> Amend the first resolution by adding these "But the dissolution of all connexion between the Government and the Banks, should not prevent the notes of sound specie paying banks from being received in payment of the > public dues." Amend the second resolution by adding-"But safely kept as special deposites in such banks, and subject to such regulations, as the government may prescribe." Mr. MEMMINGER'S resolutions were as follows: "1. Resolved, That this Legislature is of opinion that the public moneys of the United States ought not to be subjected to the casualties and fluctuations of Banking operations, but should be gradually and entirely separated therefrom. "2. Resolved, That in the opinion of this Legislature, such a separation ought not to impair the public confidence in well regulated

Banking Institutions, but would rather tend to promote their stability and credit. "3. Resolved, That as the trade and business of the country, and the fiscal concerns of the United States, have been for a great length of time conducted by means of Banks, and as any great and sudden change in the channels of business may tend to injure the most important interests of society, it is the opinion of this Legislature that the dues of the General Government, or a portion thereof, ought to be received and paid away in the notes of specie paying Banks, until sufficient time should be allowed for the course of trade

44. Resolved, That this Legislature considers it essential to a proper administration yond its immediate wants; and that the gold and silver which may be collected for dues, shall immediately return by payments into the circulation of the country. "5. Resolved, That a Bank of the United States is unconstitutional and inexpedient." A message from the Senate was received, granting leave to amend the resolution relating to Chancellor DeSaussure's resignation
