The Elenton Jury.

At half-past 6 o'clock, all the attorneys for the defence being present in court, as well as the prosecuting attornoys, the Chief Justice sent a all taken their seats and answered to their names as called by the Clerk, Chief Justice Waite said: "Gentlemen, have you agreed upon a verdict ?" Geo. W. Williams, the foreman, replied that they had not.

The Chief Justice next inquired whether they had agreed upon the guilt of any party. A sim-ilar reply was made by the forensa. The fore-man was then naked whether they had agreed upon the innocence of any one of the accused.— George Bush, the black jury leader, said that they had agreed upon the innocence of one party named in the indictment and none others. Mr Limehouse said that they had not agreed upon any; that such a thing was only mention ed, but no vote had been taken upon it. That as far as he was concerned, he was in favor o acquittal from the outstart as to all the accused and that he would continue so to the end; further he said they might remain there for twelve months without changing the vote of one man. The Chief Justice then instructed the jury to retire to their rooms and consider further ; that if they could agree upon the inocence of one or more, or as to the guilt of any one of the accused, they could make such a verdict, and report upon the others as disagreeing. Mr. Williams enquired of the Court whether they must bring in a written verdict ; the Chief Justice said not; that in such a case as the one before them it must be made orally. The jury then returned to their rooms, and after an absence of a few seconds returned into court, when Mr. Williams, the foreman, announced that the jury unanimously agreed upon a verdict of not guilty as regards Mr. Abaer W. Atkinson, but finded to pare in the remainder the remaind

The Judge then ordered a mistrial to enter in the cause a regards the balance of the defendants, and dismissed the jury from further attendance upon the Court.

The names of the jurors in this case were Geo. W. Williams, foreman, George Lever, E. J. Lime-house, Linnsford Harley, Joel Copes and M. F. Tighe, white; all of whose politics, excepting Mr. Williams, tended in the past toward Republicanism.

The other half of the jury were George Curtis. M. H. Holloway, Cato T. Stewart, J. M. Clinton, Addison Walker, and Isham Greenwood, colored or black men.

The first of these, George Curtis, who was the leader of the negroes, a kind of foreman, is a foreign negro. This fellow is a constant contributor of trash for Daddy Cain's sheet, the Missionary Record.

M. H. Holloway hails from Marion County. He filled the office of School Commissioner in that county under the Republican administra tion. J. M. Clinton, a violent negro from Lancaster, is the son of Radical Senator F. A. Clinton, a member of the present Senate.

Cato T. Stewart is a regular coru field hand. He is a trained juryman, having acknowledged that he was one that sat on Ku-Klux trials.— This accounts for his being here, as old Ku Klux Korbin knew his man. Addison Walker another ignorant corn field hand, is likewise a trained juryman. He sat on the Ku-Klux cases also.

Isham Greenwood is a disciple of Daddy Cain. He claims to be a minister of the Gospel, and runs a sundry shop in his retreat. He was the only negro on the jury who was inclined to listen to the reasoning of the intelligent white men, and would have voted for acquittal had it not been for Curtis. At the inception of the case, when the jury were drawn, considerable speculation was had as to the probable standing of the jury, and from day to day as the case went on, it was apparent that the negroes would cling to color. George Curtis showed clearly on his face that he had gone there with the determination of convicting, and did not waver an inch during the tedious trial and arguments. His face during the arguthe expression of a heart made up ments gave and hardened for conviction, and his being shut up at night together with the other negroes accounts for the color line drawn.

The case, as the public are aware, was handed to the jury on Friday, at half past 10 o'clock -After an elaborate charge from the Chief Justice -such a charge as any unbiased person could not fail to agree upon a verdict of acquittal without nesitation, as the Chief Justice dwelt at length upon the case only being based upon circumstantial evidence, and that in order to find the accused guilty they must be convinced beyond a reasonable doubt. Notwithstanding this, when they entered their room and a vole was taken, the division line was formed at the jump

159. As a natural consequence, the fire unsettled everybody and everything in town for two or three days, and it has been impossible for us to pay our usual attention to getting out a paper this week.

If you want to see a regular "mussmolly," take a peep into Rice, McLure & Co.'s, J. H. Rodger's and J. T. Hill & Co.'s, stores .-The goods look as if a dozen little and big negroes had been stiring them up with sticks.

tor On the 1st inst., terrific fires were raging through the timber lands of Michigan, which threaten to be as destructive as the fires in that State of 1871. Villages are entirely surrounded by fire and all communication with them is cut off. Settlements of Lumbermen have been entirely destroyed-not a house is left standing in one town. Thewhole of Hurrou County is beleaguered with flames.

The Legislature, at last accounts, was at dead lock upon the appropriation bill. The committee of conference could not agree upon inserting or expunging the $270,000 interest lause, so a committee of free conference was appointed. The per diem and mileage of members is also a bone of contention. The difference is between $5 a day, and $600 or $800 for the two sessions.

10" "Cherry Ripe." Our little friends, Misses Mamie and Lula Ray, of Cross Keys, will accept our thanks for a bucket of nice ripe Cherries. We hardly knew that Cherries were ripe and here comes the "first of the season" from two sweet little girls the bloom of whose cheeks would rival the cherries themselves .-Such favors are the green and cheering spots in the oasis of an Editor's life, but they are doubly cheeving in the consciousness that he is remembered kindly in the social circles of his subscribers, particularly by the young and pure of heart and thought.

13. As it seems impossible to get up a fire Company in this town, the next best thing, in our opinion, is for the Tewn Council to pass an ordinance forbiding the erection of wooden buildings on Main Street. So far such buildings witnessed so great destruction of property in have proved a nuisance, causing the loss of im. mounts of property, and the Council certainly have the power to abate and prevent one nuisance as well as another, and to protect the lives and property of the citizens of the town. In most other towns such an ordinance is rigidly enforced, and we cannot discover any material difference in the Charters of Union and other towns, that would prevent the exercise of such a power.

$100,000 DESTROYED IN 2 1-2 HOURS. Railroad Depot, Shops, Cars, &c., estimated Railroad Depot and Shops Gone! 26 BUILDINGS BURNEED!

Sunday, the 3d day of June, 1877, will Sunday, the 3d day of June, torn be remembered by the citizens of Union of the hottest and saddest days they wer tex insured. g

About half past 12 o'clock, while four-fifths of our white inhabitants were at Church, the dreaded alarm of fire was sounded upon Main street, and by the time many could arrive upon the spot the wooden building occupied by W. R. Briggs & Co., adjoining Hill & Co's. large brick building, was one sheet of flame and the boxing under the caves of the latter building on fire the whole length, and in a quarter of an hour the whole inside of the upper story of that building was one roaring mass of flame and smoke. The wind was blowing hard from the South-west by west, and the scene was truly terrific. Large flakes of fire were flying in the air, alighting on the parched roofs of stores and dwellings, near and far, threatening destruction to every building and fence in its course, for miles. The shingled roofs of the houses, from the long continued dry and hot weather, were like tinder, and it required the most active watchful exertions upon the roof of eachers

Soon the flames. windward, and in a few minutes the 1.0 houses of Mrs. E. D. Humphries, Phillip Dunn, R. F. Briggs (a new one) and Thos. McNally, were one sheet of raging, howling flame, while there seemed no hope that the brick buildings below, from Spears & Colton's to Foster & Wilkins' and the wooden block below them, could possibly be saved. Thanks to the slate roof and substantial build of Spears & Colton's house they all escaped. The flames then leaped, as it were, from the burning stores to some small buildings in rear of Col. Young's and the Harris stores and demolished them like loose cotton. From there they took the building known as the "long house " then the Davis and McNeace bar rooms and every other building upon that block and laid all in ashes. But before flames had full possession of these houses, the cry came that the Railroad shops were on fire ; and here commenced such a scene of terror and destruction as we have never before witnessed. The roaring flames, the dense smoke, the terrible heat from the midday sun, the howling of the wind, the blinding dust and the flying flakes of fire, all comtined to strike terror and alarm to the stoutest hearts. It was a scene of horror.

The weather was so intensely hot that, although the fire had only lasted an hour, the people were completely exhausted and many stout men had fallen and been taken from the streets. In less than five minutes from the time the fire first struck the building the whole upper portion of the shops was one howling mass of flames, and the air around so hot that none cculd go near enough to enter and save any of the machinery, tools, or materials in it. The lumber around the shops, three cars on the tract, the platforms in front, rear and ends of the depot caught almost simultaneous with the shops and it was impossible to enter the depot. Soon a dense smoke issued from under the tin roof, of that building, and all hope of saving it or any of its contents was gone. By the time the roof of the depot fell in, the workshops, cars and all around were completely in ashes. The March of Jestruction ended at the depot shops. It commenced at half past 12 o'clock and by 3-two hours and a half-the bare walls and chimneys of twety-four buildings alone remained to tell of its ravages. We have never tiously with any measure they wished to adopt, so short time. This may be accounted for in the ost about $1,000, including all his tools, a quantity of clothing and Furniture. Phillip Dunn lost a stock of Groceries, but a Mr. Dunn is sick at his residence out of town we cannot state the amount of his loss. The whole loss cannot fall much short o

$100,000, with only about $35,000 insurance.

Among the losses was the Passenger Car of the Railroad undergoing thorough repairs and intended to be ready for the excursion to the Mountains over the Spartanburg and Asheville Kailroad on the 11th. A turret had been built on it and in every other respect it would have been a very handsome Car. The workmen had displayed their utmost skill in making it a credit to their own skill and the Tailroad shop.

The origin of the fire is attributed to the careless throwing of a match among some loose part by a Clerk in W. R. Briggs & Cis store, after lighting a cigdr. He says he had not left the store more than fifteen minutes when the alarm was given and the house was in flames. The most remarkable feature of the fire was the saving of the row of wooden buildings below Foster & Wilkins' store. We can only account for it from the fact that the brick stores above were so much higher than the wooden ones, that the wind blew the sparks over them and on to the houses in the block below. But there is no doubt that they too would have been destroyed but for the extraordinary exertions of Mr. J H. Rodger and many others, whose names we cannot learn, who, notwithstanding the intoler able heat from both the sun and and fire, re mained on the roofs during the whole time and applied water from bickets. The buildings are old and as inflamable as any in town and their being saved appears miraculous By this fire Union has suffered a loss that car not be estimated in dollars and cents, and will be seriously felt for many years. At no time has the people been less able to bear it. The depressed condition of the whole community, from the awful stagnation of business, with ac money in circulation and the exorbitant price asked for money by those who have it, combine to put the prospect of rebuilding to a very distant day. 10 We had the pleasure, last Saturday, o meeting Speaker Wallace and Representative Peake, who visited their homes, for the first time since the present session commenced, on leave of absence. From appearances we should say that Legislative work agrees with them, for they many points, unknown to us before, upon the trials and tribulations the democrats of that body have undergone, in "bringing inorder out of chaos," with a stubborn partisan Republican majority in the Senate to harass, annoy and delay the progress of sound legislation. We can well unverstand their peculiar position in that might make to pass good laws and establish a sound, economical and honest government, can and have been either delayed or thwarted by the Republicans in the Senate. It took all the tact and ingenuity of the democrats to do any good work at all. They had to move slowly and cau-

For the Times. SOUND VIEWS UPON THE INTERESTS OF THE FARMERS AND PLANTERS. UNION COUNTY. S. C. 27th May.

MR. EDITOR : I ask, with some hesitation, a place in your paper, which is always on the side of right and justice, to give expression to certain views in the interest of the Farmers and Planters of the State. The views expressed by "S.," as to the distressed condition of the planting interest in South Carolina and the much needed remedy therefor, inthe communication addressed to the Journal of Commerce, of a recent date, are, I think, entirely correct, and I will plunge at once into the middle of the subject, by saying that the pressent stagnation of trade throughout the country is, in some degree certainly, attributable to the fact that the agricultural districts around many of the towns and villages are in a state of collapse. The farmers and planters are reduced to the minimum of expenses, viz : what is barely sufficient for subsistence ; and as the agricultural classes are largely in the majority here, trade is necessarily stagnant. The unjust discrimination in freights on certain railroads, though doubtless bearing some relation to the matter, ty no means accounts for the very marked falling off of trade, in certain towes .-As was said by S. in the communication above referred to, the mercantile classes, by the enormous per centage demanded on all articles of domestic Consumption, have killed the goose that laid the golden egg.

It is time that the merchants, though often unning considerable risk in their transactions, might fairly have asked prices in advance of those which ruled in ante bellum days ; but from one hundred per cent. on provisions to three hundred, was much more than a fair profit, and can be designated no otherwise than as extortion .-Moreover, with such security as valuable land to back the consumer, the merchants were tolerably sure of getting back their money. Like Dogberry, they have had their losses, but that they have prospered, on the whole, in spite of losses and risks, is a well attested fact. I, for one, do not grudge them their prosperity, if it had been attained while following the "Golden Rule," but prosperity built upon the total ruin of numbers of their fellow-citizens, is not to be envied.

Suppose they had been content with a fair profit-risks taken into the accounts-upon their investments, there are numbers of now ruined men who, with home rule, a minimum rate of taxation and the labor system in a better condition, as it soon will be, would soon he able, if they still held their lands, to retrieve their fortunes, and place their families in comfort and independence. But it is now too late. That spirit of extortion, in some cases falsely called splendid business talent," which has reveled in South Corolina during the reign of carpetbagery; has wound up these unfortunate men, just one or two years too soon, and their cases are now hopeless.

In reference to the subject in hand, it would be as well to inquire what relation the laboring class proper bears to the matter : The farmers and planters reduced, almost, to the last extremhave not lost an ounce of ficsh. They gave us ity, the condition of the laborers, is one degree worse, if this be possible. He and his family are in a state of semi-starvation throughout the year. Is it strange that the white laboring classes are becoming bitter, as I think they are ? They have a vague feeling of wrong and oppresssion, which, defined and organized, would become that startling thing called Communiam. respect. All the efforts that the democratic house Is it to be wondered at, when the provision merchant, getting his grip upon the laborer and always dictating cotton as his principal crop, sells him provisions at 300 per cent. and at the close of the second or third year takes not only his corn and cotton, but sells the poor man's cow, the only comfort left to his family, and takes even his cotton seed and rough forage, the rehence the length of the session and the small fuse of his crop? Shylock must have the pound

And no one who has any acquantiance with English literature can doubt for a moment as to how usury was regarded there.

Under the fostering influence of her laws against usury, and her homestead law, which Georgia gave to her people as soon as she attained the right of self-government-which she did sooner than any other State in the Southshe speedily attained a pre-eminent prosperity, which is, as yet, unrivalled amongst the Southern States.

I will now refer, Mr. Editor, to the resolutions of the Chamber of Commerce of Charleston, against the reestablishment of the law against usury, addressed to the South Carolina Legislature, and recently published, in the Journal of Commerce: With perfect respect for the high character of the gentlemen who compose the Chamber of Commerce, I, nevertheless, beg leave o say that the doctrine of "the natural right of the individual to untrammelled freedom in the conduct of money and Commercial affairs," is a rather startling one. Certainly the Supreme Court of the United States knows nothing of this doctrine, for, a few years since it decided, following in the track of the Declaration of Independence, that "the rights of life and personal iberty were the natural rights of man.' We hear of no other natural "rights," save these, form this the highest legal tribunal in the land. In the excellent editorial of the 15th of May, of the Journal of Commerce, entitled the "Legitimate Sphere of Government," we are told that Protection to property, protection against injustice, protection of the weak against the strong, is the legitimate sphere of government;" and Jeremy Bentham, the great English political economist, tells us that a good government should aim at making such laws as will chable the poor man to provide a subsistance for his family .----Just now the farmer in South Carolina is in urgent need of such protection and such a law .--Should the capitalist, in the exercise of his "untrammelled freedom in the conduct of money and Commercial affairs," trespass, as might sometimes happen, upon his neighbour's right to provide an honest subsistance for his family, how then should the case stand ? Is there not a law needed, which should step in just here and say, (to quote again from the editorial above alluded to ) "thou shall not ? The doctrine of "the natural right of the individual to untrammelled freedom," &c., it strikes me, Mr. Editor. is, so to speak, too broad and too long. The gentlemen of the Chamber of Commerce of Charleston are men of the highest character, as we have said, but there are men of money, here and there, who are not, and wilfully misinterpreting the above resolution, and citing it as authority, they will base upon it exceedingly crooked practices, in the use of money.

As to the doctrine, also, announced in the resolutions of the Charleston Chamber of Commerce, at the meeting above referred to, that the "Legislature has no more right to legislate upon money than upon land," we merely ask, has it not been the practice, heretofore, of all civilized governments, to legislate upon their circulating medium, as they saw fit and as the necessities of the times and the people demanded?

There are those, perhaps, who will think, that the statements of the wretched condition of the agricultural classes in South Carolina, are too extravagant. "They have," they say, "no knowledge of such a condition of things ; they are constrained to believe that the statements are too highly coloured." With pink and white palma upturned, with the self-satisfied urbane smiles of men with whom success, whether in business or argument, is a foregoue conclusion, they demonstrate, to their own entire satisfaction. that the whole thing is a figment of the brain of some "lean and hungry Cassius;" or, if it is truth, "the people have nobody to blame but themselves."

Wrapped in the comfortable consciousness of such goods laid up for man otally unable to realize such things as honorable poverty and blameless misfortune. "Clothed in purple and fine linen, and faring sumptuously; every day," they are unaware of any duty which calls to them in the shape of Lazarus sitting at the gate, in need of all things. Doubtless, if Lazarus ever attacted the attention of Dives, the latter regarded the wretched man with a mixture of pity and contempt, and sagaciously reflected that the man must have been greatly to blame to bring himself to such a horrible condition. There are hundreds, nay, thousands of men. in South Carolina, who can neither be bought nor browbeaten, nor wheedled, whom all the declarations, resolutions and statements, of all the Capitalists of the State, cannot blind to the plain facts of the case, and we hope they will, make themselves heard, as they have the power and the right to do, in demanding the re-establishment of the law against usury. In this case, the "voice of the people would be the voice of God." , With this law again in force, South Carolina would be, indeed, redeemed, regenerated and disenthralled ; without it, God help the While we sincerely sympathize with all who lost propererty by the fire last Sunday, particularly those whe had labored hard for what they, obtained, we cannot help feeling more deeply for those industrious and worthy Mechanies, J. P. Mullinax, Thos Nelson and T. P. Lemaster, Their lesses were severe, because it took from them the tools by which they earned the food and clothing for their families. In particular was that the case of Mr. Lemaster. His loss was $500,-$100 worth of Carpenter's Tools, the sash, 511nds, doors, paints, paper roofing and 500 feet of lumber, intented for a new house he is building as fast as his daily earnings will allow. All this he had purchased and paid for, by stries economy and correct habits, out of his manthly wages as a carpenter in the employ of the Rail-road Company. We know of ne more worthy or indiffcious man in this county, and while we know he does not ask for charity, we think he is entitled to the help and encouragement of those who can extend relief. Samuel Dibble, democrat, has been elected a Representative of Orangeburg County. by a majority of 112, over D. A. Straker, Radical, who the present House refused to allow to take his seat, for contempt. THE FLORMS REACH PORT.--Liverpool, May 29. --The dissbled steamer, City of Brussels, ar-rived at this port this morning at 10 A. M., af-ter a passage from New York of thirty-eight days. The passengers have landed. All are well. Deputations from the Liverpool Catholio Societies, went out in two tugs to welcome the pilgrins. A large crowd cheered and congratu-lated the passongers on the landing stage. The pilgrims were conducted to the Adelphi Hotel, to be entertained by the Catholio Club. A Te deum is to be sung at the pro-Cathedral. The pilgrims will then proceed directly to Rome, -black against white-all of the negroes voting for conviction, and all of the whites for acquittal. Repeated votes were had, with the same result, and after thirty three hours trial the whites were unable to change a single vote. Curtis, it is said, offered a compromise, which was that they would all agree to an acquittal of all the accused but the two Bowers .-As a matter of course the whites would make no such compromise, and the negroes stood up for conviction of all. The negroes said they w ould remain there for any length of time so long as they were fed and received three dollars a day for so doing .- Journal of Commerce.

PLANTING WHITE SKIN ON A BLACK MAN.-There is a coal-black negro man in our vicinity who will soon have a beautiful white stomacha stomach covered with as pure white Democrat a stomach covered with as pure white Democrat-ic skin as ever grewin Edgefield. This no doubt sounds both ridiculous and alarming, but we will explain. Some weeks back, Dr. Walter Hill and Dr. Wallace Bland cut off from the stomach of this negro a huge tumor weighing many pounds, and upon the large bare spot left by the operation they have planted numberless little stars of skin nipped from their own arms. These stars have taker root and are fast spreading out to meet each other, so that, as we have already said, the black vill soon have a beautiful white Democratic stomach - at all events on the outside. Science is wonderful, and in this case noble. Skin is about all the Radicals and negroes have left us, and to be thus generous with it is certainly very magnanimous. - Abbeville Medium May, 23 ..

DIVERSIFY .- After tea we proceeded to interview the Squire on his mode of farming. We asked what was his specialty or market crop .--He replied, "I have no specialty, sir. I sell from this farm every article of production, from an egg to a horse." "To-day," said he, "I sold in town a beef weighing over six hundred pounds, and I sell a number of beaves every year. have not bought a horse in twenty-five years, always keep from six to ten on the farm, and sell one or two every year, of my own raising, at good prices. I sell bacon, pork, flour, wheat, oats, corn, mutton and lambs every year, and actually (he said with a hearty laugh) the old woman here, lately has been selling chickens and eggs in addition to her usual sales of butter, sweet and Irish potatoes, cabbage and turnips .- Raleigh Observer.

CURING CLOVER .- The proper time for curing clover is when about one-third of the blossome have turned brown. Clover should be exposed very little to the sun in the process of curing. Cut it down (not wet,) and haul it to the place for stacking as fast as it is cut; commence at once and lay one foot of, wheat straw at the bottom on poles, old rails, or brush, then one foot of clover as fast as hauled, alternating the lay-ers to the top of the stack, which should be of straw : thus put up, in a very short time it be-comes perfectly dured, and not findle to sport in feeding to stock of all kinds. The straw is enten as greedily as the clover, and the clover is kept of a bright and beautiful color all the time. Always use a ladder in stacking hay .- N. C.

THE LAST OF THE HARPERS .- New York, May 29 .- Fletcher Harper, of the firm of Harper Brothers, died this morning of gastric fever .-He was the last surviving member of the firm of four brothers who founded this well known publishing house. At the time of his death he was in his 72d year.

Der A new way of getting up a Club for a County paper has lately been discovered : Ten men get together and throw in twenty cents apiece. The paper is ordered to be addressed to one of them. They "take turns" in sending to the Post office for it, and on the day of its arrival they all meet together and one of the Club reads the paper out loud to the others. They also take turns in reading. The one that reads keeps the paper, so that the family of each subscriber (?) gets a paper to read every ten weeks. The plan is found so economical in time and money that in one neighborhood they are trying to get ten more to join the club so as to reduce the price to ten cents each and make the labor of going to the Post office and reading the paper come lighter on all.

Besides, we are compelled to have a change of diet, and the Paper Maker and Printers say it is absolutely necessary for them to have something to season the hope we have been feeding them on. for them to do, under the circumstances, They seem now as full of enthusiasm for "Hampton Home Rule and Reform," as they were during the campaign, and if they don't vote exactly as we think they should, we believe they act upon the conscientious belief that they vote for the best interests, of the State and the democratic party. We will have our own opinions, but we don't presume to say our judgment is superior to that of a majority of the Legislature.

While we have complained-justly, we think of the management of the Spartanburg Union and Columbia Railroad, we have a great attachment for it. It has received the fostering care of this county from the time the first move was made to build it, and it is natural for our people to have a more than ordinary liking for it. In its prosperity we took pride, inthe advancement of its interest we contributed our money, and in its misfortunes it has our sympathies. During the past week it has met with two very serious lossss by fire, amounting, it is supposed, to over $30,000. First the depot at Strothers, with all its contents, was consumed ; supposed to be the work of an incendiary ; then the terrible fire on Sunday, sweeping away its work shops, with all its valuable machinery, tools and materials, the fine large depot, containing a large quantity of merchandize, fixtures, old records. &c .- the actual value of which not at present known We sincerely sympathize with the owners in of Christianity ! their severe losses.

oriry of the colored people worked faithfully at the fire last Sunday and did valuable services in saving dwellings and stores threatened by the flying sparks. We cannot name them all, but most of their names are recorded and they will be kindly remembered, whenever opportunity offers to benefit them, by the white citizens. Among the most conspicuous workers, of them all was Mary Davis, who we are told, worked manfully, in carrying water and removing goods until so overcome by the heat she had to be carried from the street.

Under the Jewish despensation, usury was expressly forbidden, and is repeatedly spoken of in the Old Testament Scriptures as being on a plane with crimes of the most abominable type. And just here we recommend, to those who have sufficient enterest in the matter to do so, to read the first portion of the 5th Chapter of Nehemiah, as presenting a case singularly coincident with the condition of things just now prevailing in South Carolina. Usury was distinctly forbidden to the Jews-God's chosen people-under pain of His express displeasure. "He is the same, yesterday, to-day and forever." Christianity is Judaism ennobled and purified. All civilized peoples owe all that is most conducive to the welfare and happiness of the human race, in their relations as individuals, communities, and nations, to the spirit of Christianity. It is allpervading, all-enfolding, so to Speak, like the very atmost here we breathy ; though its influences, like that of the atmosphere itself, is enjoyed by thousands who take no cognizance whatever of the source of the bleasings which they enjoy. Nevertheless, it exists in all jter poor. wonderful powers' No candid person will deny that the whole teaching of Christ, which consti-tutes Christianity, is directly opposed to usury and extortion ... Is it possible, as has been asserted, that the Legislature of South Carolina. has no right to legislate against a form of oppression which is directly opposed to the spirit

In France, during the reign of Napoleon Bo. naparte, who placed himself in a distinct altitude of friendship towards the Jews in his Empire. Nesent a Commission to them with 12 inquiries, which he asked of them to answer truthfully and fully, relative to the views which they held; of their relation to the Government under which they lived, and as to the extent to which the special features of Jewish polity were observed amongst themselves. The clavenik and twelfth questions related to the subject of usury. The answer was, that Jews had no hesitation in dealing with the "Gentiles" in what a Jewish authority considered a "shameful and dishonest traffic." The answer goes on to say, that the law forbidding usury towards a Jew, was intended for a people "who formed a State, and had a place among the Nations."

In Ergland, we ere told, the laws against usu ry, have been repealed. However that may be, and we are not posted upon this point, they certainly existed until recently, and the legal rate of interest there was what would have been considered absurdly low here, when our old law against usury was in force. We think it was about five per cent. Has not England been for several centuries one of the most prosperous countries in the world ? Her government-one of the best certainly, if not the best-never seems to have doubted for a moment as to their right to legislate upon the price of money .---

We are pleased to state that a large ma
