"THEY CRY PEACE, PEACE, WHEN THERE IS NO PEACE."

They are ringing peace on my heavy ear— No peace to my heavy heart! They are ringing peace, I hear! I hear! Oh, God! how my hopes depart!

They are ringing peace from the mountain side: With a hollow voice it comes— They are ringing peace o'er the foaming tide. And its echoes fill our homes.

They are ringing peace, and the spring-time blooms Like a garden fresh and fair! But our martyrs sleep in their silent tombs, Do they hear that sound—do they hear?

They are ringing peace, and the battle-cry, And the bayonet's work are done, And the armour bright, they are laying by, From the brave sire to the son.

And the musket's clang, and the soldier's drill, And the tattoo's nightly sound; We shall hear no more, with a joyous thrill, Peace, peace, they are ringing round!

There women, still as the stifled air— On the burning desert's track, Not a cry of joy—not a welcome cheer— And their brave ones coming back!

There are fair young heads, in their morning pride, Like the lilies pale they bow; Just a memory left to the soldier's bride— Ah, God! sustain her now!

There are martial steps that we may not hear! There are forms we may not see! Death's muster roll, they have answered clear.

They are free! Thank God, they are free! Not a fetter fast, nor a prisoner's chain, For the noble army gone— No conqueror comes o'er the heavenly plain, Peace, peace to the dead alone!

They are ringing peace, but strangers tread O'er the land where our fathers trod, And our birthright joys, like a dream have fled, And Thou! where art Thou, oh, God!

They are ringing peace! not here, not here, Where the victor's mark is set; Roll back to the North its mocking cheer— No peace to the South-land yet!

A SAVANNAH LADY.

Amount of Seed Wheat for an Acre.

Every plant requires for its fair development an area of about 16 square inches, or a piece of ground 4 inches square. There are in an acre of land 43,560 square feet. Each square foot contains 9 of these 3 inch squares, hence is capable of sustaining 9 wheat plants; and so we have 392,040 as the number of wheat plants that will grow advantageously on an acre of good land. In a bushel of wheat with kernels of fair size, there are about 650,000 gains. If these be uniformly distributed over one acre, there will be about 15 kernels on every square foot, or a fraction more than 9 squares inches, or an area of 3 inches square, for each kernel. Did the wheat plant produce only one stalk and head, this would not be too thick. But as we may expect every plant to tiller, that is, produce from 1 to 5, or 10, or more stems, if all these kernels should grow, the straw would be so thick that the ears of wheat would be short and small, and the grain also of a diminutive size.

But, in practice, we find that there is a failure somewhere; for if we use no more seed the grain will stand thick enough on the ground. What, then, becomes of the seed? and how much must we use? Much depends on the size of the kernel, the number that will vegetate, the condition of the soil, and the manner of putting in the seed. Some kernels often are small of course less is required, and vice versa. If the grain has been threshed with a machine which has bruised the kernel, more seed is necessary than if thrashed with a flail or whipped out, which is the best way to thresh for seed. When it is sown with a drill, less seed will be required than if sowed broadcast. When the soil is rich, an acre will require less seed than if the ground is in a poor state of fertility, for the richer the soil is the more the plants will tiller. One bushel of good seed per acre, well put into a rich soil, is enough, making suitable allowances for imperfections alluded to.

It is advisable to increase the amount sometimes to 2 bushels per acre. Usually about 2 bushels is an advisable quantity. The plants have room to tiller when the seed is thin seeding will yield as much as thick.

Advices from the General state that Col. Wood and party, who went to Brattleboro, Vermont, for some six hundred Southern planters had met an enthusiastic reception.

GENERAL GRANT'S REPORT.—The New York Times thus comments on this document:

"There is nothing in military literature or history comparable with the report of Lieutenant-General U. S. Grant, which was published complete in the Times of yesterday. It is more compact than Caesar, more lucid than Jomini, more pugnacious than Napier."

"In nearly all cases Grant give confirmation to what was the popular judgement of the hour. Sherman, Sheridan, Schofield, and Thomas were the admired of the people, as they are the praise of Grant. With others as Banks and Gilmore, he is significantly silent. Rosecrans he speaks of rather harshly; Baldy Smith he treats severely, and with Butler he deals at once scornfully, and in a Western sense viciously. To Hunter he gives credit for various merits, while numerous officers of less eminence than these, are dismissed with significant or insignificant praise or blame. In some of these and other instances, it must be allowed the judgement of the country—less capable and less well informed, of course, than that of Gen. Grant, has heretofore differed from that officially put forth in this report. Gilmore was always a renowned name with thopeople; Baldy Smith had a reputation which was not diminished by his removal from service; Rosecrans stood for two years among the foremost names in the army of the Union; while on the other hand, we think that so far as public opinion was concerned, General Hunter only got credit for a minimum amount of soldierly capacity. Except with the political and personal partisans of General Butler we imagine that Grant's criticisms upon his military career will be considered severely just. Butler is charged with direct violation of orders in one case, with impertinent assumption in another, and again and again with the grossest incapacity in the management of his army, followed by the most damaging results; and he states that finally his request for his removal was peremptory. In all the judgements and estimates of action and character; however, General Grant is thoroughly unimpassioned and self-possessed; and if occasionally he uses vigorous language he generally leaves the impression that it is justified by fact.

THE PRESIDENT AND THE RADICALS.—The leading Republicans here are getting somewhat alarmed at the recent precipitate action of the House in choking down Mr. Maynard, of Tennessee, a thoroughly loyal man and a strong personal friend of the President. It is understood that Mr. Johnson has declared that he will not confer the offices at his disposal upon those who oppose his policy of reconstruction, nor will he appoint the friends of those opposing him in this policy.

The Republican leaders are, therefore, confronted with the loss of all Executive patronage, and it staggers them prodigiously, as there is scarcely a member who has not some favor to ask for his political friends. Already many of the members begin to manifest a change of front, and desire to be considered in any other attitude than that of hostility to the President.

It is to be hoped that this timely hint from the President may yet result in a coalition of the conservative Republicans and Democrats, sufficiently powerful to check the malignant spirit of the Radicals.—Washington correspondent New York News.

Artemus Ward says shooting isn't as popular in Nevada as it once was. A few years since, they had a dead man for breakfast every morning. A reformed desperado told me that he supposed he had killed men enough to stock a graveyard. "A feeling of remorse," he said "sometimes comes over me!" But I'm an altered man now I haven't killed a man for over two weeks! What'll yer poison yourself with?" he added, dealing a resonant blow on the bar.

LIGHTNING RODS.—Lardner states in his lectures that the temple at Jerusalem stood one thousand years, and was not struck by lightning, though it was greatly exposed, from its elevation and position. He adds that its roof was covered with metal, and that numerous bars of steel and iron, with gilt points, were raised on its roof, and that the whole was connected by metallic water-pipes with large cisterns below. Thus it appears that the temple was protected on the very same principle, the discovery of which distinguished our own time.
