

THE SUMMER WATCHMAN.

Continuation of the Watchman.

LONG BRANCH, Aug. 18, 1870. GENTLEMEN—This summer resort seems to be growing rapidly in public favor.

The genius of James Fisk, Jr., has converted the "Plymouth Rock" into a floating hotel of the first class.

At this place the hotels occupy a large portion of the front street, which is called "Ocean Avenue."

The hotels are all full, and the private residences are increasing in number and improving in style.

Long Branch combines more than any watering place in the United States. You have here the vast ocean rolling its mighty waves before you.

— Show me a person that hears music in the song of the oricket, or the humming of the bee.

of music, and with the numerous strolling musicians, the air is always vocal with sweet sounds.

Among the most substantial of the unpretending hotels, is the old Pavilion. This house has been kept by its present proprietor, Mr. S. O. Morris.

The country around Long Branch is undulating and very beautiful. There are several very pretty drives in the vicinity.

The ninth Regiment of N. Y. Militia are coming to the Branch to morrow to encamp for a week.
