NO FAMILY HAPPY WITHOUT EM-PLOYMENT,-We may lay it down as an invariable and incontrovertible principle, that no family can be happy without employment-regular, diversified, continually recurring employment.

There may be the possession of wealth;

there may be an ample and beautiful domain; there may be everything ex-ternally to enjoy; but, unless there be appropriate and varied employment to occupy the body, engross the mind, and persevering family that is the truly

Agricultural.

Saying Manure.

FROM THE NEW YORK OBSERVOR.

While it is true that all farmers will readily admit that no soil, however naturally good, can be kept in a state of fertility and capable of producing heavy crops, without the yearly appli cation of fertilizers in some form; yet the great majority do not take as much pains to collect and save the manure made on their farms as they should, and probably would, if they could be made to realize its full value. Instead of plowing and sowing and working over a large number of acres, year after year, with the application of little or no manure, as many do, and then at harvest, working and traveling over this large area of land, to gather a small crop, the better way is to take a smaller piece of land and manure it highly, till it thoroughly, and have the satisfaction of harvesting a large crop. To this all manure should be carefully applied. It is a common, but bad pracice, for farmers to throw the manure from their stables into the open air, for the spring rains to leach out the strength, and for the hot summer sun to burn. But if the farmer is so situated as to be unable to provide a shelter for the manure, much of the evil resulting from its exposure to the open air, can be obviated by drawing a few loads of soil from the woods, or rotten wood, or dry sods, or, where it can be cheaply obtained, sawdust, and keeping the mannre-heap constantly cover ed a few inches deep with such materials. Common soil will do very well, if these substances cannot be obtained readily. Leaf mould from the woods, or any of the substances mentioned, should be daily scattered over the cowyards to absorb the liquid manure, which is much more valuable than the solid portions, and also to prevent the ammonia from escaping. Many Farmers have REAL MINES OF WEALTH in their swamps and lowlands, the soil of which is composed mainly of rotten leaves, trees, and the grass and weeds vance. DODGED

A New Advertisement. The Newark (N. J.) Advertiser, and nearly all the other journals, aver that the original report that Dr. H. T. Helmbold, of buchu tame, had attempted suicide, was substantially true, notwithstanding the doctor's denial. The Advertiser says "his failure weakens our confidence in shot guns as a deadly weapon," and adds:

"He borrowed a gun at the Arcade Hotel, and going about a mile from the Branch, he alighted from the carriage, and stepped a short distance, placed the but of the gun on the ground and the muzzle under his chin. Being a very short man, he had to stretch to reach the trigger, and in doing this the muzzle of the gun was thrown on one side, and the charge passed alongside his face, merely singing it. The colored driver immediately ran toward the doctor, but before he could reach him the doctor had emptied the second parrel in the same manner. Not being injured by either charge, the colored and convincing reply to the occasional man then got him into the carriage and and drove back to the Arcade, where pondents of the Northern press, that the doctor washed the powder from his face and drove home.
