The Ploughman.

Of all pursuits by man invented, The ploughman is the best contented; The calling's good, his profit high, And on his labor may rely...

Important Discovery.

The Charleston News thus notices the recent discovery of phosphated manures: For some time, the community have been started by rumors that a large supply of a superior quality of fertilizing material had been discovered near the city...

The deposits referred to extend along the banks of the Ashley River for miles, and consist of bones and other animal matter, solidified, until they have attained the consistency of soft stone. Some samples have been found to contain from 60 to 75 per cent. of pure phosphates...

Specimens of this marl or deposit were taken to Philadelphia and shown to the presidents and officers of the large fertilizing works in that city. They immediately attracted attention, as, on being subjected to a close analysis, they showed a very large per centage of phosphate of lime, and a mining and manufacturing company was at once organized...

The New Substitute for Cotton Planting.

We announced the other day the arrival from Mexico of Mr. Roel's, the introducer into American cultivation of the ramie, the new textile plant, which being perennial, growing from the roots from year to year, producing, after being well rooted, from two to four crops of 150 pounds of clear fibre per season...

He has brought with him a quantity of fresh and good root cuttings, which are for sale, as is advertised in this paper, at $90 per hundred, of one dollar each for a small quantity. It is easily and rapidly propagated. One man, in Mississippi, multiplied in eleven small root cuttings in four months of late summer, to one hundred. He has now approaching one thousand. Three thousand will plant an acre. The machine for cleaning the fibres of the ramie has been patented, and a number of machines will be at once put up. It is simple and easily worked, either by horse or steam power, and prepares the fibre from the stalk in twenty-four hours from time of cutting it, leaving it in long skeins, beautifully white. The ramie fibre is of similar texture, but superior to that known to commerce as Indian or Chinese grass, woven into grass cloth.

BROWN BREAD.—Among the receipts for brown bread, I find none which suits me any better than mine. I do not think sweetening improves the bread enough to pay for the molasses used. I prefer mixing at night. For two loaves I take five pints of Indian meal, nearly the same of rye, full two-thirds of a cup of yeast (I like "Raby's" way of making yeast very much), mix with warm water. In the extreme hot weather of last summer I took cold water. When I do not mix at night, I scald the Indian meal, and use warm water.
