AGRICULTURAL, &C.

[From the Southern Cultivator.]

'The Scarlet Clover has been long cultivated in Southern France, as an excellent forage erop. Of late years it has been introduced in some of the more northern departments, where it has succeeded very well. It is no more sensible to frosts than the ordinary clover, espe-cially if sown early to become well rooted before winter, surviving at Roville, the rigorous winter of 1822-3, when winter vetches were completely destroyed. Since that date, however, some crops, of this plant have suffered considerably from winter frosts. We attribute this difference to a change of variety have replaced the kind then grown by a variety called at this Office.

HISKEY LABELS FOR SALE IN quantities to suit Purchasers. Apply

Late Scarlet Clover, which gives a stronge vegetados and a unice abundant product, but sibly the frosts of winter. The early sewings are those of which the success is most assured; thus in our climate, one ought not to pass the end of August before sowing is finished.

The most valuable property of this plant is that it may be cut in spring time fifteen days before other clover, and ordinarily even before ucern, It gives but one crop if cut when in bloom, which only happens where one has no need of green forage early in spring; but when it is cut before the heads appear, a second crop can be cut, but it will be weak unless the soil is strong. Strong soils will be found most profitable for all forage crops. It is not very difficult as to soils, but light sandy or gravelly soils suits it much better than clays or heavy loams.

This plant must be sown by itself and may succeed any cereal or other crop. Consumed green, it is a valuable forage, and it comes at a time when stock are not particular about green food; but it is inferior to clover whether used green or made into hay. One sows ordinarily, about sixteen pounds of clean seed per acre, or its equivalent in seed left in the head. The last method is preferred, as the seed is more sure to vegetate, probably because the envelope left on the seed preserves its moisture and facilitates vegetation. This plant likes a firm bottom; thus in a light soil not infested with weeds, it is thought better not to work it deeply after the preceding crop, but to prepare the surface merely, and then sow broadcast and harrow thoroughly. On some soils thorough harrowing is a quite sufficient preparation, but if foul the land must be ploughed, but not deeply, and thoroughly harrowed before and after sowing .- Translated from Mathieu de Dombasle.

To Destroy the Boll Worm.

We procured eighteen common sized dinner plates, into each of which we put half a gill of vinegar and molasses, previously prepared in the proportion of four parts of the former to one of the latter. These were set on small stakes or poles driven into the ground in the cotton field, and to each about three acres, and reaching a little above the cotton plant, with a six inch square board tacked on top to receive the plate. These arrangements were made in the evening soon after the flies had made their appearance. The next morning we found eighteen to twenty-five moths to each plate. The experiment was continued for five or six days, distributing the plates over the entire field, each day's success increasing, until the number was reduced to two or. three moths to each plate, when it was abandoned as being no longer worthy of the trouble. The crop that year was very little injured by the boll worm. The flies were caught in their eagerness to feed upon the mixture by alighting into it and being unable to escape. They were probably attracted by the odor of the preparation, vinegar, probably being an important agent in the matter. As the flies fed only at night, the plates should be visited late every evening the insects taken out, and the vessels replenished as the circumstances may require. I have tried the experiment with results equally satisfactory, and shall continue it until a better one is adopted .- The Farmer,

Growing Turnips With Corn.

Mr. Barnes, of Westmoreland, New York has a novel method of growing turnips with corn, which we do not remember to have seen described before. He plants his corn three feet four inches apart, each way, which makes four thousand hills to the acre, and manures the hill with well rotted manure. He uses about ten loads of manure to the acre, and while loading up the manure in the yard, turnip seed is scattered over the load two or three times, or, in other words, when a third of a load is put upon a wagon, a few seeds are sprinkled over it, and so on for every third of a load. The manure then is carted to the field, and placed in the rows where it is to be used, and the corn planted. He states by this method about every hill will have its turnip plant, which grows well with the corn, and yields at the rate of one hundred and fifty bushels to the acre, without any detriment to the corn erop. The turnip plants become firmly established by the time the corn is fit to cut, and after that make most of their growth, advancing with great rapidity. He says the turnsps do not interfere with the growing of pumpkins among the corn, if desired.

THE RIGHT WAY -The South Georgia Times says :- One of the most successful farmers we have ever known-a man who could not write his own name-made it a rule, from which he never varied, to plant one-thrid of his land in small grain, one-third in Indian corn, and the balance in cotton. Many years ago he settled in Wilkes county of this State. He grubbed for the money that bought him Trifolium Incarnatum, or Scarlet Clover, twenty-five acres of the poorest land in that county. He died rich, leaving a magnificent farm and numerous slaves. So much for systematic continued working, upon a sensible plan. Everybody admits the plan a sensible one, but few will work upon it. Our errors are not our deliberate judgment, but our
