NEW SOUTH CANE MILL.

THE GEARING is cast separate from the rollers, and is made very heavy, with three clutches on each Wheel, which in corresponding ones in each Roller, being away with all keys and the consequent danger of splitting the Wheels when they are driven too tight; also enabling any one to take the mill apart by removing four bolts.

THE MAIN ROLLS ARE FLANGED at top and bottom, preventing the cane from passing on or down.

THE SHAFTS are of Steel, and have returned bearings. The Rolls are Lathe turned, with serrated faces, enabling a regular and constant feed to be maintained.

HEAVY BEARINGS—Both top and bottom journals run in brass bearings, making the mill work smoothly, easily and durably. The step boxes have all chambers which are sufficient oil to run a long time, and so constructed as to prevent any oil from getting into the juice.

THE OCEAN GREYHOUND.

Enormous Expense of Running Great Steamships.

The cost of a single round trip across the Atlantic and back of one of the great ocean steamships must be from $20,000 to $50,000, the last figure being often too small for such a boat as the Teutonic of the City of New York, or the Columbia. The former vessel turned into smoke full $7,500 worth of coal on her last passage here, or about $1,200 each day. If she had been going to Liverpool, instead of from that city, the American coal that would have been used in getting the same amount of power would have cost about $10,000. Steamship men have been discussing last week's ocean race claim that the Teutonic must have burnt nearly $10,000 of Welsh coal anyhow, and are not inclined to accept any other estimate. The Columbia, on her record beating journey across the ocean, averaged 345 tons daily, or twenty tons more than the Teutonic's officers say she consumed, while the Inman offers admit that the City of New York burnt 350 tons of coal a day on her last voyage.

The coal bill, of course, is the biggest item of expense in fitting out a crack steamer for a trip across the Atlantic, though the "feed bill" as the purser call it, makes a good second. Every hour taken off the record means a decrease in this important item, too, for it is estimated that four pounds of meat are consumed per minute on a voyage with an average summer passenger list.

On some steamers the "feed bill" exceeds the coal bill, but not on the greyhounds that make the journey in six days or better. All the boats are provisioned for a fifteen days' trip, so that in the event of an accident the bill of fare will not be sighted. The steward makes his purchases after scanning the passenger list the day before sailing.

The slaughter houses along the Hudson get the order for meat thirty six hours before the vessel sails, and they go to work at once killing the cattle. A full passenger list would compel the steward to put into the refrigerators about 8,000 pounds of fresh beef and half that amount of mutton, 500 pounds of corn beef, 600 fowls, 250 chickens, 80 turkeys, 60 broods, 1,500 pounds fish, 2,000 pounds ham and 500 of bacon. Besides these there are proportional amounts of other kinds of meats, so that nothing will be missing from the table that could be found on the menu of any first-class hotel on land.

The meat disposed of, the ship's steward gives out his orders for the other necessities. Ten tons of potatoes go into big bins that look like caverns, and truck loads of other vegetables are dumped beside them. Five or six hundred quarts of milk are sent on board the morning of sailing, together with about 9,000 eggs and 900 pounds of butter. For obvious reasons these are not delivered until the last moment. A single trip uses up 250 pounds of tea also, double that amount of coffee and 1,200 pounds of sugar. Besides these staple articles of the table there are dozens of dainties sure to be called for by epicurean passengers, and which the steward cannot afford to be "just out of."

There are four regular meals on shipboard every day, but the tables are always supplied with fruits, nuts, etc. These disappear so rapidly that the steward estimates three oranges daily per passenger, two and one half apples and two lemons. The bread, biscuits and pies are all made on board the vessel, and several tons of flour disappear on a voyage.

June or early July lists of cabin passengers will knock the necks of champagne bottles faster than any hotel's inmates. These are the months when wealthy folks go abroad. If half a dozen good story tellers or men of the world are on board, too, the steward never sails with less than a hundred cases.

About four thousand bottles of ale and porter will disappear on the same journey, 2,500 of mineral waters and 300 of other kinds of drinks.

A profit is made on the sale of these, however, and it helps to lessen the net cost of the steward's requisition on the company. Nevertheless, on all first-class lines it stands next to the coal bill in size. The cost of manning the vessel comes next. The big 'uns average 300 men all told. Their pay ranges from $400 or $500 a month for the captain to $15 for the "helpers." Thirty dollars might be a fair average. That would mean $9,000 for the 300 men per month, and five vessels average more than a round trip each month of the year.

These three items of coal, food, crew, therefore, foot up over $35,000 for a swift journey across the Atlantic and back. In addition to these, however, the cost of maintaining docks on both sides of the ocean, offices in all the principal cities, and making repairs for the vessels eats up another $10,000 during every voyage, and often more than that.

Where does the money come from? That it does come in is evidenced by the prosperity of nearly all the ocean lines. The Hamburg American Company paid 12 per cent on its $10,000,000 capital stock last year, and the White Star is said to have done as well. The French line has always been a great money earner. The agent of one line said the other day that a full cabin list on the crack steamers paid all the expenses. This means four or five hundred passengers who average $900 apiece in fare and money spent on shipboard. That would be nearly $40,000 for the saloon cabin alone. Some of the boats average 700 stateroom passengers westward bound at $20 each, which would represent an additional $14,000,000. Freight on the "Greyhounds" seldom run over $8,000, because passengers take up all the room.

Then Uncle Sam and Queen Victoria make up a purse of $2,500 for carrying the mails on each voyage. The totals would then read: From cabin passengers, $40,000; stateroom, $15,000; freight, $8,000; mails, $2,500; total, $65,500. This would be for only a single trip, too, from Liverpool to New York, and if the vessel were equally full going back the companies would be coining money. But the figures given above represent the highest that are obtained by any of the lines, and they are often cut in two during nine months of the year. At other times the passenger list is short, and not more than two hundred names are on it. They have to be taken care of as well as if double the number were on board, however, and it is this that cuts up the big profit made by all the lines in the summer season. The loss of such a vessel as the Oregon, which was sunk in DETEST advertising bargains, bargains, bargains, when there is a really no bargain, but simply a trap to catch the unwary. I bid competition. I carry everything by storm. My unequalled prices paralyze competition. I have put the knife in Summer Goods, and they are selling rapidly. These prices tell the tale, such as $1.50 Flouring marked down to 90c. So, Lard to 25c, and all other goods in proportion. If there is any person who can spare the money, and who does not believe this opportunity, they are simply standing in their own light, and they are blind to their own interests. Do not take any chances of waiting for a week, but come at once. I will pay big interest to buy now for next Summer. 15c Hamburg Edging at 75c. 25c Hamburg at 125c. THE THIRD DISTRICT.

GAFNEY CITY, August 19.—W. Russell, the famous Greenback leader and the present postmaster at Anderson, passed here this afternoon on his way to Washington. He seemed in a happy frame of mind, but rather uncommunicative on the subject of his visit to the Capital. He said, however, that it was of considerable importance to the people of South Carolina. "You may say this," he added, "that I will be the next Congressman from the 3d district. I am just as sure to succeed Judge Cottrah as the sun shines, and there is no power that can prevent it save from Heaven. The race among the Democrats in my district is very badly mixed and I am thoroughly confident that I will be elected in the 'idea of November.'" This was all Mr. Russell would say, preferring, he stated, to keep out of the public prints.—News and Courier.

An abscess that developed from a diseased tooth caused the death of ex-Postmaster Bell, of Shelbyville, this evening. The abscess grew so remarkably rapidly, filling his mouth and finally causing death by suffocation. Mr. Bell was the largest man in Shelbyville and weighed 350 pounds.

— GEORGE NETHLE, a colored man in this County, came to his death last Saturday from going into an old well in which was gas. A lighted candle had been sent down two or three times, and each time it went out, but Nethle thought he would risk going down anyhow. He lived only a short time afterwards. If he had attached a large bush to the well rope and let it down and up a few times he would have cleared the well of the dangerous gas. His death only serves as a warning to other equally careless people.—Abbeville Press and Banner.
