The State Board was aware that this increase would bear heavily upon some individuals, and hence felt the responsibility resting npon them; but they were also aware that if no increase was made in tne ualuation, an increase would have to be made in the rate, and this would serted that this board is a monstrous anomaly, and that it ought not to be permitted to exist. Similar Boards exist in all the States, where this system of taxation prevails and in their operation are found to be admirable incentives toward securing fair and Bress equal assessment in the various local communities. The people in the different counties of this State will see see to it in any future assessment of their real property that very little work shall be left for the State Board of Equalization."
