

A Russian Nobleman in Cincinnati—His Career and Its Sequel.

A late issue of the Cincinnati Enquirer places us in possession of the following interesting narrative:

A few months since a fashionably dressed personage arrived in Cincinnati, per railroad, and secured a suite of rooms at the "Louis A. Bellevue, Russian." His suavity of manner, elegance and neatness of dress, general appearance, and indeed every thing about him, indicated that the newly arrived guest of Col. Saunders was one possessing metropolitan intelligence. If not those attributes of popularity now-a-days, affluence and wealth, his manners were reserved but firm, his conversation bland, yet winning, and only a few days elapsed before he exerted from the resident guests of the house, both civil and military, a solicitude to make his acquaintance, which was somewhat difficult to accomplish apparently. Once made, however, the wily Russian, by his social ability and lavishness with money, so completely ensnared his new acquaintances, that they, to use a vulgar expression, "tied to him," urged and gained his introduction to their female friends, and, in short, in augmented him as the prince of society in Cincinnati. Parties were given that this foreign representative might loom out more especially as the bright particular star. He was feted to his heart's content—no pains being spared to give him ovations that would honor a higher personage in the grade of European society than that which he was alleged to be. Yankee curiosity was raised to its highest pitch as to the probable mission of this gentleman on the American continent, and the solicitude in finding out culminated in the question being put to the nobleman. With his usual keenness and nonchalance, he responded promptly that recently in Russia he had become involved into a quarrel with his Government of a political character, but of such a serious nature to the Emperor that banishment from the country was the consequence. His intentions were to come to America and become one of her citizens, and, after a residence here of three years, return to Russia and enjoy all the privileges that kingdom without fear of molestation. His off-hand method of briefly alluding to his complicated foreign difficulty succeeding in satisfying his American friends and gained for him a sympathy that was really wonderful. Thus matters continued for several days. Staff officers of the various generals, resident and transient, were not content in their strolls through the city and evening promenades with lady friends, unless Mr. Bellevue was one of their number. At the various military headquarters in this city he was a well known and constant visitor, and being deeply interested in our domestic difficulties, and sympathizing with our government in the complete success of the Federal arms, many of the contemplated movements were confided to his keeping. His suggestions were frankly given and cheerfully received. Indeed, no American citizen and to the man born could have learned one-tenth of the information imparted to this stranger Russian.

By the side of generals he visited the fortifications, camps, etc., discovered our real strength in the field and at posts, and the destination of our armies, etc., etc. His knowledge of the American States was astonishingly limited, and to particularize was a military necessity on the part of those with whom he conversed. He passed in and out of military prisons at all times, and had a carte blanche to visit any portion of this department. A seeming indifference to accept the many compliments that were tendered to him, and the declaration of several officers, gained for him a confidence with our military chieftains and their aids amazingly marvelous. At their request, he went to a fashionable boarding house on Fourth street, adjoining headquarters, and where none but military officers are entertained. Occasionally he would leave the city for a few days to visit Chicago, St. Louis and other Western and Northwestern cities, and to become more familiar with the American country. Although his absence was brief, he was missed by his scores of friends, who welcomed his return with unmistakable affection.

One of these absences was unusually long, and considerable misgiving was entertained as to his failure in returning. Just an accident caused the delay. A few days since, his absence was accounted for, the latest bubble of Queen City confidence was exploded, and the Russian nobleman turned out to be nothing more or less than a rebel spy, whose discovery was thus made:

His last trip from Cincinnati to Lexington, nor far from which, in a skirmish, he was taken prisoner, with other rebels, in arms. He was removed to Johnson's Island, from which place he sent a letter to one of his friends in this city, to go to his late boarding house, settle his bill, and get his trunks, which was to be forwarded to him on the island above named. This imparted being to the military circle generally, the terrible truth flashed across their minds for the first time that they had been entertaining and giving important information to a spy from the Confederate army. Measures were immediately taken to fasten upon this sharper Bellevue the charge of being a spy, and District Provost Marshal Rooney has been sent to Johnson's Island for that purpose. That the crime can surely be established, there is no doubt whatever, in which event the late "Russian nobleman," Lewis A. Bellevue, will be required to forfeit his life as a penalty for his late fashionable but exceedingly bold and intrepid career as a rebel spy. We venture the assertion that but few of his late acquaintances will acknowledge that they ever knew such a man, although the whole affair is treated by the knowing ones as the great joke of the season.

P. S.—The above was written on Friday last, and was to have appeared in Sunday morning's issue, but was unavoidably crowded out by the press of other matter. Since the above was in type, Provost Marshal Rooney has returned from Johnson's Island, bringing with him the spy Bellevue, who is at present lodged in the McLean barracks, on Third street, to await the further action of the authorities. His real name has not yet been developed, the probabilities being that Bellevue is fictitious. The Marshall has further learned that about two and a half years ago, Bellevue entered the rebel service under John Morgan, a portion of whose command, of which Bellevue was a member, was detached and ordered to report to Humphrey Marshall. Gen. Marshall made Bellevue's acquaintance, and learning that he could speak five different languages, and being exceedingly shrewd, witty, he engaged him to come North in the capacity of a rebel spy. Bellevue went to Washington, New York, Boston, Baltimore, St. Louis and all the leading cities and posts, and actively succeeded in gaining the confidence of all the military authorities, from President Lincoln down. The information he gained at the capital from the War Department and Cabinet officers was of great importance, and was continuously forwarded South by the underground railway. When he had occasion to visit the armies, he would purchase stores for the Union troops, and as a sutler or agent for the military commission, always had free passes to every part of the Federal camps. Such was his knowledge of all our movements that no sooner were they determined upon by our commanders than the enemy was posted at once, and our plans checkmated or frustrated. It is truly marvelous how successful he carried on his operations. He is now kept in close military confinement, and will be brought before a military court martial to be convicted by Gen. Burnside, and tried as a spy, and if convicted, of which there is no possible doubt, he will suffer death by shot.

Tribute of Respect.
At a meeting of Company G, Charleston Battalion, held at their camp, on Thursday, October 22, 1863, Capt. Wm. CLARSON was called to the Chair, and Sergeant P. S. MONTGOMERY requested to act as Secretary, the following preamble and resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Death has invaded our ranks. A gallant and accomplished officer, and several of our comrades, have yielded up their lives in the defense of their country. It is but proper that we should place on record our estimate of their character, and our grief at their loss.

First Lieutenant JAMES B. GARDNER was an officer of education and ability. A warm advocate of the cause of Southern independence, he served with the Rifle Regiment at the commencement of the war. At the call of the confederacy for troops from South Carolina, he promptly volunteered in the "Charleston Light Infantry," Capt. THOMAS Y. SIMONS, and was appointed one of the Sergeants of that command. Such was his well-earned reputation for conspicuous gallantry, that, on the division of that corps, he was elevated, by the free suffrages of his companions, to the position of First Lieutenant of this Company. Leverage's, Secessionville and Battery Wagner, of his genial and kind disposition, of his bravery and unquestioned ability, he died on the 9th of September, 1863, of wounds received in the rifle pits on Morris Island. His life blood was offered up a precious sacrifice on the altar of our sacred cause.

Private W. G. HAWKINS had just entered on the duties of camp life. Scarcely on the verge of manhood, he yet dedicated his young life to his country. He had but a short time fulfilled, with fidelity, the duties of his position, when disease laid its heavy hand upon him, and he quietly passed away, leaving an aged father and mother to mourn the loss of the last of three sons who died in the service of their country.

Private N. EDWARDS was an old and highly respected citizen of Spartanburg District. Though years had furrowed his cheek and frosted his brow, he was not too old to shoulder his rifle for his native land. He was killed by the enemy, with his rifle in hand, and with his face to the foe. Peace to his ashes, and may the memory of his strict attention to duty, and earnest devotion to this Commonwealth, ever survive.

Private CANNON SMITH was endeared to us by many ties. Able in demeanor and obliging in disposition, he had ever a kind word and a pleasant smile. He knew no such word as fear. Pure in principle, he was no less cool and intrepid in action. While on duty at Morris Island, he was struck by a fragment of shell, and sinking under the severe nature of his wound, gradually yielded up his life, without a murmur or complaint.

We mourn the loss of all these, and yet we have a melancholy satisfaction in the character of their lives, and in their patriotic death.

Resolved, That the Company deeply deplore the decease of Lieut. JAMES B. GARDNER, and of Private W. G. HAWKINS, N. EDWARDS and ANTON SMITH, and that the faithful soldiers, and true-hearted supporters of the cause of liberty.

Resolved, That we tender to their surviving relatives our warm sympathy in their sad bereavement.

Resolved, That as a mark of our respect for their memory, that these proceedings be published in the daily papers of this city, and in the Carolina Spartan.

WILLIAM CLARKSON,
Captain Co. G, Charleston Battalion
Chairman.

P. S. MONTGOMERY, Secretary.

Did at home, on the 15th September last, Mrs. SUSAN WALKER, wife of the late Abraham Walker, of this District, in the 76th year of her age.

Mrs. Walker's death was produced from a fractured arm, which was occasioned by a fall some five weeks before her death. At first the accident produced no alarm, but the non-improvement of the injured arm, began to excite serious apprehensions in the mind of her friends, as she was in good health at the time she received the injury, and possessing a strong constitution, for one of her age she would be able to withstand the shock and fully recover. But under such a protracted and severe ailment, her health and constitution gave way, and she sunk into the embraces of death.

Mrs. Walker seemed to have willed that her relationship to the world, her family, and the church: for she was a worthy member of society, she was also a zealous Christian; and as a mother, her children regarded her with an affectionate devotion. She had been a member of the Baptist Church about twenty years. She first united herself to the church at the residence of her late husband, where she remained until the year 1829, when she moved with her family, into the vicinity of Cedar Springs Church, and was united with that church at the time of her death. Notwithstanding her advanced age, she had been with long life, and useful days; yet the community was loth to give up one that gave such a living exhibition of old piety, as was seen in all her deportment.

PARTICULAR NOTICE.

Our friends are again notified that the CASH is invariably required for all Advertising and Job Work done at this office. We hope this will be remembered.

J. Miles Lee
Will leave for Columbia on the 20th instant. Mr. Lee is connected with the College Hospital, and will take charge of provisions or clothing, left at his residence near Wofford College.

Ladies' Association.
The Ladies' Association of Spartanburg, acknowledge a donation of one bolt of jeans from Mrs. Charles Kerrison.

A full meeting of the members of the Society is earnestly requested on FRIDAY, the 20th instant at 4 o'clock, at the Palmetto Hall.

The Ladies of the community and vicinity will please bear in mind the repeated and urgent calls for socks for our soldiers.

FUEL.
As winter has appeared in our midst, clothed in icy habiliments, the question naturally suggests itself how, and in what mode, is fuel for the winter to be obtained. All are anxious for supplies of this important article. The prices, like every thing of prime necessity, are moderately high. To pay them requires a heavy and an elongated purse. As many in our town and neighborhood are incapable of meeting this stern demand, philanthropy inquires what can be done for them? Scarcely able to live and obtain food and raiment, the question of fuel becomes one of vital importance to them. Individual effort can do but little. The only remedy then is association or combined effort.

Thus believing we would suggest that a Fuel Society be formed by those who are always first in every good work—our worthy and charitable women. They alone can succeed in such matters. Contributions to purchase wood and supply the needy of our town, through this agency, can be easily raised. The ladies investigate the extent of wants, and exert themselves to meet the demand.

From Charleston.
CHARLESTON, November 16—11 a. m.—Last night, the enemy's shelling continued heavy between 5 and 6 this morning, four monitors moved up to within six hundred yards of Fort Sumter and opened fire. Our batteries on Sullivan's Island and Moultrie are now engaged, keeping up a steady fire. Two of the monitors have moved back some distance. They were struck several times, and it is thought have been injured.

The Charleston papers give a horrible account of Yankee treatment and the wretched condition of the negroes on Morris Island. Since their arrival their regiment has lost over four hundred by sickness and death.

Death of an aged citizen.
Whiteford Smith, Sr., an old citizen and very estimable gentleman of this place, departed this life on Tuesday last. He had resided in the place for many years, and had endeavored himself to all around him by his many virtues. His funeral was preached in the Free Presbyterian Church this morning, attended by a large concourse of sorrowing relatives and friends, of which he had been an exemplary member. He was the father of Rev. Whiteford Smith, of the Methodist Church. —Greenville Enterprise, 12th.

A New Order.
We call attention to the following paragraph, copied from an advertisement by authority of Gen. Beauregard special order No. 255 as being of some interest to our readers:

"VIII. Any person who shall arrest or cause to be arrested and delivered to any Enrolling Officer of a District a deserter, skulker or any other person liable to a lawless money reward due for such service on the production of these Headquarters of proof of the fact, and more claim and shall receive a furlough for 20 days for any one specified kinsman, friend or comrade, for each and every deserter, skulker and absentee so arrested."

FROM NORTHERN VIRGINIA.—The news from the line of the Rappahannock yesterday, represents that the enemy were moving in the direction of the lower fords of the Rapidan, which is believed to indicate an advance on the old Fredericksburg line. There had been no further fighting, and it was thought that this change of base on the part of Meade would postpone an engagement for the present.

[Richmond Dispatch, 18th inst.]

Sherman's corps is reported to have arrived at Huntsville on its way to Chattanooga. It may be so as the advance of the corps were reported, some days since, to have arrived at Florence; but it conflicts with the dispatch to the Mobile Register from Okaloosa, Nov. 7th, which represented that Sherman had been beaten back by General Stephen D. Lee on the Memphis and Charleston railroad west of Tusculum, and a statement of the Mississippi Extra, published at Columbus, Miss., that it has private intelligence of a fight in North Mississippi, between General S. D. Lee's forces and those under the Yankee General Sherman, that the fight was stubborn, but finally resulted in the defeat of the Yankees with considerable loss. The fight took place somewhere near the line of Memphis and Charleston railroad. General Chalmers' command took part in the fight.

[Hunt Conf., 12th.]

GERRILLAS AGAIN IN KENTUCKY.—The Louisville Democrat announces that a force of guerrillas are again at work in the State. They number from 250 to 700, and are commanded by the "notorious" Richardson. It says:

"They entered the town of Columbia, Adair County, on Tuesday night, robbed the stores of their contents, and stole all the good horses in the neighborhood, when they left in the direction of Greenburg, a Green county. On Wednesday morning they reached Greenburg, and here they robbed the stores and carried off all the good horses in the neighborhood. They then moved on to the place of $16,400 in Kentucky money and $200 in greenbacks. After robbing all the stores in the neighborhood they left, moving in the direction of Bardonia, and entered the place without opposition, as no Federal troops were stationed there. Here they burned (as our informant states) the depot, together with a locomotive, five or six cars, and some ten thousand bushels of wheat, besides a large quantity of produce and provisions. Here, as elsewhere, they entered the stores and robbed them of every thing of value that they contained. They cut the telegraph wires, but did no damage to the train. Early yesterday morning they left Bardonia, but in what direction they moved we have not been informed. It is the general belief that they are moving towards the Lebanon branch of the Nashville road.

Eight men-of-war, ordered by the Navy Department at Washington to prepare for sea at New York, are now ready to depart. —Eleven others are nearly ready for sea.

SLAVE LABOR FOR THE COAST—DIVISION NO. 1.

I. THE Commissioners of the Roads and the Town authorities of the judicial Districts of Pickens, Greenville, Spartanburg, Anderson, Union, York, Chester, Laurens, Abbeville and Newberry, are required forthwith to examine all persons in possession of slaves liable to Road duty within the limits of their authority, to deliver one fourth of their slaves liable to such duty at the Railroad Depots nearest the owners residence, on WEDNESDAY, 16th December prox., in time for the down morning trains, for thirty days labor on the fortifications.

II. The Commissioners of Roads and the Town authorities aforesaid will also impress and deliver at the Depots at the same time, one fourth of all male free negroes between the ages of sixteen and fifty, within the limits of their authority, to be forwarded for the same term of labor.

III. The aggregate of the calls made on this Division, including the present call, is four months' labor of one fourth the Road Firms.—In pursuance, then, of the terms of the Acts of the Legislature, the Commissioners of the Roads and the Town authorities will only require of the several slaveholders such an amount of labor as will, when added to that already furnished, make up their own quota, the one fourth of their Road hands for four months.

IV. The inconsistency of calling for hands for thirty days which are detained sixty days, is a matter beyond my control. The Act requires me to call for a term of service of thirty days, while the negroes can only be discharged by orders of the General Commanding.

V. Persons to whom it will be at all convenient to contribute labor in advance under this call are earnestly requested to do so; the law assures them of full credit for it on future calls, which will come probably at a less opportune season.

VI. Owners are advised to furnish their slaves with rations to last to Charleston.

VII. The Agents sent out to receive the negroes, are prohibited from furnishing substitutes.
