THE VETO MESSAGE.

The following is the message of Presi dent Johnson vetoing the Civil Rights Bill :

T ) the Senate of the United States :

I regret that the bill which has passed both Houses of Congress, entitled "An Act to protect all persons in the United States in their civil rights, and furnish the means of their vindication," contains provisions which I cannot approve, consistently with my sense of duty to the whole people, and my sense of duty to the whole people, and my obligations to the Constitution of the United States, I am, therefore, constrained to return it to the Senate (the House in which it originated) with my objections to its becoming a law.

By the first section of the bill, all per sons born in the United States, and not subject to any foreign power, excluding Indians not taxed, are declared to be citi-zens of the United States. This provision comprehends the Chinese of the Pacific States, Indians subject to taxation, the people called Gipsies, as well as the entire race designated as blacks, people of color, negroes, mulattoes and persons of African blood. Every individual of these races, born in the United States, is by the bil made a citizen of the United States. It does not purport to declare or confer any other right of citizenship than Federal cit izenship; it does not propose to give these classes of persons any status as citizens of States, except that which may result from their status as citizens of the United States. The power to confer the right of State cit. izenship is just as exclusively with the several States, as the power to confer the right of Federal citizenship is with Con-gress. The right of Federal citizenship, thus to be conferred in the several excepted ratios before mentioned, is now, for the first time, proposed to be given by law. If, as is claimed by many, all persons who are native born, already are, by virtue of the Constitution, citizens of the United States, the passage of the pending bill cannot be necessary to make them such. It, on the other hand, such persons are not citizens, as may be assumed from the proposed leg islation to make them such, the grave ques tion presents itself whether, where eleven of the thirty-six States are unrepresented in Congress at the time, it is sound policy to make our entire colored population, and all other excepted classes, citizens of the United States. Four millions of them have just emerged from slavery into free dom. Can it be reasonably supposed that they possess the requisite qualifications to entitle them to all the privileges and im munities of citizenship of the United States? Have the people of the several States expressed such a conviction? It may also be asked whether it is necessary that they should be declared citizens in order that they may be secured in the enjoyment of the civil rights proposed to be conferred by the bill? Those rights are, by Federal as well as by State laws, secured to all do miciled aliens and foreigners, even before the completion of the process of naturalization; and it may safely be assumed that the same enactments are sufficient to give like protection and benefits to those for whom this bill provides special legislation. Besides, the policy of the Government from its origin to the present time seems to have been that persons who are strangers to and unfamiliar with our institutions and our laws, should pass through a certain probation, at the end of which, before at taining the coveted prize, they must give evidence of their fitness to receive and to exercise the rights of citizens as contemplated by the Constitution of the United States. The bill in effect proposes a discrimination against large numbers of intelligent, worthy and patriotic foreigners, and in favor of the negro, to whom, after long years of bondage, the avenues to freedom and intelligence have just now been sud denly opened. He must of necessity, from his previous unfortunate condition of ser vitude, be less informed as to the nature and character of our institutions than he who, coming from abroad, has to some extent, at least, familiarized himself with the principles of a Government to which he voluntarily entrusts life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. Yet it is now pro posed by a single legislative enactment, to confer the rights of citizens upon all persons of African descent, born within the the party shall have been duly convicted, extended limits of the United States, while or by reason of his race or color, than is

United States. These rights are, to make and enforce contracts, to sue, be parties and give evidence, to inherit, purchase, lease, sell, hold, and convey real and personai property, and convey real and per-sonai property, and to have tull and equal benefit of all laws and proceedings for the security of persons and property as is en-joyed by white citizens. So too they are made subject to the same punishments, pains and penalties, common with white citizens, and to none others. Thus a perfect equality of the white and colored races is attempted to be fixed by Federal law in every State of the Union, over the vast field of State or the Union, over the these enumerated rights. In no one of them can any State exercise any power of discrimination between different races. In the exercise of State policy over matters exclusively affecting the people of each State, it has frequently been thought ex pedient to discriminate between the two races. By the statutes of some of the States North, as well as South, it is enacted, for instance, that no white person shall intermarry with a negro or mulatto. Chancellor Kent says, speaking of the blacks, that marriage, between them and the whites are forbidden in some of the States where slavery does not exist, and they are prohibited in all the slave-holding States by law; and, when not absolutely contrary to law, they are revolting, and regarded as an offence against public docorum. I do not say that this bill repeals the State laws, on the subject of marriage between the two races, for as the whites are forbidden to intermarry with the blacks, the blacks can only make such contracts as the whites themselves are allowed to make, and there fore can not, under this bill, enter into the marriage contract with the whites. I take this discrimination, however, as an instance of the State policy as to discrimination, and to inquire whether, if Congress can abrogate all State laws of discrimination between the two races, in the matter of real estate, of suits, and of contracts generally, Congress may not also repeal the State laws as to the contract of marriage between the races? Hitherto, every subject embraced in the enumeration of rights contained in the bill has been considered as exclusively belonging to the States; they all relate to the internal policy aud econ-omy of the respective States They are matters which, in each State, concern the domestic condition of its people, varying in each according to its own peculiar cir-cumstances and the safety and well-being of its own citizens. I do not mean to say that upon all these subjects there are not Federal restraints, as, for instance, in the State power of legislation over contracts, there is a Federal limitation that no State shall pass a law impairing the obligations of contracts; and, as to crimes, that no State shall pass an ex post facto law, and, as to money, that no State shall make anything but gold and silver a legal touder. But where can we find a Federal prohibition against the power of any State to discriminate, as do most of them, between aliens and citizens, between artificial persons called corporations and naturalized persons in the right to hold real estate? If it be granted that Congress can repeal all State laws discriminating between whites and blacks, in the subjects covered by this bill, why, it may be asked, may not Congress repeal in the same way, all State laws dis criminating between the two races on the subject of suffrage and office? If Congress can declare by law who shall hold lands, who shall testify, who shall have capacity to make a contract in a State, then Congress can also by law declare who, without regard to race or color, shall have the right to act as a juror or as a judge, to hold any office, and finally to vote in every State and Territory of the United States. As respects the Territories, they come within the power of Congress, for as to them the lawmaking power is the Federal power; but as to the States no similar provision exists, vesting in Congress the power to make rules and regulations for them. The object of the second section of the bill is to afford discriminating protection to colored persons in the full enjoyment of all the rights secured to them by the pre-ceding section. It declares that "any person who, under color of any law, statute, ordinance, regulation or custom, shall sub ject or cause to be subjected any inhabitant of any State or Territory to the deprivation of any right secured or protected by this act, or to different punishment, pains or penalties on account of such person having at any time been held in a condition of slavery or involuntary servitude. except as a punishment of crime, whereof zens upon proof that they are of good moral character, attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States, and well disposed to the good order and happiness of the same. The first section of the bill also contains an enumeration of the rights to be enjoyed by those classes so made citizens in every State and Territory in the

their home, must undergo a probation of persons, shall be deemed guilty of a mis-five years, and can only then become citi- demeanor, and on conviction, shall be pundemeanor, and on conviction, shall be punished by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or imprisonment not exceeding one year, or both, in the discretion of the Court." This section seems to be designed to apply to some existing or future law of a State or Territory, which may conflict with the provisions of the bill now under consideration. It provides for counteracting such forbidden legislation, by imposing fine and imprisonment upon the legislators who may pass such conflicting laws, or upon the officers or agents who shall put or attempt to put them into execution. It means an official offence, not a common crime, committed against law upon the person or property of the black race. Such an act may deprive the black man of his property, but not of his right to hold property. It means a deprivation of the right itself, either by the State Judiciary or the State Legislature. It is, therefore, assum ed that, under this action, members of a State Legislature, who should vote for laws conflicting with the provisions of the bill that Judges of the State Courts who should render judgments in antagonism with its terms, and that marshals and sheriffs who should as ministerial officers execute processes sanctioned by State laws and issued by State Judges in execution of their judgments, could be brought before other tribunals and there subjected to fine and im prisonment, for the performance of the du tics which such State laws might impose. The legislation thus proposed invades the judicial power of the State. It says to every State Court or Judge : if you decide that this act is unconstitutional; if you re-fuse under the prohibition of a State law, to allow a negro to testify ; if you hold that over such a subject matter the said law is paramount, under color of a State law refuse the exercise of the right to the negro; your error of judgment, however conscientious, shall subject you to fine and imprisonment. I do not apprehend that the conflicting legislation which the bill seems to contemplate is so likely to occur, as to render it necessary at this time to adopt a measure of such doubtful constitutionality In the next place, this provision of the bill seems to be unnecessary, as adequate ju-dicial remedies could be adopted to secure the desired end without invading the immunities of legislators, always important to be preserved in the interest of public liberty, notwithstanding the independence of the judiciary; always essential to the preservation of individual rights, and without impairing the efficiency of ministerial officers, always necessary for the maintenance of public peace and order. The remedy proposed by this section seems to be in this respect no only enomalous but unconstitutional, for the Constitution guarantees nothing with certainty if it does not ensure to the several States the right of making index ruling laws in regard to all matters arising in their jurisdiction, subject only to the restriction, in cases of conflict with the constitution, and constitutional laws of the United States-the latter to be as the supreme law of the land. The third section gives the District Courts of the United States exclusive cogzance of all crimes and offences committed against the provisions of this act, and concurrent jurisdiction with the Circuit Courts of the United States, of all civil and crimi nal cases affecting persons who are denied or cannot enforce in the courts, or judicial tribunals of the State or locality where they may be, any of the rights secured to them by the first section. The construction which I have given to the second section is strengthened by this third section, for it makes clear what kind of denial, or depri vation of rights secured by the first section, was in contemplation. It is a denial or deprivation of such rights in the courts or judicial tribunals of the State. It stands, therefore, clear of doubt, that the offence and the penalties provided in the second section are intended for the State Judge, who in the clear exercise of his functions as a judge, not acting ministerially but ju dicially, shall decide contrary to this Federal law. In other words, when a State Judge, acting upon a question involving a conflict between a State law and a Federal law, and bound, according to his own judgment and responsibility, to give an impartial decision between the two, comes to the conclusion that the State law is valid and the Federal law is invalid, he must not follow the dictates of his own judgment, at the peril of fine and imprisonment. The legislative department of the Government of the United States thus takes from the Judicial department of the States the sacred and exclusive duty of judicial decis ion, and converts the State Judge into a mere ministerial officer, bound to decide according to the will of Congress. It is clear that in States which deny to persons, whose rights are secured by the first section of the bill, any one of those rights, all criminal and civil cases affecting them will, by the provisions of the third section, come under the executive cognizance of the Fed-

commit a crime against the laws of a State | not to jeopard the rights, interests and lib--murder, arson, rape, or any other crime -all protection and punishes ent, through the courts of the State, are taken away, and he can only be tried and punished in the Federal Courts. How is the criminal to be tried, if the offence is provided for and punished by Federal law? That law, and not the State law, is to govern. It was only when the offence does not happen to be wi.hin the province of Federal law that the Feieral Courts are to try and punish him under any other law. Then resort is to be had to common law, as modified and changed by State legislation, so far as the same is not inconsistent with the Constitution and laws of the United States. So that over this vast domain of criminal jurisprudence, provided by each State for the protection of its citizens, and for the punishment of all persons who violated its criminal laws. Federal law. wherever it can be made to apply, distances State law. The question here naturally arises, from what source Congress derives the power to transfer to Federal tribunals certain classes of cases embraced in this section. The Constitution expressly declares that the judicial power of the United States "shall extend to all cases in law and equity, arising under the Constitution, the laws of the United States, and treaties made, or which shall be made, under their authority; to all cases affecting embassadors or other public ministers and consols; to all cases of admiralty and marisime jurisdiction; to controversies to which the United States shall be a party; to controversies between two or more States; between a State and citizen of another State ; between citizens of different States, and between a State, or the citizens thereof, and foreign States, cit-izens or subjects." Here the judicial pow-er of the United States is expressly set forth and defined; and the act of September 24, 1789, established the judicial courts of the United States, in conferring upon the Federal Courts jurisdiction over cases originating in State tribunals, is care ful to confine them to the classes cnumerated in the above recited clause of the Constitution. This section of the bill undoubtedly comprehends cases and authorizes the exercise of powers that are not, by the Constitution, within the jurisdiction of the Courts of the United States To transfer them to these courts would be an exercise of authority well calculated to excite distrust and alarm on the part of the States, for the bill applies alike to all of them, as well as to those that have not been engaged in rebellion. It may be assumed that this authority is incident to the power granted to Congress by the Constitution as recently amended to enforce by appropriate legislation the article declaring that neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime whercof the party shall have been duly convicted, shall exist within the United States, or any place subject to their jurisdiction. It cannot, however, be justly claimed that, with a view to the enforcement of this article of the Constitution, there is at present any necessity for the exercise of all the powers which this bill confers. Slavery has been abolished, and at present no where exists within the jurisdiction of the United States. under Federal and State law, no such sy tem as that contemplated by the details of the Nor has there been, nor is it likely there will be any attempts to revive it by the people of the States. If, however, any such attempt shall be made, it will then become the duty of the General Government to exercise any and all incidental powers necessary and proper to maintain inviolate this great law of freedom. The fourth section of the bill provides that officers and agents of the Freedmen's Bureau shall be empowered to make arrests, and also that other officers may be specially commissioned for that purpose by the Pre sident of the United States. It also authorizes the Circuit Courts of the United States and the Superior Courts of the Territories, to appoint, without limitation, Commissioners who are to be charged with the performance of quasi judicial duties. The fifth section empowers the Commissioners so to be selected by the Court, to appoint, in writing, one or more suitable persons from time to time to execute warrants and other processes desirable by the bill. These numerous official agents are made to constitute a sort of police in addition to the military, and are authorized to summon a posse comitatus, and even to call to their aid such a portisn of the land and naval forces of the United States, or of the militia " as may be necessary to the performance of the duty with which they are charged." This extraordinary power is to be conferred upon agents irresponsible to the Government and to the people, to whose number the discretion of the Commissioners is the only limit, and in whose hands such authority might be made a terrible engine of wrong, oppression and fraud. The general statutes regulating the land and naval forces of the United States, the militia and the execution of the law-, are believed to be adequate to any emergency which can occur in time of peace.

erties of the people. The seventh section provides that a fee of $10 shall be paid to each Commissioner in every case brought before him, and a fee of five dollars to his deputy or deputies for each person he or they may arrest and take before any such Commissioner, with such other fees as may be deemed reasonable by such Commissioner in general for performing such other duties as may be required in the premises. All these fees are to be paid out of the Trea-sury of the United States whether there is a conviction or not; but in case of convietion they are to be recoverable from the defendant. It seems to me that under the influence of such temptations, bad men might convert any law, however beneficent, into an instrument of persecution and fraud

By the eighth section of the bill, the United States Courts, which sit in only one place for white citizens, must migrate with the Marshal and District Attorney, and necessarily with the Clerk (although he is not mentioned,) to any part of the District, upon the order of the President, and there hold a court for the purpose of the more speady arrest and trial of persons charged with a violation of this act; and there the judge and officers of the court must remain, upon the order of the President, for the time therein designated.

The ninth section authorizes the President, or such person as he may empower for that pu pose, to employ such part of the land or naval forces of the United States, or of the militia, as shall be necessary to prevent the violation and enforce the due execution of this act. This language seems to imply a permanent military force that is to be always at hand, and whose only business is to be the enforcement of this measure over the vast region where it is intended to operate.

I do not propose to consider the policy of this bill. To me the details of the bill are fraught with evil. The white race and black race of the South have hitherto lived together under the relation of master and siave--capital owning labor. Now that relation is changed; and as to ownership, capital and labor are divorced. The stand now, each master of itself. In this new relation one being necessary to the other, there will be a new adjustment, which both are deeply interested in making harmonious. Each has equal power in setting the terms; and, if left to the laws that regulate capital and labor, it is confidently believed that they will satisfactorily work out the problem. Capital, it is true, has more intelligence; but labor is never so ignorant as not to understand its own interests, not to know its own value, and not to see that capital must pay that value. This bill frustrates this adjustment. It intervenes between capital and labor, and attempts to settle questions of political economy through the agency of numerous officials, whose interest it will be to foment discord between the two races ; for as the breach widens, their employment will continue; and when it is closed, their occupation will cerminate. In all our history, in all our experience as a people living em as that contemplated by the details of this bill has ever before been proposed or adopted. They establish for the security of the colored race safeguards which go infinitely beyond any that the general government has ever provided for the white race. In fact, the distinction of race and color is by the bill made to operate in favor of the colored and against the white race. They interfere with the municipal legislation of the States; with relations existing exclusively between a State and its citizens, or between inhabitants of the same State ; an absorption and assumption of power by the gen . eral government which, if acquiesced in, must sap and destrory our rederative system of limi-ted powers, and break down the barriers which preserve the rights of the States. It is an other step, or rather stride, to centralization and the concentration of all legislative powers in the national government. The tendency of the bill must be to resuscitate the spirit of rebellion, and to arrest the progress of those influences which are more closely drawing around the States the bonds of union and peace. fluences which are more clo My lamented predecessor, in his proclama-tion of the 1st of January, 1863, ordered and declared that all persons held as slaves within certain States and parts of States therein de-signated, were, and thenceforward should be, free ; and further, that the Executive Government of the United States, including the military and naval authorities thereof, would recognize and maintain the freedom of such persons. This guaranty has been rendered especially obligatory an i sacred by the amend-ment of the Constitution abolishing slavery throughout the United States. I, therefore, fully recognize the obligation to protect and defend that class of our people whenever and wherever it shall become necessary, and to the wherever it shall become necessary, and to the full extent, compatible with the Constitution of the United States. Entertaining these senti-ments, it only remains for me to say that I will cheerfully co-operate with Congress in any weasure that may be necessary for the preser-vation of the civil rights of the freedmen, as well as those of all other classes of persons throughout the United States, by judicial pro-cess under equal and impartial laws, or conformably with the provisions of the Federal Constitution. I now return the bill to the Senate, and regret that in considering the bills and joint reextended limits of the United States, while persons of foreign birth, who make our land prescribed for the punishment of white one of all these rights, that person should ner as, while subserving the public welfare, ANDREW JOHNSON. solutions, forty-two in number, which have been thus far submitted for my approval, I am compelled to withhold my assent from a second measure that has received the sanction of both
