To Control Hog Lice

Clemson College, June 15.—The lily be fattenede and slaughtered. following remedies, any of which will prove satisfactory, are suggested by husbandry division, in answer to inquiries from farmers on this subject:

1-Crude Oil Treatment.-This is the most widely used treatment for hog lice. It should be applied to the hogs by pouring it down the back and rubbing it over the entire body, taking pains to see that the head and ears are well covered. One application of crude oil, provided it is thorough, will eliminate hog lice. Of course, in all cases it is necessary to clean up the hog houses and sleeping same preparation.

2-Creolin, - By taking an ordinary coal tar preparation, such as creolin, and diluting it about 1 to 25, you may be able to control hog be thorough. When a coal tar preparation is used it is necessary to repeat the treatment in ten days, because the lice are killed, but the nits are not.

3-Oil from Garages,-Oil from garages, which has been drained from the motors has been used very satisfactorily to control hog lice. However, some of the oil which is obtained from garages has a great deal more kerosene in it than others, and
