After I threw the letter your cousin Stukely wrote to you. I have concluded to disregard prometheth that I hitherto felt and acknowledged to be binding upon me.

would like the place, and much more than pleased with the citizens, for true to the general character of North Carolinians, they are a hospitable, generous people, and always willing to go their "two dollars in advance" for the promotion of "Home production."

"Old Rip" has awoke out of her long "nap," and has taken up the universal idea of all nations, viz: to push every thing by steam, Rail Roads, Steam Factories, Steam Saw and Grist Mills are already built in many portions of the State, and many more are under way.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 19, 1852.

We have been entertained by reading the speech of the Hon. W. S. Ward, of Kentucky, kindly sent us by the author.

Attention is directed to the advertisement of Messrs. Kennedy & Hurst, of the American Hotel, Charleston.

We learn that Mr. Eli C. Bishop, on the Camden Road below the Village has received an extensive assortment of all kinds of goods.

It is not too late to call attention to the advertisement of Mr. Smith, the Jeweler. Mr. S. has a fine lot of all kinds of Jewelry, also Gold and Silver Watches, &c.

If you do not know how to employ your time these long and warm days, pay a visit to the Store of Billings & Belk, and buy some of those cheap Novels.

year of jubilee: and in the year of jubilee it shall go out, and he shall return unto his possession."

Our laws, as we observed, though based upon the Hebrew Law, are much modified. The Israelites, by the command of God were instructed and commanded to observe the jubilee every seven years.

The Spartan says, "But we well understand this clamor against the Homestead Law, and the source from which it proceeds. We understand the Ledger when it speaks of the merchants' difficulty in crediting his goods and groceries."

We would scorn to be the tool of any party or clique. There is too much independence in the Lancaster Ledger for designing men or parties to work on.
