

LITTLE SALLIE.

Lines suggested by the death of Little SALLIE, aged five years, daughter of Captain C. A. BARRY, Spartanburg South Carolina: How dear to us she had become— The light, the pride, the joy of home; How she had been so bright a part Of life, and twined about our heart— We had not known till that sad hour When death approached to blight that flower. We then remembered, ah too well! No words of ours can ever tell— The thousand little child-like things, Which back to us our mem'ry brings; How blithe she played—how sweet she sung, What music warbled from her tongue; What bright intelligence we caught From her blue eyes, when some new thought From the unknown flashed on her soul, Like streaks of light from off the pole— How she had asked of God and heaven, Of Jesus' love, of sins forgiven; And of the angels' bright abode, And whether they all dealt with God; And how the soul of God doth rise, And of the flowers of Paradise; And how the body lain beneath The sod, comes back from death, And reappears to die no more. The trophy of redeeming power.

All these, and thousands more beside, We thought on then—they still abide— The day that little SALLIE died.

But this bright child we might not keep; She is not dead—she doth but sleep; Her soul was called to its blest home, Where happy spirits bade her come! And though our hearts with grief consume, It pleased the giver to resume The precious gift: submit we thus, She can't return again to us, But we shall go to her. And there, Nor grief, nor pain, nor anxious care, Nor death shall ever come to chill The heart which heavenly raptures fill. And as we pass the distant portal, Which hides the mortal from th' immortal, Our little angel's soul will fly To welcome us to that fair sky, Where clouds and darkness never lower; Where buds and blossoms the fadeless flower; Where light eternal, cloudless light, Illumes the scene—excludes the night— A glorious day for night like this, The long repose—the changeless bliss. Till then, within that bright abode, Our precious darling rest with God; And when we've done the work He's given, We'll join you in the fields of Heaven. March 18, 1865.

Men are generally deserted in adversity. When the sun sets, our very shadows refuse to follow us.

Praises are valuable only when they come from lips that have the courage to condemn.

Strict punctuality is, perhaps, the cheapest virtue which can give force to an otherwise utterly insignificant character.

The light of friendship is like the light of phosphorus—seen plain when all around us is dark.

An Athenian, who was lame in one foot joining the army, was laughed at by the soldiery on account of his lameness. 'I am here to fight—not to run,' said he.

The town of Augusta, Georgia, was laid out in the year 1735, by the trustees, under the royal charter, and became a garrison for the British as early as 1736.

Charles Lamb, when a little boy, walking with his sister in a church yard and reading the epitaphs, said to her: "Where are all the naughty people buried?"

A well-known discounter having observed that there was no knowing one's friend till they were tried, was asked if most of his friends had not been tried already!

Affection, like spring flowers, breaks through the most frozen ground at last; and the heart which seeks for another heart to make it happy, will not seek in vain.

Douglas Jerrold calls woman's arms the "serpents that wind around a man's neck, killing his best resolutions." The oldest inhabitant says he dont object to them kind of serpents.

Said a crazy woman of a penurious, stingy man, an officer of the Church, we regret to say, "Do you see that man? You can blow his soul through a humming bird's quill into a musquitoe's eye, and the musquitoe wouldnt wink!"

A young lady who was rebuked by her mother for kissing her intended, justified herself by quoting the passage, "Whosoever ye would that men should do unto you, do ye even so unto them."

A case has been decided in Barnwell District, to the effect, that when a freedman violates his contract, he loses the share of the crop he was entitled to, under the contract.

Discussion sometimes takes place as to the lawfulness of this or that amusement. There are two good sure tests. Can I seek God's blessing in it? Would I fear to be overtaken by death when so engaged?

A character which combines the love of enjoyment with the love of duty, and the ability to perform it, is the one whose unfoldings give the greatest promise of perfection.

A young lady having "set her cap" for a rather large specimen of the opposite sex, and having failed to win him, was telling her sorrows to a couple of her confidants, when one of them comforted her with these words: "Never mind, Mollie, there's as good fish in the sea as ever yet was caught." "Mollie knows that," replied her little brother, "but she wants a whale!"

A witty clergyman, accosted by an old acquaintance by the name of Cobb, replied: "I don't know you, sir."

"My name is Cobb," rejoined the man, who was about half-seas over.

"Ah, sir," replied the clergyman, "you have so much of the corn on you that I did not see the cob."
