

is again present, again visible! The past also may not only be recalled, but it may be kept before our eyes. If a ray of light travels at a certain rate, as we know it does, that is, about two hundred thousand miles in a second, we have only to move at the same rate to keep any transaction fixed before any length of time. One may be in this way placed before his own evil deed, and his eye kept upon it, as a past recalled and rendered permanent.

OBITUARY.

Departed this life, on Monday evening 16th July, at his Fathers residence in Anderson District, MAJOR JOHN JAMES NORRIS, aged 25 years 6 months 27 days, of typhus fever, by which he was confined to his chamber about three weeks. Previous to this attack, he was almost an entire stranger to disease of any kind; and his prospect for a long and prosperous life was doubtless equal to any he left behind him.

Having seen him several times during his illness, I saw but little appearance of a change, till within a short period of the closing scene; then his noble, manly form, began to undergo a rapid and striking change—the strength of manhood, and freshness of youth, gave way to the feebleness of the dying, and paleness of the dead. What is human life? "It is a vapor that appeareth for a little time and then vanisheth away."

He was a high-minded, honorable young man. He was ardent in his affections, sincere in his attachments, attentive to the wants and wishes of his parents, beloved by his friends, and highly respected by the large circle of his acquaintance.

The day of his funeral will not soon be forgotten; the multitudes who were assembled to pay the last tribute of respect to his memory, while they looked upon him, for the last time, cold and silent in the arms of death, felt the fountains of their grief stirred within them. But this stroke fell with peculiar weight upon his bereaved parents—all the other children having left the family mansion—his vacant seat at the table, and at the fireside will often remind them of the greatness of their loss.

It might appear strange to shortsighted mortals, that one, with such bright prospects before him, should be cut down in the morning of life. But "God's thoughts are not our thoughts." "What I do, thou knowest not now, but you shall know hereafter."

Though his untimely departure may be painfully felt, and long remembered by his friends, the evidence, that their loss will be his gain, should dry up the fountain of their sorrows.

While he enjoyed vigorous health, when no danger was nigh, he remembered his Creator in the days of his youth; and gave himself away to God in an everlasting covenant, by making a public profession of faith in Christ. Before his disease had assumed any alarming symptoms, in a private conversation with the writer, he spoke of his affliction, as "designed of God for some wise purpose." At a later period he expressed a belief that through the grace of God his sins were pardoned and all would be well. Death to him had lost its terrors. Looking upward he said: "Heaven, sweet home, I shall soon be at home in heaven." Then taking each of his friends present by the hand, bade them a calm, deliberate, affectionate farewell, exhorting each to meet him in heaven. He said, as he was young, he would like to live a little longer, but resigned himself wholly to the will of God. In death his countenance was calm, serene and composed, exhibiting a manly independence and self confidence, which seldom appears in life.

Having no fears as to his own safety, he manifested deep solicitude for the salvation of his friends; and offered up most fervent prayers, that they may be prepared for their latter end; and with the earnestness of a dying man, urged upon all around him, to seek the salvation of their souls. On Sunday he appeared to possess an unnatural strength, while in clear and distinct tones, he pressed the solemnities of eternity upon the consideration of those about him. Just before he ceased to speak, he said, "friends weep not for me," then clasped his hands and said, "O death where is thy sting! O grave where is thy victory!"

What a lesson to young men "to seek first the Kingdom of God and his righteousness!"

FOREIGN NEWS. BY THE EUROPA.

[Telegraphed for Baltimore Sun.]

GENERAL INTELLIGENCE.

It has been excessively hot in London and Liverpool.

The cholera is steadily on the increase in London. Last week there were 152 deaths in London, and in Liverpool 201. The epidemic has broke out in a very fatal form in Southampton and seems to infest the entire Southern coast.

The crops throughout England and Ireland were very promising. The potato disease has appeared in but a limited number of places.

The Irish papers contain most distressing accounts of the intense sufferings of the people, particularly, in the South-western districts. The work houses are filled to repletion, and thousands appear entirely destitute of means to keep soul and body together.

On Monday O'Brien, Meagher, McManus and Donohue, were embarked on board the schooner Swift, which sailed immediately for Van Dieman's Land.—Previous to their departure they placed in the hands of mutual friends an address, of which the London Times says it must be admitted its tone is of an unobjectionable character.

The Hungarians have captured Raba after a sharp resistance from the Austrians.
