spare, I think it would be well bestowed upon dear brother Malberry's head."

Why should a man never state in the desert of Arabia?
Ans.—Because of the sand which is there?
How came the sand which is there?
The generations of them were bred and nursed here.

Bayard Taylor says there is a shop for the sale of sam shoo, or rice whiskey, in Hong Kong, which bears over its door the following inscription: "The joys of Paradise are nothing but a state of perpetual drunk."

BIRTHPLACE OF FREEMONT.—Some interest has been awakened as to the birthplace of John C. Fremont, now that he has become the Black Republican candidate for the Presidency. We are glad that South Carolina cannot own the traitor and are only sorry that he is not in the South, by accident.

John Charles Fremont was born at Savannah, Georgia, January 21, 1812. His parents were residents of Norfolk, Va., but at the time of his birth, they were on a journey through the Southern States. His father was born in France, near Lyons. Having been taken prisoner by the English, while on his way to join his regiment in St. Domingo, he afterwards escaped and came to the United States.

WHAT PAVES BUREAU'S A FRODOG?—The Carolina Times, honestly, notes the fact that Mr. Buchanan wished to extend the Missouri Line to the Pacific as proof of his freedom sentiments. It turns out, whatever may have been Mr. Buchanan's sentiments on that subject, that he was a direct officer at the time this extension was proposed; and that the motion was made in the House of Representatives by Mr. Bart, of this State, and defeated by the anti-slavery vote while in the Senate himself. These political facts are queer things, and troops should be careful in handling them. They are apt to do like the Halibut gun—kick the shooter over.

THE CAMELS—It has become quite a common sight to see camels and dromedaries marching through our streets. The camels are now employed in carrying government freight from Powder Horn to the Depot. They carry the enormous weight of 1600 pounds, and with the greatest ease. The fact of their stamping all the horses and mules that come within sight of them, are certainly not handsome creatures. A horse in a break trot can scarcely keep up with the camels when in a walk. They apparently go slow, with their long necks extended, but in reality they are moving rapidly.—Times paper.

"Hans, what is the matter?" "De sorrel wagon has run away nut the green horse, and broke de axle-tree of de brick house what stands by the corner lamp-post across the telegraph!"

There is a ballet dancer connected with Niblo's circus, in her nature that she feeds on eggs laid by canary birds. She is the young lady who walks up a moon-beam.

A Yankee has invented a plague which kills off all who do not pay the printer. It has played sad havoc in New England.

We often hear of a man "being in advance of his age," but I never heard of a woman being in the same predicament.

THE MAN ON THE ICEBERG.

"It is a man!" said the captain, handing his telescope to the mate, after a long, steady look; "and he seems frozen hard and fast to the side of the iceberg."
"Keep her away!" cried the skipper. "So—o—o. Steady!" and by thus altering our course we brought the iceberg right ahead.

The iceberg had been in sight since the weather cleared at midnight, when it looked like some high rocky headland, except that, by watching the bright stars behind it, we could see its gigantic outline swaying solemnly and majestically up and down. There was something sublimely grand in the slow stately movement of such a mass. There it floated, large enough, had it been land, to have been the dwelling place of hundreds of human beings. The lower part was of so dark a purple as to look almost black; but, higher up, it shined off to a bright azure, then to a light pale green, while on its lofty summit were long slender spires and pinnacles, and pieces of thin transparent ice, worked into all manner of fantastic forms, and either of a crystal whiteness, or tinted with a beautiful pale pink. There were bays and promontories, caves and grottoes, hills and dells, with every variety of light and shade. The island was almost equally divided by a great valley running through its centre. This was half filled with snow, which, thawing slowly in the sun, formed the source of a waterfall, at a height so great that it was blown and scattered into fine rain before it reached the sea. Around its base—a noise less booming and more musical than when it dashes on the solid shore—was a broad band of frozen spray, which, glittering in the sunshine, looked like the silver setting of an enormous sapphire.

Not far from the top, and on the side nearest to us, was a vast, smooth, glassy plane, inclining steeply towards the sea, and terminating abruptly in a tremendous overhanging precipice. In the very centre of this plane, those among us who had good eyes could see a small black spot. It was at this the captain had been peering through his glass, when he said, "It is a man!"

Every glass in the ship was in requisition, and every eye strained towards one point. The excitement became almost frantic when one of the watchers suddenly exclaimed that he saw the man move his hand.

We approached, so near, at last, that the plateau above, and its dread object, were at last hidden from view by the brink of the precipice itself, which seemed as if about to roll over and crush us. We sailed along its side, frequently lying to, to explore each nook and corner as we passed. The further end of the island, when we rounded it, presented quite a new feature: the base was capped away and undermined for about half a mile by a succession of low cavernous hollows, extending inwards farther than we could see, while the sea rushed in and out tumultuously, made the pent air within loud and whistle like a hurricane. Altering our course again, we steered almost due west into the southern straits, where its vast shadow spread out far and wide over the ocean. It now looked even grander, darker, more fear-inspiring than before, with the sun beaming over its rugged crest, shining through the thinner parts and showing all the prismatic colors of the rainbow. The form of the ice-land was that of an irregular triangle, and in about five hours we had sailed completely round it. But there was no single point at which any boat ever built could have landed, even had it been a dead calm, and the sea as still as a mill pond; much less in such a heavy surf as was then foaming and screaming all around it. No sign of living thing was seen, excepting one great sleepy seal, that had crept into a hole just above water-mark, and lay there as if he were in comfortable quarters. No sign of bone, or spar, or wreck. It was a picture of utter desolation.

We hove to again, at the nearest point from which the man upon the iceberg could be seen. He lay on his back, with one arm folded in an unusual manner under his head, the whole attitude being one of easy repose; indeed, had it not been for the marly look of his face and hands, we could have fancied that he was sleeping soundly. He was clothed as one of the better class of seamen in rough blue pilot-cloth with large horn buttons. He had no hat, and by his side lay a small book, to which was tied a strip of red woolen stuff, apparently a piece of the same which he wore round his neck. This, no doubt, the poor fellow had intended planting on the heights as a signal. In such a thin, clear atmosphere, with the aid of a powerful telescope, even his features might be plainly traced, and his iron grey hair seen moving in the wind.

The second mate stoutly declared that he recognised the man—he was quite sure of it—an old chum and shipmate of his with whom he had sailed many a long voyage, and some part of whose wild, varied history he told us the next evening. What seemed to convince him more than anything was the peculiar way in which the dead man's arm was stowed away under his head—his old shipmate always slept so even in his hammock.

Numerous and strange were the conjectures and remarks made by officers and men. Who, and what was he? How long had he been there? How did he get there? The general conclusion was that he was one of the crew of some vessel wrecked upon the iceberg itself, of which no vestige remained.

"Yes, like enough," said one of the sailors; "she run into the ice in the dark, and went down like a stone, same as we may have done any time this last six weeks."
"Perhaps he was aloft when she struck, and got pitched up where he is now."
"As like to be pitched into the moon," rejoined another, contemptuously. "Why, that there precipice is three times as high as the tallest mast ever rigged!"

"Perhaps, now," suggested a third, "it's some awful cruel skipper, who's been a hazing and ill-using of his crew till they couldn't bear with it no longer, and was drove to mutiny, and put him ashore, and alone to die by himself, so as they should not have his blood upon their hands; or maybe he was a murderer or a Yankee slave keeper."

"Ah, Bill," growled out a previous speaker, "you've always got a good word to say for every one, you have."
"It was a very old man who spoke next—one who was looked up to as a great authority on all such matters, although he was usually remarkably taciturn, and would never enter into argument. He quietly deposited his pipe in his hat; and, as this was always done preparatory to his making

Getting up in the Morning.

The hour we get up in the morning very much depends on the hour we went to bed the night before. It is pretty evident that nature made a mistake when she calculated the sun's going down, or else some of the present generation are sadly in fault about retiring to rest, and no less so in regard to getting up. What a waste of beauty, what a waste of music, happiness, and health to sleep out the morning hours! Reader, did you ever live in the country, and in the month of June get up about half past three o'clock in the morning? There is no other hour like that in the whole twenty-four; its full of incense, full of music, full of heaven, full of inspiration. We should think, if angels ever came to earth, they would come then; and we fancy they do, for the air is full of fragrance, every grove has its orchestra; and such pieces as are played, too! Not an instrument is out of tune, not a note out of time. Such pieces! No Mozart, no Beethoven could play them! Every leaf and twig and flower sparkles with dew! We fancy there has been a hail-storm of diamonds! Talk of the splendors of royalty! The pomp of wealth and the glitter of gold! Did you ever see and realize a June morning? Then you will know better what estimate to put upon a jeweller's shop! Did you ever get one breath of air into your lungs from such an "incense-breathing morn?" If you did, you felt an inspiration more of heaven than earth. Awake, O sleeper! such scenes occur nearly every day, and you lose the sight. You burn your life out with gas, and sleep it out by sunlight, thus shortening it at both ends; wake up with a dull, heavy headache, bitter dried up mouth, and trembling limbs. The late hours, late suppers, late going to bed, and late getting up, are enough to make a man late all his lifetime, and he may think himself well off if he is not too late at heaven's door. Mothers should not try to make their children sleep in the morning. Give them very light suppers and put them to bed early. They will be enough better natured through the day to pay for it, so that in the end you will do just as much work as if they slept in the morning.

A TOUCHING DEED IN PROSE.—When Seth got home from mackereling, he sought his Sarah Ann, and found that she, the heartless one, had found another man. And then most awful fight he got, and so he went away, and bound himself to go and cut live oak in Florida. He pinned upon the live oak lands, he murmured in the glades; his axe grew heavy in his hands, all in the wild wood shades. Mosquitoes bit him every where, no comfort did he get, and oh! how terrible he swore when he'd get bit. At last despairing of relief and wishing himself dead, he went into the woods apiece, and chopped off his own head.

MR. JENKINS, the lumber dealer, says he is determined not to trade without a fair profit, and congratulates himself upon being so shy that nobody can tell whether he deals fairly or not. He overreached himself one day, however. "What," said a cunning customer, "will you sell me forty dollars' worth of boards for?" "Well, I'll sell that amount—to you—for about fifty dollars."

A CHARITABLE MAN.—Low Mr. Stiggins said: "I am a charitable man, and think every one entitled to his opinion; and never cherish malice against my foes, not even against Mr. Malberry, who has indirectly called me a sinner; but still, if the Lord law, a thunderbolt to spare, I think it would be well bestowed upon dear brother Malberry's head."

Why should a man never state in the desert of Arabia?
Ans.—Because of the sand which is there?
How came the sand which is there?
The generations of them were bred and nursed here.

Bayard Taylor says there is a shop for the sale of sam shoo, or rice whiskey, in Hong Kong, which bears over its door the following inscription: "The joys of Paradise are nothing but a state of perpetual drunk."

BIRTHPLACE OF FREEMONT.—Some interest has been awakened as to the birthplace of John C. Fremont, now that he has become the Black Republican candidate for the Presidency. We are glad that South Carolina cannot own the traitor and are only sorry that he is not in the South, by accident.

John Charles Fremont was born at Savannah, Georgia, January 21, 1812. His parents were residents of Norfolk, Va., but at the time of his birth, they were on a journey through the Southern States. His father was born in France, near Lyons. Having been taken prisoner by the English, while on his way to join his regiment in St. Domingo, he afterwards escaped and came to the United States.

WHAT PAVES BUREAU'S A FRODOG?—The Carolina Times, honestly, notes the fact that Mr. Buchanan wished to extend the Missouri Line to the Pacific as proof of his freedom sentiments. It turns out, whatever may have been Mr. Buchanan's sentiments on that subject, that he was a direct officer at the time this extension was proposed; and that the motion was made in the House of Representatives by Mr. Bart, of this State, and defeated by the anti-slavery vote while in the Senate himself. These political facts are queer things, and troops should be careful in handling them. They are apt to do like the Halibut gun—kick the shooter over.

THE CAMELS—It has become quite a common sight to see camels and dromedaries marching through our streets. The camels are now employed in carrying government freight from Powder Horn to the Depot. They carry the enormous weight of 1600 pounds, and with the greatest ease. The fact of their stamping all the horses and mules that come within sight of them, are certainly not handsome creatures. A horse in a break trot can scarcely keep up with the camels when in a walk. They apparently go slow, with their long necks extended, but in reality they are moving rapidly.—Times paper.

"Hans, what is the matter?" "De sorrel wagon has run away nut the green horse, and broke de axle-tree of de brick house what stands by the corner lamp-post across the telegraph!"

There is a ballet dancer connected with Niblo's circus, in her nature that she feeds on eggs laid by canary birds. She is the young lady who walks up a moon-beam.

A Yankee has invented a plague which kills off all who do not pay the printer. It has played sad havoc in New England.

We often hear of a man "being in advance of his age," but I never heard of a woman being in the same predicament.

A. H. KIRBY,

No. 2
BRICK RANGE,
FOR RECEIVING AND OPENING
SPRING AND SUMMER
GOODS, CONSISTING OF
French Cloths, Cassimeres, and Drap d'Eté,
Italian Cloth, Black Satin and Marcelline Vestings, Linen Collars, Heavy Towels and Duck
Linen, Berges and Tissues, Printed Organdies, Swiss and Jaconet Muslins.
Fine Gingham, French, American and English Prints, Fine Black and colored Silk Mantilles, all of the latest style and fresh from New York.
Ladies and Gentlemen's Colored Silk, Kid and Thread Gloves, Hosiery, &c.
Ladies' Grass and Corded Skirts.
Black and Colored Silk Gingham Parasols and Umbrellas.
Fancy Paper, Feather, and Palm-leaf Fans.
Irish Linens, Linen Cambric Pocket Handkerchiefs, Hollands, Brown and Bleached Shirting and Sheetings.

Fashionable Summer Hats, Boots and Shoes.
FOR GENTLEMEN AND BOYS.
Black and Colored Kid Top Gaiters and Boots of various kinds for Ladies, Misses and Children.

FASHIONABLE BONNETS.
Ribbons of various styles,
Dress Trimmings, &c. &c.

HARDWARE,
CUTLERY, CROCKERY,
GROCERIES,
Glassware, &c.
All of which will be sold at the most reasonable terms for Cash or to prompt paying customers.
April 3 6 4

SPARTANBURG'S
"APOTHECARY'S HALL"
THE NEW MEDICAL,
DRUG AND CHEMICAL STORE, IS LOCATED IN SPARTANBURG OPPOSITE
THE COURT HOUSE.

THE subscribers respectfully call the attention of the citizens of Spartanburg, and of the adjacent districts, to their NEW DRUG AND CHEMICAL STORE, located in the village of Spartanburg, where will always be found a full supply of

FRESH AND GUINEA MEDICINES, embracing nearly every article usually kept in Drug Stores.

MR. HENRY E. HEINTZ will have the entire management of this store, and all PHAR-MACUTICAL PREPARATIONS will be made by himself, or under his immediate supervision.
This gives to the community the assurance that all articles from their store are genuine, and in accordance with the prescribed rules of the U. S.
Pharmacopoeia.

They desire also to state that their connection with the WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DRUG ESTABLISHMENT at Columbia will enable them to receive and supply large orders at very low prices. Physicians, Dentists and Merchants, will do well to call and examine the stock and prices, and judge for themselves.

THEIR STOCK WILL CONSIST OF DRUGS, MEDICINES & CHEMICALS,
DYE WOODS, AND DYE-STUFFS,
OILS, PAINTS & PAINTERS' ARTICLES, VARNISHES,
Window Glass and Putty, Glassware
FRENCH, ENGLISH

and American Perfumery, FINE TOILET AND SHAVING SOAPS, FINE HAIR AND
TOOTH BRUSHES, PAINT BRUSHES, SURGICAL AND DENTAL INSTRUMENTS, TRUSSES & SUPPORTERS OF ALL KINDS,
SPICES, SNUFFS, MANUFACTURED TOBACCO.

All the Patent or Proprietary
MDICINES OF THE DAY,
Superior Inks,
PURE WINES AND BRANDIES FOR MEDICAL PURPOSES.

LANDRETHE'S CELEBRATED GARDEN SEEDS, CHOICE TOILET AND FANCY ARTICLES.

We make our purchases for cash, and offer goods equally as low as they can be obtained from any similar establishment in this section.

Orders from the country promptly filled, and satisfaction guaranteed, with regard both to price and quality.

FISHER & HEINTZ,
Pharmacutists and Dispensing Chemists.
Jan 3 45 4

BOOKS! BOOKS!

THE subscriber takes this method to inform the citizens of the Village and surrounding country, that he is now receiving a good stock of NEW BOOKS, at his Book Store, No. 6, Main-street, opposite the Court House, such as are generally used in Colleges, Academies and common English Schools. A large variety of

MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS,
embracing HISTORICAL, BIOGRAPHICAL, GEOLOGICAL, MECHANICAL, Pootical and Musical works, of various sizes and prices.

Some light reading (in the way of Novels),— RUTH HALL, Fanny Fern's writings; TOM JONES' COURTSHIP, &c. &c.

FAMILY BIBLES,
BLANK BOOKS. A number of HYMN BOOKS, used by the different denominations of Christians, together with a large assortment of prices from $2.00 to $10.00; small BIBLES, from 50 cents to $1.00; TESTAMENTS from fifteen cents to $1.00. PRAYER BOOKS, at various prices.

Also a variety of small religious books, toybooks and Primers.

A good lot of Foolscap, Letter, Commercial and Note Paper. Envelopes from common to the finest styles.

Black, Blue and Red Ink.
NEW MUSIC FOR THE PIANO.
Between 500 and 1,000 new pieces for the Piano, from the best composers, the greatest variety ever offered in the country. (We hope the ladies will all call and try them.)

I have made permanent arrangements with several large Book Houses in Philadelphia and New York, to exchange my Music Work—the

SOUTHERN HARMONY,
at CASH PRICE, for their Books, &c., at cash prices, net. I will, therefore, be able to sell Books and Stationery lower than they have ever been sold in Spartanburg; and as I desire to do a cash business, if the people will call with their money, I think they will be satisfied that they can buy Books, &c., from me, as cheap as they can (at retail) in Columbia or Charleston.

S. T. AGNEW,

Newberry Court House,
Importer and Dealer
IN HARDWARE, PAINTS, OILS, WIN-DOW GLASS, GROCERIES GENER-ALLY, DRY GOODS, HATS, SHOES, AND CLOTH-ING, &c., &c.
AND
BUYER OF COTTON AND OTHER COUNTRY PRODUCE,
has on hand a large stock, and most varied Stock of Goods in South Carolina, and is prepared to offer to his numerous friends and customers, liberal inducements which cannot fail to prove to their interest. I am always in the market for the purchase of COTTON and COUNTRY PRO-DUCE generally, and pleasure will find it generally to their interest, by calling on me before making their arrangements elsewhere.

S. T. AGNEW,
Importer of English Hardware.
25
Oct. 18

ODD FELLOWS' SCHOOL.
ON Monday next, agreeably to notice, the Odd Fellows will open their SCHOOL, in the Old Man Academy, under the control of DAVID R.
DUNN, A. B.

Mr. Dunson is a son of Professor Dunson, of Wofford College, and a graduate of Randolph Macon College, Virginia. His testimonials of scholarship and moral character are full and satisfying. In starting an enterprise of the kind by the Lodge, it is indeed gratifying that one so thoroughly prepared for the office of teacher as Mr.
Dunson has been selected and consents to take charge of the school.

The established rates of tuition have heretofore included many of the advantages of education.
With a view to benefit such, and all who may avail themselves of the facilities of a cheap and thorough education, we append the following table of charges, so reduced as to make it available.

Primary Department—including Spelling,
Reading, Writing, Arithmetic, and Geometry, per session of five months, $6.00
Second Department—Philosophy, Grammar, Algebra, and all the higher branches of English Literature, for a term of six months, with a continuation of any of the pre-announced studies, 8.00
Third Department—Classics, with a review of any of the previous studies, per term of five months, 14.00
Contingent fee, per term,08

THOS. O. P. VERNON,
Chairman Board Trustees.
Jan 10 46

S. W. GILLILAND,