In consequence of the pressure of the times many of the hardy yeomanry of the North are unable to obtain the employment which they seek. In the South, on the contrary, the planters need the labor which the negroes frequently refuse to give. Yet a premium is to be put upon laziness and worthiessness among the negroes of the South by the illegal division of the moneys raised from the laboring classes of the North, and this too, to aid the fortunes of a political party composed of a minority.
