[FOR THE NEWS.]

CHRISTMAS SONG FOR 1865.

Air—Picardy.

Once Christmas had its Christmas sights,
Christmas junkets—gleeful nights,
When quip and joke went gaily round,
And mirth and pleasure did abound,
When song and prank flew all about,
But that has all—"gone up the spout"
In Carolina that's "gone and done,"
For here's no money—here's no fun,
'Tis now a dull and moping day,
We just pretend to laugh and play.
Oh Caro—Carolina
'Tis so from Pedee to Savannah!
Oh Caro—Carolina
'Tis so from Pedee to Savannah!

Search the world! You'd nowhere find,
Men more noble, brave, and kind;
Nor girls so lovely, sweet and fair,
Nor a land more sunny, bright and rare,
But Politicians who didn't know,
B from bull-foot,—Doll from Doe,
Drank deeply at the Extra—Session
And let bullies bully through "the question,"
So Christmas now's a moping day,
We just pretend to laugh and play,
Oh Caro—Carolina,
'Tis so from Pedee to Savannah!
Oh Caro—Carolina
'Tis so from Pedee to Savannah!

I truly wish that narry nigger,
Had been brought here to make "a figger,"
If the blacks were still in Africa,
'Twould be whiter here in Carolina,
'Twould better whiter, 'twould better blacks,
And mend the land of many cracks,
And those who brought them 'tis very clear,
Are now in H—, you know where,
And if Politicians don't take care,
They'll join them and the D—l there,
For Christmas is a moping day,
We just pretend to laugh and play.

Oh Caro—Carolina
'Tis so from Pedee to Savannah!
Oh Caro—Carolina
'Tis so from Pedee to Savannah!

EDOUARD GUILLAUME.

Brazil, Buenos Ayres, Uruguay and Paraguay.

The successful inauguration of the steamships between the United States and Brazil, again invites the attention of the commercial and general public to a portion of the world which this country has singularly neglected. These steamers, jointly subsidized by the United States and Brazil, place us in actual contact with the vast and fertile Empire of Brazil and the States in the Valley of the River Plate, and, by way of St. Thomas, with Venezuela and all the West Indies. The commercial and agricultural importance of Brazil and the River Plate countries is, after our own land, first in rank on the Western continent.

Brazil is a constitutional empire, the territories of which embrace an area of more than 3,800,000 square miles, containing according to estimates made in 1863, about 9,000,000 inhabitants, or more than half the population of South America. It is almost inter-tropical, but natural causes give it a coolness and salubrity unknown to other tropical lands. Slavery exists, but in a much milder form than formerly with us, and no rights are denied the free men of color. The feeling of the Emperor and the people are opposed to the longer existence of African bondage, though by their mild laws one million of slaves have become liberated since 1850. Government intends now to take the matter in hand for its final extinction. As it is, every slave taken to Brazil becomes immediately free. The commerce of the empire is equal to that of all the rest of South America. In 1864, Brazil sold to the world $70,000,000, mostly in coffee, sugar, cotton, hides, India rubber, &c., and she bought of the world $65,000,000; the lion share falling to England, she having three lines of steamers there. We hope, by the new facilities, to recover our commerce, which is proportionally smaller than it was thirty years ago. The steamships of the new line touch at St. Thomas, W. I. Para (on the Amazon,) Pernambuco and Bahia, and have their southern terminus at Rio de Janeiro, 5000 miles from the point of departure in the United States.

There are English and French steamers twice a month from Rio to Montevideo and Buenos Ayres, but these will in no wise aid American commerce in the River Plate countries, where the American commercial interests have been better maintained than in Brazil. It is hoped that something will be done by our Government to extend steam facilities under the American flag from Rio to Buenos Ayres, or our commerce will suffer.

The Spanish-American country, called the Argentine Confederation, better known to us (by the name of its capital) Buenos Ayres, is republican in its form, and is modeled after the United States. It consists of fourteen States or Provinces, with an area of 780,000 square miles, mostly consisting of prairie and rolling lands. Its commerce is chiefly in the products of the vast herds of cattle, sheep and horses, which are reared on the fertile pampas. In return for hides and wool we are driving a profitable commerce in lumber, cotton goods, flour, hardware, &c., &c. Railroads are pushing out from Buenos Ayres in every direction, while the majestic La Plata, the third river in the New World, communicates with Paraguay and with the interior of Brazil. On this broad stream, two hundred and forty miles from Buenos Ayres, is the growing city of Rosario, whence is building to Cordova, two hundred and seventy miles away, the great Argentine Central Railway, under William Wheelwright, of Newburyport, Mass. This road will do much to open up the rich interior, and finally will be extended across to the Pacific.

Uruguay, of which the capital is Montevideo, is a small Spanish-American republic, of 72,000 square miles area, and containing 218,000 inhabitants. It has a growing commerce with the United States. It is now entering upon a new career, and with peace in her fertile borders, will be one of the most desirable countries in the world for settlement. Many Englishmen and Italians have gone thither for purposes of trade and sheep farming on her rich rolling prairies.

Paraguay, the "inland Japan" of America (having in Lopez a Tycoon more despotic than ever sat upon a throne in Jeddah) is now going through a trial from the severe and just castigation she is receiving at the hands of Brazil, Buenos Ayres and Uruguay, that will probably exorcise the evil spirit of despotism which, for two generations, has ruled her. The last news from South America shows the Allies completely triumphant, and before long the rich soil and other great natural resources of Paraguay will be a field that will amply repay commercial and agricultural enterprise.

Now, in the supply of these great South-American countries, Philadelphia should not be behind-hand. We manufacture much that these lands need, and, in some respects, we are better situated for this commerce than any other city of the Union.—Philadelphia Ledger.

It is understood that Ben. Butler purposes shortly to appear in pamphlet or newspaper form in reply to the able report of Lieutenant-General Grant—a document which took so well with the House of Representatives that two hundred and fifty thousand copies were ordered printed. Mr. Butler proposes to go down deep, to take Grant from West Point or before and follow him up to Lieutenant-Generalcy. The American public will be treated to a history of Grant from a historian who, if not impartial, will have the merit of exhausting his subject.

A correspondence of the Buffalo Commercial Advertiser, writing from Savannah, speaks of the miseries which threaten thousands of poor homeless negroes, unless they betake themselves to some organized system of labor, and adds, "I am reliably informed by an old resident here that thirty thousand of the blacks have already died since the close of the war in this city and surrounding country alone." Similar accounts come from various quarters.

The Northern papers mention that, owing to Tuesday, the 12th inst., being Cabinet day, very little interest centered about the White House. Generals Grant, Howard, Logan, and Kilpatrick had interviews with the President, as did Senators Wilson and Guthrie. The Hon. Daniel S. Dickinson and Confederate ex-Secretary of the Treasury Trevelyan were also there.
