MISCELLANEOUS.

Philadelphia has more citizens of African descent than any other place in the country—the present number reaching 28,000. They support seventeen churches, worth $225,000, with a membership of 5440, and 1700 Sunday-schools. They have twelve or fifteen free schools, with a daily average attendance 22000. There are thirty-four negroes in the city whose combined wealth amounts to $1,358,000. The richest man is Stephen Smith, a lumber merchant. He owns seventy-five houses in fee simple, and is worth not less than $300,000; Harris Lindsey, a bounty broker during the war, is worth $250,000. Five artists and a number of excellent musicians receive distinguished mention. Among the latter is the "Black Swan." Mr. B. M. Brawn, eighty-four years and a resident of Dayton for the last thirty years, is undergoing the process of voluntary starvation. According to the Journal, of that city, he and his family assert that he has taken no food since the 28th of February. He feels no pain from his long fast, and asserts that he has no appetite. He is reduced to a skeleton, expects death, and is satisfied with the expectation; but believes that "guardian angels" have, by some spiritual essence, protracted his life.

HUMOROUS.

[FOR THE ORANGEBURG NEWS.] Bob Withers.

"Whoa! Jim! what on aith are you a roaring and taring about now, just subside now, will you. Thar now, Mister, that ar horse is jest a leetle of the best piece of horseflesh that ever mashed clay in Spring-time—jest 5 years old to a day, for Pap folded him, an he never made but one mistake in breaking him, and that thar was, that he larnt him to be too gentelike and fond of the family. You see, Mister, Pap had a homesomish kind of a way about him, as my Patsy says—and in a raising of things they would naturally take after him. That's the way he comed to git inter that scrape with Squire Morgan.—You see he went to the O. H. on special business, and thar, you know, they let hogs an sich cattle stray round town, to 'he disgust of the citizens.' Whoa! Jim. An Pap he filled the dimijohn an started home—now you see, Mister, right thar Pap missed it, the old fool, stand of letting the store-keeper put a stopper in the dimejohn he 'lowed as how he could hold the spirituous fluid in with his thumb, an the consequence was that Pap hadn't got five miles afore he was so overcome that he kinder had to git off his horse, an in doing so spilt in the road, what, after examination he found to be about half of the contents of the dimejohn, mixed up kinder promiscuously with fried eggs, ham, an mashed potatoes. Whoa! Jim—jest stand still will you—seems like you never will git done laugh-

"But, Bob, tell us about the scrape your father got into with Mr. Morgan." "Oh, yes! well, you see after Pap had taken a short nap of about 3 hours in the rain he felt a leetle better—but kinder obfuscated about the head and stomach, but howsomever he riz an started agin for home. Now, you know, Mister, Squire Morgan, he lives on the 4 Notch road, kinder up on the hill sorter like, with a turnip patch jest on the right, which always was notable for having good turnips in it. Well Pap says to himself, says he—I wonder if one of Squire Morgan's turnips wouldn't help me—an with that he puts down the bars an walks into the patch an pulls one an sits down on a stump to eat it—an right thar agin the dadratted old skunk overdid the thing for instead of jest eating the turnip an then leaving for home, he jest slid down rite side of the stump an whistled, 'hard times come agin no more'—when Squire Morgan hears it an comes to the door an says, says he—"Hello! Mister Withers, (that's Pap) please tell me what on aith are you a doing in my turnip patch a whistling of 'Hard times come agin no more'—an with that he jest steps out in the road where Pap's horse (that's Jim) was a standing, an Pap he made his way thar too, an then Squire Morgan he says to Pap, says he, 'I say Mister Withers what's that you've got in that ar dimejohn?' Says Pap, 'Vin-vin-egar, Squire.' 'An Mister Withers what's that you've got in that ar bag?' says the Squire. 'Why that's a pu-pup fur my son Bob,' says Pap. 'Why I never knew pups to grant like a hog Mister Withers,' says the Squire. 'Oh! that's a no-no-new spe-species,' says Pap. 'A new species, laws alive! jest lets see it, says the Squire; with that he cuts the string and out drapt a leetle white boar pig. 'Why, Mister Withers,' says the Squire. 'Jargon! Squire,' says Pap, 'I see how it is. Bob, (that's my son,) put some of my raising of corn in that ar bag, an I noticed that same pig a nosing around it, an I jest turned it wrong side out kinder like an shook the grain outen it, an laid it down to tend to some important business, an when I comed back it was a hangin on the pommel of my saddle, and I think it was the pup Bob told me to fetch him, jest rid off with it.' 'Well, now, that's all jest as clear as mud,' says the Squire. 'I sold that pig with its mate to Capt. Y—s, at the C. H., for 20 dollars; and jest tell me, Mr. Withers, how that ar pig got inter that ar bag, an how that ar bag got hitched to that ar pommel of that ar saddle?' 'Now you've got me, Squire,' says pap; without that ar pig got to rooting inter that ar bag for some more of that ar corn of my raising, an turned it kinder rightside out, an couldn't git out agin, an that ar notable family horse thar, Jim, seeing the fix he was in, jest slung him out the pommel of that ar saddle.' 'Whoa! Jim. You tarnation mischevous critter, you—whoa! I say, Mister, come out an see us. Patsy'll make you a hoe-cake. Can't you go now. Well, come soon—good by. Now Jim show the gentlemen how you can travel. Git up! A Notorious Ventriloquist. At the depot in Chicago, a few days since there was great excitement over a traveler's trunk. It seems that the baggage-master was about to check it, when a voice within exclaimed: "Let me out or I will smother here!" The baggage-master looked astonished for awhile, when the voice again exclaimed: "Will you let me out, or must I die in this enclosure?" "Hold on, I will look up the owner," said the baggage-master, and off he started in great haste, and in the meantime a large crowd of excited people had gathered around. He returned—the owner of the trunk could not be found: He was about to break the lock, when the voice quickly said: "Oh, don't do that; you will kill me. Here comes my master; but don't tell him I am smuggling my way." At this juncture a gentleman stepped up and claimed the trunk. "Is this your property, sir?" said the baggage-master. "Yes, sir, it is," replied the gentleman. "Well, sir, you are smuggling a man in it." "A man in my trunk! What do you mean?" "Voice in the Trunk.—"He means I must get out and pay my way." "Gentleman.—"How came you in my trunk?" "Voice.—"You put me in here yourself to avoid fare." "Gent.—"No, I did not." "Voice.—"You lie!" "Baggage-master.—"No use talking, sir; you must open that trunk." "Gent.—"Do you intend to insult me sir?" "Baggage-master.—"Not at all; but the trunk must be opened." "Voice.—"Yes, for God sake, let me out—I'm nearly dead." "Gent.—"To gratify you and the crowd, I will open the trunk." While the owner was adjusting the key to the lock, the crowd gathered around with the expectation of seeing a suffocated man; but their great astonishment when the lid was raised, the trunk contained nothing but the wardrobe belonging to Don Juan the Ventriloquist, who perpetrated the trick. The baggage-master took with a "sudden leaving," and the crowd shouted, "sold again." "Sure," said Patrick, rubbing his head with delight at the prospect of a present from his employer, "I always mane to do my duty." "I believe you," replied his employer, "therefore I make you a present of all you have stolen from me during the past year."—"Thank yer honor," replied Pat "and may all your friends and acquaintances trate you as liberally!"
