Bitter Words.

The President of the State Temperance y, Hon, J. B. O'Neall, in a late letto the Temperance Advocate, has the ing remarks in connection with Mr. White's labors in this State :

"Envy, malice, falsehood, have all com-ned with the grog-shop influence to put m down. The ruin which was intended or him has recoiled on the heads of his ding by him, I have come in my share of abuse. I knew well, witht the editor of the Edgefield Advertiser, I was not the 'star of his idolitry.' Inthe I was not the 'star of his idolitry.' In-teen I should be worry to be the subject of Idoltrous womhip by any one, and es-becally should I tramble if the enemies of imperante were to praise me ! Such man as the Winnsboro Register, and his prespondents, Index and Pike, move my by more thap my anger. I trust I may to a life of labor, and honest intenns to do good, to shield me from all and thunderers.

"I glory in being called a 'Fanatic of The former tells the world that I ve, worked more than a scribbling rooman, and the latter places upon me s and imperishable liberty. But Mr. White is a stranger, and it

But we have neither heard of at heinous combination of "envy, malice, hehood and grog shop influence," which orable writer speaks of. Indeed, is our opinion that the charge made athe Mr. White, and its subsequent exrobably to the besefit of the cause which

s have we ever heard of the "abuse" iter speaks of. We are sorry to learn that he has received any for the stated. An honest and candid exon of opinion of his conspicous zeal in the temperance cause is not " abuse," often been the scene. The suddenness with which the whole stand the term, and we should pe that it is not so constructed by the at the very vigorous, if not intemper- Hall bell. ate are to of some of his epistles often fur-nishes the opponents of the philanthropic work in his heart and soul seems to be d with some excuse for tart com-our territories and line of sea coast without also adding vastly to our expenditures. But all this was known before we acquired California. The coast of California and our large and increasing commerce on that coast and in the Pacific must be protected by a naval force. We cannot maintain a navy in the Pacific at any reasonable a naval dock is the first bing necessary, where a ship may be coppered before the worms pierce through her bottom. The subject of sea-coast and harbor defence has lately attracted much attention. The opinions of engineers and experienced naval officers have been recently taken by the Secretary of war, on the points, viz : -1st. To what extent, if any, ought the present system of fortifications to be modi fied consequence of the application of steem to vessels of war, the invention or improvement of projectiles, or other changes that have taken place since it was adopt in the year 1816. 2d. What national or vessel of war, or of commerce, floating batteries, gun-boats, and other temporary substitutes for permanent fortifications; and 3d Is it necessary or expedient to continue. the system of fortifications on the Northern

Lakes ! The inference to be drawn from the various statements and opinions given in reply to the above questions, is that no shanges have occurred which render it expedient to abandon permanent fortifications, and the invention of explosive shells renders stationery batteries more effective against shipping than heretofore. A reliance in floating batteries instead of forts, is condemned, on account of the inordinate, expense and the perishable nature of the reparation. But steamers are recommended as auxiliaries to forts and as substitutes for them, where forts are impracticable by local peculiarities. The Navy, proper. should be left free to operate against the enemy-to intercept his naval forces, which threaten an attack-to annoy his commerce, and to attack his forts. The application of steam to naval purposes, gives vast facilities of attack to a naval power. It enables a naval power to assail any point on our coast without affording a chance of preparation, not even of bringing men together by rail roads. Therefore the necessity is created, according to these opinions, of an ugmentation of the number of our perin a condition fit for immediate action. Fortifications are recommended on the lake frontier, as the British have a desided advantage over us in obtaining a naval superiority in Lakes Ontario, which is the most important in the series of inland seas ds harshly to our ears. One of the of some of the temperance orgations is "Love," and this principle, we sould think, if not confined to the sancturary of the Division, ought to modify at least the language of a fiery zeal.

We have nothing to do with his politics, and the introduction of that topic into a temarmice epistic is a matter of taste on the The state of the writer. Our object in poticing the aztracts we have made is simply to de-find the press in its legitimate function. It has done nothing in the case of Mr. White but what it ought to have done, and, had it dere less, it would have been recreant in one of its highest offices.
