the department in reorganizing the army down to the 150,000 total fixed by Congress for the enlisted strength for the present, it was said.

The men will "hike" from posts where they are stationed to places to be selected for permanent posts, he said, cutting transportation costs. Many commands will be reduced to bare skeletons of their present size and kept at the old stations, while others will be entirely eliminated and placed on the "inactive list." The secretary said he had cancelled orders permitting enlisted men to obtain discharges upon application during July. It was understood that applications had exceeded expectations of army officers in number and necessitated cutting off the flow out of the service.

It was reported that the troops at Camp Meade, Maryland, about 8,000 in number, probably would be sent to Camp Dix, New Jersey, and that the New Jersey camp would be maintained permanently as a troop center for North Atlantic territory.
