—A special from Kershaw to The State, says: Some complaint is made against the freight engineers on the Southern as they do not observe the rules of blowing for crossings. It is a small thing for them to do and would be a favor appreciated by the public, and would probably be the means of many accidents being averted. Between Camden and Lancaster, a distance of 4 miles, the railroad crosses the public highway 25 times, hence the importance of the whistle.

Mr McCorkle Will Recover

The many friends of Mr. Paul G McCorkle, who was so badly injured by his horse kicking him in the face, an account of which appeared in our last issue, will be glad to learn that Mr McCorkle will recover, and that his features may be restored—with the exception of the left eye which was torn out entirely.

Says The State of yesterday: So intense was his suffering that when the physicians endeavored with the use of silver wires to raise the features, it required the services of six powerful men to hold Mr. McCorkle on the operating table, even though he had been under the influence of chloroform but the moment before. The operation was entirely successful, it is believed, and Mr. McCorkle's recovery is hoped for—should there be no blood poisoning. So wonderful has been the progress of science that although all of the teeth were lost and the bones of the face crushed, it is believed that Mr. McCorkle can be saved from any other serious mark than the loss of the eye.

For 18 years Mr. McCorkle has been the trusted friend and employe of Col. Leroy Springs of Lancaster, and a specialist was ordered from New York by Mr. Springs as soon as the sad occurrence was made known. It is said that Mr. Springs has declared that he will spare no means to have Mr. McCorkle restored to health and usefulness. The escape from immediate death is due to the fact that the impact of the blow was caught full in the face, and the brain was missed by the fraction of an inch. Great sorrow has been expressed by Mr. McCorkle's unnumbered friends, many of whom have gone to his bedside from Yorkville, Rock Hill, Charlotte, N. C., Lancaster and Camden.

W. M. Moore,
Co. Supt. of Education.
